Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, June 9; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, June 7; Calcutta, June 6.

The news of the week in India was not of much importance. Bombay was expecting the monsoon at any moment, and the weather in the plains was most oppressive. Lord Lytton had returned to Simla after a week's holiday at Mashobra, and a day for the first meeting of the Legislative Council had been fixed upon. Sir Philip Wodehouse was to leave Mahableshwar shortly for Puna, where visitors were already beginning to arrive. The Duke of Buckingham still held his Court at Utakamand. He is not expected to return to Madras until the cold weather has set in.

The cholers was beginning to abate in Kashmir. In the week under 'review there had been seventy-nine seizures and forty-six deaths at Srinagar, against 217 seizures and 106 deaths in the previous week. From the surrounding districts also better tidings were coming in. A new outbreak of the disease was reported from Meerut. But the saddest tale of all comes from Golwood, a small place lying near the sea midway between Bombay and Surat, on the line of the Bombay and Baroda Railway. The officers of the company have been wont to regard it as a kind of sanitarium, as it possessed many of the advantages enjoyed by Tithal and Balsar, the recognised sanitaria of Gujarat. Here the guards of the goods trains used to change, and many of them had their dwellings near the station. Golmood seems to have contained not more than 200 souls in all. In the first days of June the cholers, which was preying around Ahmadabad, suddenly entered this village, and slew victims right and left. On the 4th no fewer than fifty-seven people died; on the next day twenty-three; and twenty more died on the 6th. The next day again there were eighteen new cases, of which three-fourths were reported hopeless. The survivors fled to the adjacent hills, where they found little food and less shelter. Such was the terror and helplessness of the people when the outbreak occurred, that they did not bury their dead, and bodies lay rotting in the streets for two whole days.

The misery of the sufferers in Golwood was heightened by the fact that there was no doctor at hand. A Mr. H. B. Warton, permanent way inspector on the Bombay Baroda and Central India line, has a house close to the village, and to him, as the only European in the station, the people at once ran for help. He happened to have a small supply of cholera mixture and chlorodyne, but it was soon exhausted among so many applicants, and Mr. Wharton "could do nothing but listen helplessly while tales of death were being told him on every side by panicstricken people." This gentleman described the outbreak as the most virulent he had ever seen in the course of a long experience. He saw people die within thirty minutes from the moment of attack. When a death took place in any house, the inhabitants ran out into the street and left the body; only a few carried their dead into the open air, but then they fled. Seven bodies were found lying near the offices of the Railway Company. Many people, while running away, were seized with the pangs of the disease, and died where they fell in the streets; nobody stopping to give them help. It appears that Dr. Hewlett, the Sanitary Commissioner, set off at once for Golwood to make inquiries into the cause of the sudden epidemic. That cause seems to have been found in the filthy state of the village. It was admirably situated by the seashore, but the inhabitants were perfectly regardless of sanitation; and filth, rotten vegetation, and stagnant water abounded everywhere.

THE Mohammedans of Bombay, on hearing of the death of the Sultan of Turkey, expressed their desire to hold muezzins, or assemblies for offering up prayers. The Kazi however withheld his sanction, as Abdul Aziz had committed suicide, and permitted only the performing of the minor ceremonies called mulids.

THE Indian papers mention the death at Nowgong, in Bundel-kand, of Captain G. T. Blowers, the Boundary Settlement Officer in that province. Captain Blowers had only lately been transferred from the Bhil Agency at Mainpur to the Settlement work, and the great heat in camp during May brought on heat apoplexy.

Another death recorded is that of Major Swinton, of the 1st Madras Light Cavalry, which took place at Sikandarabad on the night of June 3, in consequence of a fall from his horse. The deceased officer, whose commission dates from 1856, was returning from his "rounds" when his horse probably shied at something in the moonlight and threw him. He was found at any rate soon afterwards with his skull fractured, and he lived only a few minutes. The sad occurrence had cast a gloom over the station, where Major Swinton was much respected.

Aw Agricultural Conference has assembled at Simla under Mr. Hume, of the Agricultural Department. Messrs. Cotton, from Bengal; Buck, from the North-West; Mackworth and Young, from the Punjab; and several others, have joined the conference. Arrangements will be made for the improvement of interprovincial trade statistics.

THE Government of India have expressed to the Madras Government their approbation of the prompt measures taken to quell the outbreak at Bastar, and have also asked that Government to convey their thanks to their several officers of the Vizagapatam district for their valuable services on that occasion.

The stupid and irritating system of moving regiments continually from place to place in time of peace appears to be enforced in India as well as in this country. We note for instance, that the 66th Foot is to be moved from Puna to Disa to relieve the 83rd. As the 66th only left Belgam in January of this year, on a march of over three hundred miles to Puna, it does seem hard that after less than a year of that station they are to be hurried off to Disa. They were only two years at Belgam, which is a year less than the usual time. Marching is a very good thing for a corps when it does not come too often, but it is cruelly expensive, if too often repeated, for the married men, especially those with families.

ORDERS have been received at Sikandarabad, from the Government of India, to stop the further erection of the double storied barracks there. It is also decreed that whatever buildings are still required for the new cavalry barracks at North Trimalgiri are to be constructed of bricks instead of stone.

It is said that Colonel G. Ward will take the bonus this year, Lieutenant-Colonel Ryall succeeding him in command of the 8th Bengal Cavalry.

THE Calcutta Statesman moots a question which must have often suggested itself to 'readers of Indian topics. It appears that so far back as 1854 Colonel Cotton insisted that India might manufacture sea-water salt of the greatest purity, in any quantity, at a cost of about four annas per ton. Colonel Cotton's suggestions were taken up and dwelt upon several years ago by the Indian Economist, and the Statesman again calls attention to the same subject. India, it seems, is importing from 250,000 to 300,000 tons a year of Cheshire salt, at a cost of about thirty shillings to thirty-six shillings per ton. If it be true that salt as good can be made on the spot for sixpence a ton, it is evident that India is needlessly throwing away every year £300,000 to £400,000 upon the imported salt. Colonel Cotton tells us that the native mode of manufacturing salt is open to the same objections as many other native processesviz., that they are carried on upon too small a scale, and without capital. The expense of raising the sea water and conveying it some distance inland to proper reservoirs precluded the people from attempting it, although liable to have their whole deposits destroyed by floods, with the pans at sea-level. 'I hat Cheshire should be supplying India with salt, does on the face of it seem absurd. If it could be practically proved that any amount of excellent salt could be made in India at a very small fraction of the cost of the imported article, no regard for the interests of Cheshire could outweigh the benefits that would thence accrue to the people of India, who are debarred by the present price of salt in their markets from consuming enough of it to keep themselves and their cattle in proper health.

ACCORDING to the Times telegram of June 25 from Calcutta, at the first meeting of the Legislative Council, held at Simla on Thursday, June 22, leave was given to introduce some Bills of minor importance. It is generally believed that no important measures will be passed during the Simla session, after the severe comments of the Home Government, on the passing of the Tariff Act at Simla last year. It is settled that the Viceroy shall make a tour of the North-West Frontier in November. Till then the question of annexing Siud to the Punjab will remain open. It is rumoured that the Viceroy will, at the same time, consider the propriety of putting a high officer in charge of the whole Punjab and Sind frontier under the immediate orders of the Supreme Government. The Secretary of State has authorised the Viceroy to deal with the sanitary and water-supply scheme for Simla. The proposed undertaking will lead to further outlay than the £100,000 already agreed to be provided by the Government and the Municipality in equal shares.

From the same source we learn that the Calcutta and Madras Mohammedans, at the suggestion of the Prince of Arkot, have held funeral ceremonies on account of the death of the Sultan of Turkey, and have also voted an address to the new Sultan, acknowledging him as their leader, which was forwarded through the Turkish Consul. The Bombay Mussulmans are said to have taken a similar step.

THE present Calcutta Municipality held its last meeting on Thursday, June 22. The new Act which introduces the elective principle would come into force on the 1st of July. The change, says the Times correspondent, is regarded with apathy, as the Act was carried with marked disregard to public opinion. Few voters have come forward for registration, and a decided absence of European or respectable Native candidates is expected.

WITH regard to the Khelat Mission last week's telegrams reported that everything was going well, and the Pioneer declared that the relations between the Khan and Major Sandeman were most friendly. The worst obstacles to pacification were being removed, and arrangements for the permanent opening of the Bolan Pass nearly perfected. This news however is modified by a Times telegram of July 2 from Calcutta, which states that an affair has occurred in Khelat which may retard the peaceable settlement of the Khelat difficulty. The Jellawans, or Lowland Chiefs, going to meet Colonel Sandeman, under the Khan's "safe conduct," were attacked by the Khan's troops. It is said that the attack was owing to a mistake, the troops being unaware of the "safe conduct." There is reason to hope that the Jellawans will overlook the mistake and accept Colonel Sandeman's mediation. The Sarawans, or Highlanders, are already reconciled to the Khan; but complete reconciliation of the discordant elements in Khelat will be the only effectual means of keeping the Bolan Pass open, and unless this be effected Colonel Sandeman's mission can hardly be called a success.

THE Afridis, who still give trouble on the Punjab frontier, lately made a raid on the cattle of the British villagers, but retreated when the troops from Fort Mackeson turned out. The blockade continues, but apparently without effect. The Kohat Pass road is still stopped. Indian papers talk of an autumn campaign against them, but many persons believe the report to be unfounded, as it is more likely that the Government will continue the blockade, hoping to starve the Afridis into submission. According to a still later telegram the blockade continues, but the Afridis show no signs of submission, and, apparently, nothing short of actual force will bring them to reason. From this step the Government is said to be still averse. Something, perhaps, may be done after the visit of the Viceroy and the Commander-in-Chief to the frontier and the inspection of the posts in November.

It appears that the road from Darjiling through Sikhim, towards Tibet, is completed to within twenty miles of the Chola Pass. It is expected that this will greatly increase the Tibet trade, the present estimated value of which is—exports, £16,450; imports, £7,506.

WE hear that Sir J. Strachey's departure on leave has been postponed till the end of July, owing to an attack of measles. He is coming home to consult an oculist, and may not return.

According to latest telegrams it is rumoured that the Viceroy will hold a grand darbar at Delhi on returning from the Hills. Sir George Couper assumes the office of Acting Lieutenant-Governor of the North-west on the 18th inst. He is a Bengal civilian, and has been for some time Chief Commissioner of Oudh, where he first made a reputation as Sir Henry Lawrence's secretary during the early days of the Mutiny. The Viceroy's choice is generally approved. Mr. Inglis, who succeeds Sir George in Oudh, was a member of the Legislative Council. If Sir J. Strachey's health prevents his return, these appointments will, doubtless, become permanent.

From the same source we learn that the settlement of Patiala affairs causes Government some difficulty, as the Treaty with the Sikh States of Patiala, Nabha, and Jhind provides that, if there be a minority in one of them, the Viceroy shall appoint a Council of Regency, acting in concert with the other two Princes. Nabha and Jhind have already nominated candidates, and desire the dismissal of the present Ministry. The British Government considers this most undesirable. Thus, as matters stand, the interests of the Patiala State apparently point one way and our Treaty obligations another.

THE latest China news telegraphed from Calcutta states that the Yunnan Commissioners held several sittings before Mr. Grosvenor arrived, and collected much evidence, copies of which were sent to Sir T. Wade. It is stated that Lisitahi and the Chief Magistrate of Moman have been found guilty of plotting Mr. Margary's murder. Mr. Grosvenor's mission, however, left at Rangoon an impression that the real culprits are still undetected. Even if the primary object has failed, it is thought that the Mission may still have important results.

A FORTNIGHT ago the Times Correspondent telegraphed an account of a frightful outbreak of cholera at Golwood, near Bombay. The official inquiry now seems to prove that the accounts given by the Bombay papers were much exaggerated. The Collector of Tanna states that there were only twenty-five deaths in a population of 850, and not 100 out of 200 as asserted, and denies that the village was ever deserted through panic. Cholera continues very prevalent throughout the country, especially in the Central Provinces, in Orissa, and in the Terai near Darjiling. A strict quarantine is observed round the latter sanitarium.

VERY curious presents have sometimes been made to royal personages, but that which Sir Salar Jung is said to have offered our Queen the other day at Windsor in token of his allegiance is perhaps the most curious of all. If he had offered her an elephant as a symbol of her imperial dignity, the compliment at least would have been appreciable enough. But what was her Majesty to make out of an alligator, except that alligators have an unpleasant way of eating up everybody who comes within reach of their cruel jaws? No wonder that her Majesty "returned" the ill-omened monster, after going through the ordeal of "touching" it. We hope, for Sir Salar Jung's credit, that the papers have misreported him when they tell us that he presented the Queen with a "muggur." Perhaps the author of the statement is not answerable for a printer's error. are inclined to think that the word, as written by him, was "nuzzur," the phonetic form of nazr, which means of course the present offered by a subject to his master, or by a vassal to his overlord. The offering of such a gift is often a mere matter of form, as it was no doubt in the present instance, when her Majesty merely touched it in token of her good will, and then restored it to the giver.

ONE or two of the Indian papers lately indulged in some very disparaging remarks on Colonel C. M. MacGregor's bold attempt to penetrate into Central Asia through Afghanistan. His efforts to gain new and important information regarding the Persian and Afghan frontiers were ridiculed and misrepresented, and the Indian Government were commended for cutting short the career of a madman whose proceedings endangered the very interests he pretended to uphold. A private letter of sympathy to a poor Russian was magnified into a high political offence; the wearing of uniform on the Colonel's travels became the subject of a sneer at his official pretensions; and several other of his sayings and doings were misreported or misunder-stood. The fact is that Colonel MacGregor did nothing to justify and little to palliate the attacks made upon him in certain quarters. It is true indeed that a standing order of the Indian Government forbids every officer from entering Afghanistan without special leave, and Colonel MacGregor might fairly have been attacked for disregarding that order. But to stop him as it were in mid-career, when he was gaining valuable information at his own risk and cost for the Government, was an act of lawful authority of which the Home Government of India, if we are rightly informed, by no means approves. It was at any rate no fool's errand which sent Colonel MacGregor across the Indian frontier. For five years before his last journey he had been employed in compiling all the information available about Central Asia, and none, therefore, could know better than he did what kind of information was still needed. In his journey through Persia he gained all the requisite knowledge concerning the resources and roads of the districts adjoining the Western frontier of Afghanistan, and but for his sudden recal he would have achieved a like success on the Northern frontier. It was not from any idle freak, but in pursuance of a definite plan, that he undertook, at his own cost, a journey of many hundreds of miles in a strange country, a journey involving great and prolonged hardships, as well as the risk of being caught by roving Turkmans. He had three narrow escapes from capture during a ride of three thousand miles; but the story of his being escorted by Afghans back to Tehran is no better grounded than that of his asking Mr. Thomson's leave to go to Herst. He never went to Tehran nor mw the British Minister there till four months after his visit to Herri. In his letter to the Governor of Herat Colonel MacGregge simply asked for "accommodation suitable to his rank," and tig-undress uniform which he proposed to wear was the only respectable clothes he had. Perhaps the uniform gave his journey an official colour, and so invited the interference of the Indian Government. The fuss made by Mr. Thomson and the Indian Foreign Office about his letter to the distressed Russian has since been described by the Indian Council as "childish," and its absurdity was shown by the poor man's answer: "I have myself at your feet; send me a pound of tea." This indeed is a fair sample of the mountains of wild comment to which Colonel MacGregor's molehills have given birth.

THE deeds of one of Colonel Montgomerie's native explorers have been duly chronicled in the June number of the Geographical. Pandit Nain Singh is the first of his class whose make has been made public; he and his fellows having hitherto for prodent reasons been known to us only as "Pandits No. I., II., III.," and so forth. As Nain Singh is about to retire on his pension, there may be no danger in thus revealing his name. His heat and most successful journey happened in 1873, when he accorpanied Sir D. Forsyth's mission to Yarkand. In July of that year he entered Tibet as a Lama bound on a pilgrimage to Rudok. His journey eastward took him within sight of the northern Himalayas, through a long chain of lakes theretofore unknown; round the great lake of Tengri-Nor, which he less made better known, and thence south to Lhasa, where for fear of detection he stayed only two days. From Lhasa he made his way southward among lofty highlands by Tawang into Assam, having explored altogether 1,200 miles of new country, and taken hundreds of observations which geographers seem to rate as highly as the hardihood which carried him safely through his daring course. This journey of nine months, from Ladach across the whole plateau of Tibet to Assam, is memorable net only for the results achieved, but also as the first which las ever been accomplished by a trained explorer. training Nain Singh is due chiefly to Colonel Montgomerie, but the qualities displayed by him in carrying out his task would have done honour to any Western traveller. Twenty years ago Nain Singh began his career under the Messrs. Schlagiptwest; but from 1858 to 1863 he was content to work as a Government schoolmaster in his native Kamaon. Then, however, Colonel Montgomerie seems to have found him out, and in 1865 Nair: Singh set forth on his famous journey to Lhasa, which resulted in winning for him a gold watch from the Geographical Society. This success emboldened him, in 1867, to visit the gold mines of Thok Jalung in Tibet; and now he retires from the service on a well-earned pension, after having "crowned the edifice" of his labours by one of the greatest feats of scientific exploration done in our day.

Among the indirect results of the Prince's visit to India : a collection of sketches now exhibiting in Bond-street, the record of a journey made last year in the Prince's wake by Mr. William Tayler, sometime Commissioner of Patna, an artist already known to the public by an excellent series of Indian sketches displayed by him some years ago at South Kensington. present series, sixty in number, illustrate an amusing variety of characteristic scenes and incidents, noted by him in the course of his recent trip. Among the more humourous pictures are "Young Bengal Welcoming the Prince of Wales," the former represented by a naked little boy with a large head and swollenbelly—a common feature in an Indian landscape; the "Relicular Call on board the Kashgar," and a group of youthful "Somaless diving" for sixpences off Aden. There are several interesting studies of trees, whether growing singly in their natural beauty-like the noble "Peepul" from Soory in Beerbhoom, and the lofty "Sissoo Tree in the grounds of Arrah House," or displaying some abnormal feature like "The Banian embracing the Palm at Elephanta; " or, like the fine "Avenue of Figus Trees at Government House, Malabar Point," showing their tops all bent and distorted by the strong sea-wind. The "Marble Rocks at Jubbulpore "gleam in pale yellow smoothness above the blue windings of the Narbada. As good examples of skill in paint. ing landscapes we may note such views as those of the Gulf of Suez and of Malabar Point in Bombay. Another picture shows. a curious group of oddities which "the Prince did not bring home with him," but which the painter really saw, such as a six-legged cow, a fakir with no hands, and so forth. Some per-trait groups of native chiefs, Parsi families, and such like, are also interesting. The great merit of these sketches lies in their faithfulness to the facts of Eastern life and nature; and on that account, if on no other, they deserve the attention of the inquiring sightseer.

INDIA AND LANCASHIRE.

In the June number of the Fortnightly Review Mr. Raynsford Jackson pleads the cause of Lancashire against the maintenance of what he considers protective duties levied in India on cotton piece-goods. If his main points are correctly put, and he writes like a practical millowner, it would certainly seem as though the moderate import duty of 5 per cent. had something of a protective force against the cotton-manufactures of Lancashire. His attempt to show that the rivalry between England and India for the supply of the Indian cottonmarket is " not limited to the coarse trade, but that it is a more serious and vital struggle for the great bulk of our cotton trade with India," is backed up by a number of detailed figures which seem almost to warrant the conclusion that even a low import duty, retained avowedly for revenue purposes, may injure one rival to the undue advantage of the other.

So far as words go, there is no fault to find with Mr. Jackson's pleading. All he asks is that the manufactures of England and of India "shall be allowed to compete freely with each other, neither being aided by protective duties." On the one side there is cheap and plentiful labour, cotton grown in the country near the factories and the markets; on the other cheaper machinery and coal, with higher intelligence and larger capital. If the Hindu can fairly take from Lancashire the supply of the Indian markets, or even if he deprived us of our large trade with the East, "we must bear the consequences, however seriously not only our own, but national interests may suffer." It is quite fair to object to any import duties which hinder India from importing the cotton she may like best for her own purposes; and there is much force in the demand for a free import of English cottons to India, as a counterpoise to that free import of machinery and coal which enables India already to compete with Lancashire in the same line of industry. There is nothing unreasonable in asking that neither country shall be handicapped against the other in a race where India's gain may redound to England's heavy loss. It is freely admitted that with or without an import duty India must beat Lancashire in the coarser kinds of cotton manufacture. " This trade is virtually gone from England." But the case, we are told, is different with regard to another great branch of the English trade, the "medium" or shirting class of goods, which are exported to the value of £10,000,000 a year. Here, according to Mr. Jackson's reckoning, the balance of disadvantage on the English side is so small—only £4,000 a millthat English energy might be trusted to make head against Iadian rivals, but for the 5 per cent. import duty, which adds another £6,000 to the burden of the English millowner.

If any one doubts that this is the last straw which breaks the Lancashire manufacturer's back, Mr. Jackson bids him remember how much it depends on the nature of a trade whether so small a duty as 5 per cent. is oppressive or not. small trades, "where the income is produced by large profits on a small turnover," such a duty may do little harm; but in "highly organised trades employing a large capital, where the profits are made by a small percentage upon a large turnover," the effect of such a duty may be fatal. In the course of thirty years the Indian mill-owner would thus be aided to the extent of £180,000, or at the lowest £120,000, as against his rival, who in the meantime might have made nothing, if he had not even lost a great deal. Mr. Jackson admits that, even without the import duty, the English manufacturer may in time be driven from the Indian markets; but in view of such a likelihood he asks that the evil day for Lancashire may not be forestalled by the retention of the Indian import duty on fine goods. The collapse of an industry which employs half a million people and £120,000,000 of capital, to say nothing of the shipping and other interests therewith connected, is a prospect which no Englishman could regard with unconcern. That nothing should be done by India's rulers to turn that prospect into a near certainty, is a demand to which only one answer can fairly be given. If the present import duty does really turn the scale against Lancashire, it cannot be repealed too soon; the interests of England should not be wholly forgotten by those who have to look after the interests of India. But the extent to which the former are endangered by the import duty is the very point which, in spite of Mr. Jackson's arguments, remains to our thinking still to ascertain. He says nothing, for instance, about the encouragement given to Native manufactures by the growth of adulteration in English cotton goods. Nor does he explain how it happened that, when the Indian import duties were much higher than they now are, the imports of English cottons continued to increase, while the growth of the Indian manufactures began only after the duties had been lowered. If Lancashire could hold her own under the higher duties, why should a reduction of those duties work so greatly to her disadvantage? For the present, at any rate, we are inclined to think that the threatened collapse of her Indian trade, if it is really coming to that, will be found to arise from other causes than the one on which Lancashire millowners lay so much stress.

INDIAN SECURITIES.
TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The permanent debt of India consists of 126 millions borrowed for general purposes, and ninety-six millions raised, on a guaranteed rate of interest, for the construction of railways. Of these 222 millions sterling, the bulk is held by Englishmen who, for the sake of the additional interest, have preferred Indian to English Securities, for the investment of their savings and trust funds, under the impression that both classes of Securities are equally safe. However well-grounded such an opinion might have been ten or fifteen years ago, common prudence requires that we should, from time to time, examine the structure on the stability of which we have staked our substance, and ascertain if its foundations are still as sound as we believed them to be, when we first decided on trusting to them.

Holders of Indian Securities are doubtless aware that no Imperial guarantee attaches to the loans contracted by the Secretary of State for India, and that the revenues of India are all they have to look to, for the safety of their investments. A study of the causes which affect those revenues, becomes, therefore, of particular interest, since it is the only way in which we can ascertain how far our investments are safe.

When, in 1858, the administration of India was taken over by the Crown, the expense incurred, in the suppression of the mutinies and the necessity of maintaining a larger European force in the country, led the Government to increase existing taxes and to impose new ones; and, in the course of a very few years, the income of the State was raised from thirty-four to upwards of fifty millions annually. This very rapid increase could not, however, be enforced without a serious strain being put on the productive powers of the country; and the efforts subsequently made to keep up the income at the high figure attained, resulted in impairing certain sources of revenue, and in a general discontent which Lord Mayo described as "a political danger, the magnitude of which could scarcely be over-estimated." This feeling of discontent was, in a great measure, allayed by the succeeding Viceroy, who was able, through rigid economy and by disallowing speculative schemes, such as had previously resulted in useless burdens on the State, to effect some reduction in taxation. The power of a Viceroy is, however, subordinate to that of the Secretary of State for India; and as their aims, under the best of conditions, must often be divergent, seeing that the former has to protect Indian interests alone, while a Secretary of State has to support his Cabinet, the sudden arrest in the course of economy, initiated by Lord Northbrook, was but a natural and inevitable consequence of the arrangement under which India is governed.

The Secretary of State for India has entire control over the executive and legislative powers of the Government of India. As a Cabinet Minister, he is responsible to Parliament; but Parliament has abstained from calling him to an account of his Indian administration generally, upon the tacit but manifest understanding that due deference shall be paid to the wishes of any influential section of the House, even when such wishes involve a sacrifice of the very interests which the Secretary of State is specially appointed to guard. This has been clearly brought out in the matter of the import duty on Manchester goods, and will serve as a clue to the many instances, during he last eighteen years, in which useless burdens have been placed upon India, in order to advance interests which were not hers. Under such conditions, and with an executive unfettered by those constitutional restraints which we consider so essential to good government at home, can it be any matter for wonder that expenditure should not have been kept within bounds; that it should constantly have exceeded the income, notwithstanding the large additions made to the latter; that new loans should frequently have been contracted; and, lastly, that the permanent debt, which was only sixty millions when the administration was transferred to the Crown, should have attained its present figure of 126 millions? The fall in the rate of exchange, consequent on the depreciation of silver, has further added to the difficulties of the Indian Finance Minister; while, on the other hand, the revenue seems, from continued and excessive pressure, to have lost all power of expan-

The land revenue, which constitutes two-fifths of the entire income of the State, has, as will be seen from the following figures, remained stationary for eight years, in spite of the efforts that have been made to increase it. For the eight years ending 31st March next the revenue is represented as under:—

	1870.71				20,622,823

The average is about the same as the amount that was collected eight years ago; and while the last two years show a trifling increase of about one and one third per cent., it must be observed that that increase rests merely upon estimates which may eventually not be realised. Substantially, therefore, this branch of the revenue has remained stationary, and the failure of the efforts made to increase it, is to be accounted for by the extensive tracts of land that have been thrown out of cultivation, from the inability of the cultivators to satisfy the enhanced demands made upon them. The suicidal policy pursued with regard to this important branch of the revenue must, if persisted in, soon lead, through the deterioration of agriculture, to a diminution of the revenue, instead of the increase aimed at.

We have about the total shown in Budget Statements ... ... ... ... ... £50,500,000

A glance at the above list will satisfy those who have watched the progress of the Indian revenue, that no hope of a material increase under any of the above heads can reasonably be entertained. Opium is a precarious source of revenue that may, at any time, be impaired by a determination of the Chinese Government to legalise the poppy cultivation in China. Salt, at the present duty, costs the Indian consumer 1,000 per cent. of the price at which the people of England obtain it; and an enhancement of the present duty, while it may fail to produce increased revenue, must lead to immediate consequences for which no probable amount of revenue could compensate. Under the head of Stamps, the revenue was £2,373,844 in 1869-70, and is estimated at £2,837,000 for the current year; but the difference consists chiefly of Judicial fees now credited under Customs and Excise seem susceptible of little increase, and Tributes of none at all; while the revenue derived from Irrigation and State Railways is not keeping pace with the expenditure that is going on; and it falls considerably short of the interest on the capital sunk in the undertakings.

We are thus brought face to face with the fact that, while a revenue of  $50\frac{1}{2}$  millions has hitherto proved insufficient to cover the cost of the administration and defences of India and to discharge her debt obligations, we have, without the prospect of any additional revenue, to meet heavier demands henceforward, in consequence of—

1. The increased expense of remitting to England the fifteen millions to be disbursed there.

2. The increased cost of administration in India, which must inevitably follow the depreciation of her silver currency.

3. The increased army expenditure consequent on the recognised necessity of raising the pay of the Sepoy and adding to the number of officers in native regiments.

4. Several millions being still required to complete certain irrigation schemes which could not be abandoned, without the loss of the millions already spent on them, while their ultimate success must remain doubtful, in view of the failure of similar works already constructed by us.

This year we have already borrowed £4,360,000, or £601,000 more than we are to spend, on "Public Works Extraordinary."

These £601,000 will liquidate a part of the £7,000,000 that have to be paid for interest on debt and railway capital; and our borrowings must rapidly increase in succeeding years, since not only will our expenditure be greater, from the causes just enumerated, but the item of interest will itself expand as we go on adding to the permanent debt. Thus we find ourselves by sure steps advancing towards that unenviable stage, reached some years ago by Turkey and Egypt, where a large share of the ordinary obligations of the State can be fulfilled only with the assistance of the money-lenders; a stage which can never be of long duration, and has generally ended in ruin.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

June 10. A FRIEND TO INDIA.

Accident to Mr. A. Money.—A short time ago I had to recount a serious carriage accident which happened to Dr. Elliot. A similar misfortune of a no less serious kind befell Mr. Alonzo Money last Sunday evening. He was just starting from the Bengal Club for his usual drive, when his buggy horse, through some unexplained reason, suddenly took fright, and dashed wildly out of the compound. He passed through the Club gates in safety, but turning too sharply to the right, struck the buggy violently against the lamp-post, which fell over, fortunately clear of the vehicle. Mr. Money was shot out with considerable force, and came down heavily on the kerbstone. He was immediately carried back into the club, and was for some hours partially insensible. Besides a broken collar-bone, he sustained an ugly scalp wound and severe abrasions on the leg. The doctors were soon in attendance, and Mr. Money is now, I am glad to say, rapidly recovering from the effects of his severe fall.—Pioneer Correspondent.

THE VALUE OF THE RUPEE.

The Calcutta Statesman remarks that Mr. Fleming questions the accuracy of its statement that the "normal value of the rupee is 1-11½," and apparently thinks it an error to attribute a "normal value" to any coin whatever. The point is of so much importance in the discussion, that we are very much obliged to him for raising it, as it gives us an opportunity of once more insisting upon what we believe to be a radical misconception on the subject on the part of economic writers. We called attention to the error a weeks ago, and said that we had been struck with the fact that while economists condemned in the strongest manner all intentional tampering with the standard, they had failed, so far as we had to recognise the obligation of the State to provide by all reasonable means against any natural fluctuation therein, from a change of value in the metals. Economic and indeed all other writers would condemn in the most peremptory terms the intentional lowering of the value of the rupee to 1s. 8d., by reducing the quantity of silver in the coin, but they overlook the obligation of the State to protect the metal from itself. And we say that the obligation is as absolute in the one case as the other. It is as much the duty of the State to keep the standard coin at its "normal value" as it is to refrain from intentionally lowering it. What is meant by normal value is simply the exchange value of the coin against other commodities, over long periods of time. In the case of silver, the normal value has for centuries been as 15 or 15½ to 1 against gold, and gold remaining unchanged, it is clear that if silver has fallen from 15 or 15 in exchange value to say, 18, it has lost its normal or ordinary value altogether. But it was chosen as standard, be it remembered, for the very reason that it would not change its value in this way. Had there been any prospect of its doing so it would never have been chosen at all, but would have been regarded as unfit to be the standard for that very reason. An unexpected change having suddenly developed itself, we say that it is the plain duty of the State to take all reasonable means in its power to bring it back to its proper value. We do not ourselves see how there can be any doubt as to the obligation: for as selves see how there can be any doubt as to the obligation; for as it is the State that imposes the standard upon the country, the it is the State that imposes the standard upon the country, the obligation to maintain it as nearly as possible invariable in value flows directly therefrom. The supposition of an extreme case will make the matter perhaps clear. Suppose, then, that under some chemical discovery silver suddenly became as cheap as iron, or that by some calamity at the mines it became as costly as platinum will it be seriously contended that the one contingency had sponged out all the debts of the country, or the other had raised their weight forty fold? Every one surely must see that it would be the plain duty of the State to rectify matters by legislation, and to place the debtor and creditor class as nearly as possible in the same position as they were before. Well, this is to bring the standard back to its normal value, let the precise steps taken for standard back to its normal value, let the precise steps taken for the purpose be what they may. In enforcing a standard at all this obligation upon the State is implied, and the only reason that it was not reduced to statute form is that it was assumed by every one that no change of importance would take place in the standard. Had any such change been thought likely it would have been provided against.

INDIA'S FRONTIER DEFENCES.

The Pioneer argues that if India really be open to invasion, if our military strength be weakness, and our carefully-wrought political system a sham, then the sooner we realise such disagreeable facts the better. But if General Adye be right, then, without foolish pride, but with a confidence which the past history of our country and our race has justified, we may wait, with equal minds, what fortune sends us, and not be disquieted because the feeble and half-barbarous khanats of Central Asia fall easy victims to the disciplined and well-armed troops of Russia. In this conflict of opinion we would insist that the views of General Adye are as reasonably founded as they are temperately expressed. The advocates of the peripatetic policy of wandering about Central Asia to find a strategical position have received a great accession of strength in the recent work of Sir Henry Rawlinson, whose high and honourable reputation we would be the last to question. But while allowing the full weight of the authority of this distinguished man, we would still say that every page of his work shows the influences under which he has been trained, and a nervous dread of Russia, which is which he has been trained, and a hervous dread of Russia, which is as unreasonable in Englishmen as it is natural at the Court of Teheran, where the feeling with reference to Russia has been since the time of Alexander I. like that of a rabbit in the cage of a boa-constrictor. We have no intention of dwelling upon those portions of Sir John Adye's letter which discuss the military difficulties of an invasion of India from the north-west. We know what the invasion of India from the north-west. sion of Khiva cost Russia—the destruction of one army, and the painful and difficult success of a second many years later. The invasion of India would be attempted against a very different enemy. The north is, as far as invasion is concerned, absolutely impregnable, and the conquest of Yarkand would no more affect our security then the conquest of Patagonia. Nor is the Khaibar much more practicable. The Bolan route is the only one which military authorities would allow to be a weak point in our defences, and here we are far nearer our base of operations, even assuming this to be Enghand, than a Russian force separated by wastes and mountains, and many weeks of tedious and difficult marches from any possible source of supplies. Here we could swiftly concentrate an army amply sufficient to account for any force which Russia might be able to push through the passes. The strength of nations is not to be estimated solely by the number of soldiers which a mendacious War-office can put upon paper.

PENSIONS.

The Pioneer remarks that the Civil Service Annuity and Pension Rules are the only ones which can be said to work satisfactorily. And now that the civil engineers are becoming such a large body and are getting to be recruited from the bottom, the Government might confer a substantial boon on this branch of the service, besides ultimately increasing its efficiency, if it were to come forward and offer that support without which the scheme now afoot will never be brought to maturity. We are aware that there are special causes at present in operation to create a block in the department of public works: first, that a number of officers were brought into it at an age which renders it practically impossible that they should ever be able to qualify for pension; and secondly, that no limit has been placed on the tenure of the higher appointments. The first difficulty can only be set right in time, but it may be taken for granted that the second cannot be allowed to endure much longer. It may be said, indeed, that the nature of the uncovenanted pension rules are of themselves calculated to block promotion, from the difficulties which those rules create in the way of retirement at a reascnable age. But it may be safely assumed that the anomalies and inconsistencies, to use a mild term, which now disfigure those rules must be removed before very long, under a clearer view of the reasonable and fitting. Still when all these points are set right there yet will remain the fact that pensions alone, unless they are made extravagantly high, will not induce sufficient retirements. Men should be encouraged to practice a reasonable frugality; still better, it should be enforced. This is a point which may be earnestly pressed on the attention of the Government. Only the Government can do it, and the Government by doing it will be doing itself a service at the same time. But, of course, the system applied to the civil service should not be copied. That is rude and crude in the extreme. A man contributes a certain proportion of his salary, but gets only a fixed annuity in return, so that the higher he rises in the service the less is his eventual reward; while if he dies, all his contributions are exhausted to cheapen the cost of pensioning the survivors. Clearly the proper plan would seem to be to give each man back exactly what he had contributed. In fact, the Government might act as a savings bank, the contributions levied being credited to the contributor, and repaid to him on retirement, or to his estate at his death. As regards the persons now in the service they should of course have their choice of joining or not joining the fund, as it may be called, although in fact there would be no collection fund, but each man would have a separate account with the Government. We believe that the large majority of officers would gladly bind themselves to the arrangement, for once joining there should be no withdrawing again; it would make them save whether they liked it or not, putting the temptation to heedlessness out of the way, and offering perfect security for the investment. Five per cent. is the amount which might be suggested as a suitable assessment to make. The money so recovered in the officer's pay bill should then be placed to his credit, and the amount invested by the Accounts Department, acting as commissioners for the purpose, in Government securities. Accumulating in this way at compound interest, their savings would amount to a goodly sum when the time came to think of retiring, and when he does retire the amount at the officer's credit should be refunded to him, or the equivalent, if he preferred it, be given in the form of an annuity. If the officer left the service before he was entitled to a pension, he should still be repaid his enforced savings. We believe, as we have said, that most men would be glad to be obliged to commit themselves to this moderate degree of enforced frugality, but at any rate the rule should be made obligatory on all who enter the service hereafter; and surely young men beginning life on Rs. 400 a month, with no fixed claims on their purse already established, would not feel any appreciable inconvenience from the rule, while benefiting largely from it hereafter.

THE NILGIRIS.—The Nilgiri Courier is informed that the Nilgiri Commissionership may be considered safe -- that it will not be abolished. It is expected that changes will be made in the offices of Assistant Commissioner and Joint Magistrate; but what those changes are likely to be our contemporary has no certain information. Mr. E. F. Webster is confidently spoken of as the successor to Mr. Cockerell. Mr. Webster's appointment will, we have reason to think, be very acceptable to the residents, planters and others of UNCOVENANTED CIVIL SERVICE MEMORIAL.

To the most Honourable the Marquis of Salisbury, Secretary 22 State for India:

The Memorial of the undersigned officers of the Uncovenance Civil Service, holding appointments included in Schedule A of the Civil Leave Code, humbly showeth:—

That these officers are drawn from the same classes as the Covenant see Civil Service, and that the effect of the Indian climate on them must be the same.

That, in the matter of leave of absence, this has been recognised by the majority having been admitted to rules similar to those of the Covenant and Civil Service.

That this recognition has not extended to pension, in respect of which the rules published in 1863 are still applicable to all Civil officers not in the Covenanted Civil Service.

That, in consequence, while civil servants in England, serving in their native climate, have a claim to pension, on failure of health after 10 years' service, your Memorialists cannot claim an invalid pension until after 15 years' service, though Covenanted Civil Servants are entitled to one after 5 years.

That while the pensions of the Covenanted Civil Services in India and Ceylon, and all services in England, increase after each additional year served, no increase is allowed to your Memorialists until 10 additional years have passed, or 25 years in all

That while the Covenanted Civil Service earns a right to pension after 25 years, of which 4 may be spent on leave, your Memorialists cannot claim: a pension until 30 years have been served in India, exclusive of all leave.

That your Memorialists are also debarred from counting service for per-sion before the age of 22, even if appointed to responsible posts before that age.

That the maximum limit of pension is fixed in rupees, whereas that at the Covenanted Civil Service is fixed in pounds sterling.

Your Memorialists, therefore, pray that they may be granted:—
(1.) A reduction of the time of residence in India required to C22B 2.

(2.) A graduated scale of pensions, allowing a certain increment for each additional year's service.

(3.) A relaxation of the limit of age for commencing pensionable services (4.) The fixing of the maximum limit of all pensions in pounds sterling instead of in rupees.

And your Memorialists, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

STATION TALK.

SIMLA, May 26.—To whose lot, I wonder, will it fall in India to circumvent the effects on our finances of the state of things which makes Nevada so happy. Long before you get this letter you will have heard of Sir William Mur's retirement. His successor will hardly have an enviable task before him, unless he should find kim-self working with a Government strong enough intellectually and morally to do two things-introduce a gold coinage and revise the permanent settlement of Bengal. The revision of the permanent settlement would open a new source of revenue, and the gold coinage would prevent it from running out of the treasury like water through a colander. I hope to take a bird's eye view of those two proposals together some day; but about Sir William Muir's successor. Of course one could find men in abundance who would be really fit for the appointment, but then it is always necessary that a man should be floated into an office so exalted as that of the financial member by a certain amount of distinction and seniority coupled with fitness. Under present circumstances, I should be inclined to put a shade of odds on the possible European candidates in a body as opposed to the possible Anglo-Indians. Lord Salisbury seems a likely man to believe in sending out an unprejudiced financier. The theory on which his action in that case will be based is of course as exploded fallacy for everyone in this country who understands the subject. An unprejudiced man, in this sense, is simply a man who knows nothing about the problems he will have to deal with, and must spend a year at least in studying them before he can do a stroke of public work likely to be anything but mischievous. Still the home-grown financier seems probably impending over as: I wonder what are the chances about Colonel Chesney being selected. Anything but bad, I should say. He is a likely man for Lord Salisbury to think of, for many reasons; he would be a firstrate man for the appointment, and, though sent from home, he would be anything but a raw Englishman. He would bring out a matered. knowledge of Indian affairs. He is so full of originality and energy moreover, that he might in the course of a few years get two passes half-pennyworth of reforms of some sort carried in spite of bas colleagues. Ido not mean that the other members of Council, cathe Viceroy, or the Vehm Gericht at the India-office, are indixinaally men who are dull or obstructive, but even the Indian Government is somehow growing cumbersome. The individual withers, and the world grows more and more. The Government of this country seems passing into the condition of a system independent of men, and I am sorry for it. The great officers of State are becoming officials rather than rulers. Whatever good they might each discountry in the condition of a system independent of the condition working singly, they are each colleagues to one another, and I suspend they get a good deal in one another's way.—Pioneer. ### Miscellaneous.

GWALIOR.—An Anglo-Marathi newspaper gives out that a commission is to be appointed at Gwalior, to make certain inquiries as to the circumstances under which the man known as the notorious Nana Sahib of Bithoor was arrested at Gwalior about two years ago, and who was, after a great deal of evidence having been taken as to his identity, released.

GOLD IN KULU.—A Kulu correspondent of the Pioneer writes: The gold-washers have done better this year than I have ever heard of them doing before, many averaging eight annas a day. I suppose the heavy floods of last year had something to do with it. Gold is washed, I believe, from every river in the Punjab but the Ravi, yet I never heard of any one searching for the gold quartz reefs from which it must come.

SIMLA.—The weather at Simla continues exceptionally hot, and ever is prevalent amongst the natives. There have also been one or fever is prevalent amongst the natives. There have also been one or two cases of small-pox. The medical officers, however, are working energetically, the local paper tells us, but the proper sanitation of Simla is impossible without money, and the question to which an answer is being eagerly looked for is—"Will Lord Salisbury sanction the proposed grant?"

THE STATE BALL AT PETERHOFF.—The Simla paper reports that the State ball given at Peterhoff in honour of her Imperial Majesty's birthday was a great success. The rooms, though well filled, were not overcrowded, and the hail and rain which fell in the morning cooled the atmosphere for the dancers. Lord and Lady Lytton were most affable to their guests, and remained in the ball room to a late hour. And last, but not least, the supper was excellent. Only one or two native gentlemen were present.

EARLY MARRIAGES.—There are, it is said, some indications of a public movement being initiated by some Hindu gentlemen in Bengal to put a stop to early marriages in this country. The Indian Mirror hopes they are not being moved by a momentary impulse only. A mere agitation of the question will not do. Of that we have had enough. Let there be a strong and united action to put down the evil with a high hand. If legislative aid be necessary, continues our contemporary, let it be invoked by all means. Now that there appears to be a growing public opinion among the Hindus against the custom of early marriage, let the iron be struck while it INDIA MUSEUM.—The Hindoo Patriot states that the trustees of the India Museum have lately purchased Dr. Day's large collection of Indian fishes. Dr. Day was for some time employed as Surveyor of Indian Fisheries, and travelled all over India at the public exof Indian Fisheries, and travelled all over India at the public expense, to inspect the fisheries, and had excellent opportunities, which he did not neglect, of making a valuable collection. None of his reports, if he ever made any, have yettseen the light, but his collections will prove useful to ichthyologists. The trustees are now negotiating for the purchase of the late Mr. W. S. Atkinson's collection of Indian insects. It fills twenty-five large cases, and is particularly rich in Darjeeling Lepidoptera.

HEALTH OF THE PUNJAB.—Comparing the results of the districts for which complete returns have been received, the total deaths registered in the Punjab on the week ending 6th May were 4,982, against 4,356 in the previous week. The health of the Province against 4,356 in the previous week. continues satisfactory, and, with the exception of Dera Ghazi Khan and Palwal, the death-rates of the large towns are moderate. The death-rate of Dera Ghazi Khan was fifty-four, that of Palwal forty-nine, per mille. Not a single death was registered under the head nine, per mille. Not a single death was registered under the head of cholera. Three hundred and sixty-eight deaths were registered under the head of small-pox, against 320 in the previous week. Gurgaon continues to be the district in which this disease is most fatal. Three hundred and thirty-six male and 301 female births were registered in the large municipal towns.

TEMPERANCE IN THE ARMY .- The teetotal movement in the European army in India is extending month by month. By the returns for May this year it seems that there are 7,400 non-commissioned officers and men of the service on the rolls of the total abstinence societies. It is needless to say that this is a subject for great congratulation to the army, whether viewed as a mass of Englishmen living in this country or as a fighting organisation. Efficiency in either condition is impossible with intemperate habits. This movement centres round one man. It is almost entirely the fruit of the unwearied energy and devotion of the Rev. Mr. Gregson, of Agra, the hon. secretary of the Soldiers' Total Abstinence Association of India. Full of zeal, devoted to the soldiers, speaking to them in language that works wonders upon them, Mr. Gregson has gathered together nearly 7,500 soldiers of the Bengal Presidency principally as adherents to the cause he represents. Such success depally, as adherents to the cause he represents. Such success deserves special notice, and Mr. Gregson has well earned the gratitude of the army and of the Government of India by his efforts to check the fertile cause of military crime in this country.

A RAILWAY TRAIN ON FIRE.—The Lahor paper reports that a serious accident took place on the Punjab Northern State Railway between the Kamoki and Muridki stations of that line. One of the third-class carriages caught fire, and the passengers it contained, after vainly endeavouring by shouts and other signals to attract attention, jumped out of the carriage, and three passengers were severely injured. Two of them were women, whose limbs were badly fractured. In one case amputation of the leg was were badly fractured. In one case amputation of the leg was necessary, and the other, a native lady, a connection of the native assistant surgeon in charge of the Mayo Hospital, lies in a most precarious state. The fire is supposed to have been due to a spark having lodged in the lamp-hole, or in the space between the double roof of the carriage. The dryness of the woodwork in the roof of course rendered it very easily inflammable, and as the train was running at a considerable speed it is not difficult to understand that once it caught fire it was soon fanned into a brisk flame. One of the passengers, who was travelling in the carriage same that it of the passengers, who was travelling in the carriage, says that it was not until the roof-lamp and part of the roof itself fell in that the people jumped out of the carriage.

THE GAUGE QUESTION AGAIN.—The vitality of a fixed idea at the India-office is quite as wonderful as that of the lower reptiles. One imagined that the broad and narrow gauge question had come at last to be understood even in England, but a recent incident shows that permanent under-secretaries may die, but will not sur-render. In the review of the Public Works budget, which was published shortly after the last financial statement, a short paragraph had reference to an important little railway project. We read:—"The Secretary of State has been asked to authorise the construction of a branch railway from Moradabad to Ramnugger by the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway Company as part of the railways provided for in their contract." We need not tell any one who will look at a man that such a millray would be to a large extent ways provided for in their contract. We need not centary one who will look at a map that such a railway would be, to a large extent, a strategic line; and that being the case we need only refer to the monument of papers under which the gauge question, as it affected the Northern Punjab State Railway, was finally buried, as absolutely demonstrating the fact that it must be of uniform gauge with the standard lines throughout the country, and with the line from which it is a branch. In face of this we have to inform the reader that the Secretary of State has actually sent out his sanction for the proposed extension, on condition that it shall be constructed on the narrow gauge. The statement may seem almost too ridiculous for belief, but is perfectly true nevertheless. Of course the Government of India will not allow a spade to be put into the ground towards the construction of the new line unless the absurd condition imposed by the India-office is revoked; but meanwhile the project having passed through all the long series of ordeals which confront all projects in this country, however admirable, is thrown back again to mar the beginning of its career.—Pioneer.

THE PRINCE'S ELEPHANT.—After all the snark was a boojum. The elephant that the Prince of Wales and Sir Jung Bahadoor hunted was not a tame one, and various rumours to the contrary (notably in the Indian Daily News of May the 8th) are unfounded. We have the best authority for this contradiction, and most ample proof that Sir Jung Bahadoor has not stooped to an act which would be neither courteous nor sportsmanlike. Those, indeed, who know anything of that nobleman will not ask for the proof; but for the sake of argument it may as well be given. Sir Jung Bahadoor did not let loose a tame elephant meaning it to be mistaken for a wild one. A veritable wild elephant was the here of that for a wild one. A veritable wild elephant was the hero of that famous run described by our correspondent, and none but a wild brute could have kept up the pace so far over such bad ground. He outstripped for some miles the fastest of the tame Nepaulese elephants, and it was with great difficulty that he could be turned out of his cover in the hills. There were none of those marks from chains on the legs and ropes on the belly which are apparent on most tame elephants. If a tame elephant, moreover, had been let loose for the day's sport he would have been so placed as to break where he was wanted; and just the contrary was the case in this instance. The hunting party had to move to three different gorges, hoping that he would come out by one or the other, but he broke far away, and nothing could have been more opposite to the Maharajah's expectations. No one, says our informant (he himself was there at the time), could have seen the difficulty the tame elephants outstripped for some miles the fastest of the tame Nepaulese elethere at the time), could have seen the difficulty the tame elephants had in making the other a captive without knowing for certain that all stories about any deception on Sir Jung Bahadoor's part are wildly fictitious. We have all the more pleasure in rehabilitating this elephant by reason of the gratitude we feel for the courtesy shown to our own correspondent in the Terai, but for which our readers must have waited for Dr. Russell's description of the hunt in the Times .- Pioneer.

CHOLERA.—We regret to state that cholera has reappeared in the CHOLERA.—We regret to state that cholera has reappeared in the Fort. About half-a-dozen cases are reported to have occurred in H.M. 67th Foot, of which three proved fatal. The regiment was ordered into camp, but the order has been cancelled, unless another death takes place to-day.—Athenæum, June 7.

DEATH OF THE REV. B. SHERIDAN.—We regret to record the death, from dysentery, at St. Thome, at the age of 52, of the Rev. B. Sheridan, a highly respected priest of the Roman Catholic Mission. He was educated at Dublin, and volunteered his services for the Madras mission. The deceased gentleman was considered to be the best theologian in the mission.

MR. J. B. NORTOW.—Mr. John Bruce, Norton, ex. Advocate.

MR. J. B. NORTON. — Mr. John Bruce Norton, ex-Advocate General, Madras, contemplates returning to Madras next November, and remaining either there or at Bangalore for a few months. He will be accompanied, the Madras Mail says, by two of his sons, one of whom will join the local Bar, and the other will proceed to take charge of his father's coffee estates at Mysore.

MADRAS HARBOUR.—Our harbour works are progressing slowly, and it is feared not surely. The encroachment of the sea on the road opposite the Royapooram terminus is causing anxiety, and unless prompt and effective measures are adopted to prevent further mischief there is a fear that traffic on that side will be stopped and the residents of Royapooram put to the inconvenient necessity of taking a circuitous route to reach town.—Madras Athenaum.

STAMP DEPARTMENT.—The Indian Daily News says that it has been almost finally settled that when the post of Superintendent of Stamps in Calcutta and Stationary becomes vacant in January next, on the retirement of the present incumbent, a Covenanted Civil Servant is to be appointed to it. We may expect then that another step will be taken on Mr. Wright's retirement to assimilate the practice in Madras to that prevailing in Bengal.-Madras Athe-

FATAL ACCIDENT. - Intelligence has been received by the Madras Times from Secunderabad that Major Swinton, of the 1st Madras Light Cavalry, was killed by a fall from his horse at Secunderabad on the night of Saturday last, the 3rd June. The exact manner of the accident is not known, but it is believed that his horse, a big Australian, a recent purchase, shied violently, and threw him was found shortly after the accident occurred—a friend had just parted from him and was overtaken by the riderless horse,—but he lived only a few minutes. His skull was fractured.

THE 24TH N.I.—The authorities of the Madras Army would exercise a wise discretion were they to make public the real facts of the affair of the 24th Regiment M.N.I. We are told by the Madras Times that at present the most scandalous stories are freely circulated and accepted, especially in native circles, to the great injury of the army's good name; and we feel quite sure that the publication of the facts ascertained at the court of inquiry would greatly reduce in dimensions a scandal that, according to the present popular rumour, is nothing short of monstrous.

HAIDARABAD CURRENCY.—There is some probability of a change being effected in the Haidarabad currency, now that it has been found that the European soldiery suffer a great deal by the large number of uncurrent and counterfeit coin that has found its way into Haidarabad. The shroffs employed in canteens receive and issue small coins or dubs of any description, and purchasers are compelled to take what they could get. No one could procure change for a rupee without receiving bad or counterfeit dubs, and it was found that the soldiers were great losers.

SHIPPING DISASTER.—The s.s. Ægean, 836 tons, Captain Spowart, while entering the port of Cocanada, from Madras, on the morning of the 21st May, grounded to the N.E. off Hope Island Light House; but by the energetic exertion of Captain Spowart, who laid out a kedge and warp in deep water, and thus the vessel's head was turned in that direction she floated off. The propeller and all four blades were broken. No injury was done to the hull, and on a careful survey by the local master attendant and a mechanical engineer she was found to be perfectly seaworthy. The commander of the Ægean complained of the Hope Island Light not being clearly visible at the time of the accident.

MILITARY SIGNALLING.- A class for instruction in military signalling will assemble at Bangalore on the 10th June, the Examiner announces, composed of officers and men to be detailed by officers commanding the Mysore Division and Centre District from batteries and regiments serving under their orders, as follows:—From Centre District 10, from Mysore Division 10. The names of officers and men detailed to be reported to the Adjutant-General, Quartermaster-General, and Officer Commanding Mysore Division. Commanding Officers are to select for the above course only those men who have good sight, who can spell correctly, write a clear hand, and are generally intelligent. Preference to be given to soldiers in possession of second-class educational certificates. At the conclusion of the instruction, the officers and men to rejoin their corps under orders of the Officer Commanding Mysore Division.

A QUESTION FOR MISSIONARIES.—A question is being again raised in Madras as to requiring the Hindu convert to shave off the kudumi, or tuft of hair on the head, which is popularly regarded as a mark of Hinduism. It has commonly been customary for converts to be required to cut it off, just as Brahmins cast away their janve, or sacred thread. Missionaries have commonly taken this view of the matter, and regard the kudumi or shendi as a distinctive badge of Hinduism, which cannot be properly retained by a Native Christian, any more than the mark on the forehead. The controversy is an old one, and has been renewed through the republication of Dr. Caldwell's observations on the subject in 1867, publication of Dr. Caldwell's observations on the subject in 1001, reprinted in the Indian Antiquary. It is certainly corroborative of the opinion that the kudumi is a religious badge, or mark of distinction, that the Syrian Church of Malabar requires its removal, but Dr. Caldwell does not regard this as conclusive. The Protestant missionary is charged with attempting to denationalise the convert, by requiring him to shave the whole head. The missionaries reply—Why should this be so, when the sanyasis or ascetics of Hindnian itself remove the kudumi? of Hinduism itself remove the kudumi?

RESCUE OF A SHIP'S CREW.—The British ship Blair Drummonds which arrived at Rangoon on the 17th instant from Rio de Janeiro-had on board eighteen men of the French ship Victorine, whom she pricked up at sea seven days after leaving Rio. The men appeared, discuss accounts published, to have been some fourteen days exposed is man open boat, and to have suffered great privations. The men sucked up on the 6th February last, and they then stated that Their vessel belonged to Bordeaux, had loaded some 2,900 tons of grams at Pamblow del Pica, and was consigned to St. Nazares; that state carried a crew of thirty-eight, and that her commander's name was Cardic. She sprung a leak in a gale encountered on the third was Cardic. She sprung a leak in a gale encountered on the third thy after she left port and all efforts failed to stop the flow of water, and they abandoned the ship, after pumping three days and nights, will eighteen feet in the hold, and saw her sink just after pushing from her in two boats; one with the master and eighteen hards, and the other with Mr. Jannim, the mate, who was unfortunately drowned, and the eighteen men, who were saved after being the days of the words and proportion has the fact of the for the days in the boat. The two boats separated on the evening of the day of the wreck, and never met again, nor has the fate of the Elects as yet been ascertained.—Madras Athenaum, May 31.

MAJOR SANDEMAN'S MISSION IN DIFFICULTIES.

EPPER SIND, May 27 .- The little band of Britishers up at Missing are of course enjoying the change of climate from hot sandwing Jacobabad, but nevertheless their position is not an mariable one, and the political difficulties have not so entirely discreted before Major Sandeman's magic wand as his dear friends wish to make out. It is only a fortnight ago that the young gentleman now at Jacobabad issued an order that no Kafilas should be permitted to proceed beyond Jacobabad, which does not look as if the gallant Major had completely succeeded with his policy. Cabrilees who are thus detained in Sind are not very kush in consegramoe, and they cannot understand the value of our interference, if we are unable to keep the Pass open even with the aid of money, troops and oily words. A few of the Kafilas determined, on being stopped on the road via Jacobabad, to march through the Force part of the Khan's territory, having been assured by that amaiable Prince that Kaisur Khan Mugsi would see them safely through the dangerous district.

Mr. Bruce, of the Uncovenanted Punjab Service, seems to have taken charge of the political frontier, and it is considered doubtful washer Colonel Munro would ever return to Jacobadad. It is the general belief up here that the Government of India are simply in a fix about this Khelat business, and cannot find a good man for the place, and if found, do not know how to employ him. What good, for instance, has all this hubble bubble done to the Indian ar even the English tax-payer?

A good round sum of money has been spent, a few good old serwas of the Crown have been wantonly insulted and disgusted, The Emperor of Russia has not been frightened by a foolish and aminerable attempt to show our strength, and all this for the purpose of gratifying the vanity of a personal friend and relative of a late Foreign Secretary, who is evidently possessed with a great desire to imitate the follies of Sir Alexander Burns.

Whatever good may result hereafter, this much is certain, that the Bolan Pass is not open at this end, while at the other somebody is singing to himself—"Cock-a-doodel-doo, I dunno what to do."— Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

PETITION TO PARLIAMENT AGAINST THE BOMBAY REVENUE JURISDICTION BILL.

The following petition against the Revenue Jurisdiction Bill from the inhabitants of Ahmedabad was sent to London by the last

To the Hon. the Commons of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament Assembled.

The Humble Petition of the Inhabitants of Ahmedabad, in Gujarat, in the Humole Petition of the Innabitants of Anmedabad, in Gujarat, in the Bombay Presidency,

Most respectfully Sheweth.—That your petitioners have heard with the deepest dismay and regret that the Legislative Council of India have lately passed a Bill entitled "A Bill to Limit the Jurisdiction of the Civil Courts throughout the Bombay Presidency in Matters Relating to Land Revenue;" which has received the assent of the Viceroy, and has been submitted for which has received the assert of the variety, and has been submitted for the sanction of her Majesty's Government.

2. That one important effect of this measure, on becoming law, will be to shut the doors of the Civil Courts, hitherto open to aggrieved ryots and landholders in Gujarat and the Konkan, and prevent the Judges entertaining suits or appeals against any arbitrary imposition of assessment on their lands by revenue officers of Government.

3. That your petitioners have been so well satisfied with the manner in which justice has hitherto been dealt out by Courts of Justice to parties going to law, adverse though the Courts' decisions often are, that they do not see the slightest necessity of altering the existing law, and thereby depriving them of a right which they have long enjoyed, namely, the right of resort to Civil Courts in case of wrongs done to them by revenue officers.

4. That the best proof of the satisfaction with which the landholding and cultivating aleases have viewed the extense of the Civil Courts in the landholding and cultivating classes have viewed the action of the Civil Courts is to be found in the fact that neither in Gujarat nor in the Konkan have any agrarian disturbances ever taken place, nor any Commission of Inquiry into their condition appointed, as was lately the case in the Dekhan and Southern Mahratta Country, where, owing partly to the non-existence of similar just laws, and partly to other causes, the Government of Bombay had lately to assemble a Commission of Inquiry at Poona.

5. That there would be some justification for altering an existing law if it could be shown that the people who were affected by it were dissatisfied it could be shown that the people who were affected by it were dissatisfied with it, or complained of its injustice, or that it seriously injured the interests of the State, or that those who had to administer it practically considered it wrong or objectionable in principle or practice. But your petitioners beg humbly to observe that not only has no such complaint ever been made against it, but that the proposed alteration of the law has been unanimously condemned by the people in Gujarat and the Dekhan, by the public opinion of the country, by the Judges of the Bombay High Court, and by the members of the Local Government.

6. That that sagacious and liberal statesman —Mountstuart Elphinstone —whose memory to this day is cherished with deep reverence by the people whose memory to this day is cherished with deep reverence by the people of Western India, had very wisely provided that, whenever a holder of land had a right in limitation of the right of Government to assess his property, the Court of law was open to him to establish that right, and claim a partial or total exemption from the payment of Government assessment as the case might be.

7. That the result of the abrogation of this wise and salutary provision will be to leave the determination of this right entirely to the discretion of revenue officers of Government. Considering, however, that, as a general rule, these revenue officers feel interested in augmenting the State revenues, and that they have, as such, not that confidence of the landholding community which the impartial and disinterested Judges of Civil Courts have, your Honourable House must see how far the passing of this measure will tend to shake the confidence of the people in the just and righteous prin-ciples which are known to actuate the British Government in its dealings with rights of private property.

8. That, accordingly, your petitioners humbly pray that Parliament will cause to interpose its rightful authority to prevent the measure from passing into law, so that the Crown of the Empress of India may shed additional lustre by its rays of justice penetrating into the remotest parts of the Empire.

And your petitioners, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

MAYABHOY PREMABHOY and others.

Miscellaneous.

SIR F. SOUTER.—We are glad to hear that Sir Frank Souter, Commissioner of Police, has been appointed to the Corporation and Town Council, in succession to Dr. Hewlett, by Government. The Commissioner's local experience will be of great service in the discussion and settlement of all important questions. - Times of India.

SIR FRANK SOUTER IN THE TOWN COUNCIL.-On Tuesday afternoon last, Sir Frank Souter, Kt., C s.r., took his seat for the first time as a member of the Town Council. The esteem in which he is held was evinced by the smiles and evident signs of satisfaction with which he was welcomed in the Council-room.—Bombay Gazette, June 9.

WRECK AND LOSS OF LIFE NEAR ALIBAG.—On Tuesday night, June 6, a native passenger boat, with twenty persons on board, including the crew, while proceeding from Bombay down the coast, total wreck. One of the male passengers, who was a strong swimmer, managed to reach the shore, and communicated the fact to the authorities, when Mr. Arthur Crawford, collector and magistrate of the district, ordered the life-boat to be got out at once. Notwithstanding the fact that the regular life-boat crew were not on duty, their engagement for the season not commencing before the 1st of June, Mr. Framjee, the chief constable, got a number of men together, and had the life-boat launched within half an hour after news of the accident had been received. After cruising about for several hours Mr. Framjee managed to pick up four men who were drifting about on a piece of loose timber, and had them conveyed to the hospital. The search was kept up throughout the day, but without further effect, though Mr. Framjee and the police were inthe hospital. defatigable in their exertions. In the evening the body of a woman was washed ashore, and the men who were saved state that there was another woman among the passengers who was certainly lost. A report was received at Alibag next day that several men had been picked up at sea by a passing boat and conveyed to a place lower down the coast.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Dalyell, late Officiating Chief Commissioner of Mysore and Coorg. A large and brilliant gathering of all classes of the community assembled on the platform to bid farewell to the departing Chief. There was also a goodly number of native officers of the Commission and other native gentlemen present. Mr. Dalyell, accompanied by the new Chief Commissioner and escorted by a troop of the Sillidar Horse, arrived about fifteen minutes before the time for the starting of the train, and was received on the platform by Major General Elmhirst. The native gentlemen present having taken leave of Mr. Dalyell, after the presentation of garlands of Mr. Dalyell took leave of the numerous personal friends by whom he was surrounded, and the train glided out of the station amidst enthusiastic cheering, repeated over and over again. A Guard of Honour formed of the Bangalore Rifle Volunteers paraded in the station compound in honour of the occasion. The station within and without was nicely lighted and presented a brilliant coup d'ail.—Bangalore Examiner.

BANQUET TO LORD NORTHBROOK.

On Wednesday evening a number of Lord Northbrook's personal friends entertained him at a banquet in the Picture Gallery at Grosvenor-house in celebration of his return from India. The Duke of Westminster, K.G., presided, and there were also present: The Duke of Argyll, K.T., Earls Grey, K.G., Granville, K.G., Cowper, K.G., Darnley, Airlie, Strathmore, Cork, Camperdown, Kimberley, and Kenmare; Viscounts Halifax, G.C.B., Baring, Cardwell, Enfield, and Barrington, M.P.; Lords Methuen, Wrottesley, Carlingford, and Wolverton; General Sir E. Lugard, G.C.B.; the Right Hons. Ward Hunt, M.P., E. P. Bouverie, H. C. E. Childers, M.P., and J. G. Dodson, M.P.; Sir Bartle Frere, Bart., G.C.S.I., Sir Graham Montgomery, Bart., M.P., Sir M. Shaw Stewart, Bart., Sir G. St. Aubyn, Bart., M.P., Mr. S. Whitbread, M.P., Admiral the Hon. F. Egerton, M.P., Henry H. Loch, C.B., Admiral Sir C. Eden, K.C.B., Hon. F. L. Gower, M.P., Sir G. Clerk, K.C.B., Sir H. Montgomery, Bart., Hon. W. Portman, M.P., Mr. B. Mildmay, Mr. E. Ellice, M.P., Hon. F. Baring, Colonel Kingscote, C.B., M.P., Lieutenant-Colonel Ellis, C.S.I., Colonel Napier Sturt, Mr. Albert Grey, C.S.I., the Revs. O. Gordon and J. Goring, and Messrs. W. G. Romaine, C.B., J. Danvers, Napier, A. Seymour, R. Drummond, Granville Somerset, Q.C., Henry West, Q.C., C. Clifford, M.P., A. B. Carter, J. B. Carter, K. Hodgson, M.P., M. Drummond, H. Grenfell, A. Buckley, W. Champion, Jervoise Smith, and Algernon West. Covers were laid for sixty-eight in the Rubens Room.

After the banquet his Grace the Chairman, having given the loyal toast, reminded those present that it was four years since Lord Northbrook had been their guest, when about to assume the government of India. They then bid him "farewell," conscious of the greatness of the task on which he was entering, but with confidence in his discharge of it. That confidence had not been misplaced. In the administration of our Indian empire his Lordship had passed through crises of the severest kind, but he had shown the statesmanship equal to these crises. The outcome had always been satisfactory to his friends, and they had now to hope that the brilliant abilities which he had shown abroad would be employed in the service of her Majesty at home. This sentiment was warmly applauded.

Lord Northbrook replied with some feeling. No man in England, he remarked, had been more indebted to his friends than he. It was true, as the Duke of Westminster had said, that his Viceroyalty in India had been a period of great trials; and there had been times when people at home were disposed to find fault with him for the measures he thought proper to adopt in those emergencies. Happily his friends at home—friends who could influence public opinion—stood by him, and it was a supreme gratification to him to be told how, when the results were known, that they were not disappointed. He thanked them very cordially. His ambition, he assured them, was to settle down at home among his friends as an English country gentleman. His lordship's brief speech was received with the warmest cheers.

SIR SALAR JUNG IN ENGLAND.

The following memorial, signed by the Right Hon. Sir Laurence Peel, President, has just been presented to Sir Salar Jung, k.c.s.i., by the East India Association:—

Sir,—We, the President and Council of the East India Association, beg to tender to your Excellency our hearty congratulations on your safe arrival in England, and we trust that the result of your visit here will be to give additional strength, if possible, to the friendly feeling which has so long and happily subsisted between the Britishauthorities in India and his Highness the Nizam. We are not unaware how much of this has been owing to the personal endeavours of your Excellency; nor of the obstacles you have had to contend against, arising chiefly from ancient and not unnatural prejudices which it required the statesmanlike discrimination and patient forbearance of your Excellency to overcome. Your Excellency during a happily long tenure of office succeeded in maintaining between the British Government and the Government of the Nizam, amidst and against many obstructions, the policy of friendship towards Great Britain, and a strict fulfilment of treaty obligations, which have ever been the cardinal points of your Excellency's administration. No more signal example of this could be found than in the course pursued by your Excellency during the great Indian Mutiny, occurring as it did at a period immediately following one in which the relations between the two Governments had been exposed to some danger of unfriendly interruption. How loyally you acted at that critical period we can never forget, nor should Great Britain ever be manindful of the great services you then rendered it—a service for which the more credit is due to your Excellency, because, having to contend against an amount of opposition both open and covert that a minister less sections and less determined at all hazards to pursue the path of loyalty and honour might well have shrunk from resisting, you succeeded in maintaining for the public good your high office, undiminished in its powers, utility, and dignity. Of the admirable manner in which your Excellency has for so many years administered the extensive territorities committed to your char own Sovereign, and wearing on your breast the insignia of an Order which marks the estimation in which you are held by our Sovereign, all that remains to us is to express to your Excellency, on the part of a body so well able as is the East India Association, to appreciate the value of your labours, the conviction that never was there a more worthy recipient of all the honours which your Excellency has received, and which we trust that a gracious Providence may enable you long to enjoy.

His Excellency Sir Salar Jung, accompanied by the Nizam Ywr Jung Bahadoor, Ryasan Ali Bahadoor, Synd Ali Khan Bahadoor, Mr. G. S. V. Fitzgerald, Captain Clerk, and Mr. Oliphant, was present at the State concert given by command of the Queen at Buckingham Palace on Wednesday evening.

His Excellency has forwarded to the directors of the Alexandra Palace a cheque for £20, as an addition to the prize fund of the horse show.

At the meeting of the Court of Common Council on Thursday it was unanimously resolved, on the motion of Deputy M'Dougall, to present the freedom of the City in a gold casket to his Excellency Sir Salar Jung, Prime Minister of the Nizam of Hyderabad, "in recognition of the valuable services he has rendered to this country in his official capacity."

On Thursday evening arrangements were made at Windsor Castle for the reception of Sir Salar Jung, who had been invited to the palace by her Majesty. Sir Salar Jung drove by road from the metropolis, his servants having arrived at Windsor at five o'clock with his coach and luggage. Sir Salar Jung was presented to the Queen by the Marquis of Salisbury. He offered, according to the custom of the East, a token of allegiance, which her Majesty touched and returned.

Sir Salar Jung yesterday visited the South West India Dock. Mr. Percival Bosanquet, chairman of the East and West India Docks Company, and Mr. C. H. Wigram, a director, were in attendance, and conducted his Excellency over the dock.

SIND, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAY.

The annual general meeting of the Sind, Punjab, and Delhi Railway Company was held on Friday at the offices, Gresham House, Old Broad-street; Mr. W. P. Andrew, the chairman, presiding. The Chairman moved the adoption of the report, and, after alluding to the visit of the Prince of Wales and the satisfactory arrangements made in connection therewith, said it was very satisfactory to be able to call attention to the increased traffic, particularly in passengers, which had occurred over their system. There had been a slight diminution in the goods traffic on the upper section, owing to a breach made by the unusually heavy rains, but had it not been for that, there was every reason to believe the goods traffic would have increased in the same way that the passenger traffic had. Great improvements in communicating with the railway stations had been made by the Government, but, through the inadequacy of the means of conveying the goods from the upper to the lower section, a great glut occurred on various stations on their line, which was not only very detrimental to the company, but also most injurious to the inhabitants of those fertile and grain-producing regions. He then read a short extract on the subject from a letter from Mr. Coates, who, he said, was one of the most enterprising merchants in the Punjab. They had not, however, continued the Chairman, the power in any way, at present, of meeting the demands made on them. Mr. Danvers, Government Director, in passing over the Punjab, saw a great quantity of goods stored at one of the stations, and the native merchants came as a sort of deputation, and earnestly remonstrated against the cruelty of their obtaining goods at that station without having the means of forwarding them—a circumstance which showed that they were fully alive to the advantages of railway communication, and also fully alive to the great advantages which the port of Kurrachee presented to them: since its recent improvement. Apropos of Kurrachee, several private capitalists had entered into an arrangement by which a steamer would leave London every fourth week for that port, and, after leaving Kurrachee, would visit all ports in the Persian Gulf. Bringing Kurrachee in this way into, he might say, immediate communication with London was a proposition of the utmost importance to the company, and, if the "missing link" were only supplied, they would look forward to great things from it. No great prosperity of any description, however, could occur to them till that line was finished—till they had through railway communication from Lahor to the sea. While communication was carried on by steamers totally inadequate to meet the demands made on them, and by most crazy native craft, every improvement connected with the Punjab and North-Western Provinces must be delayed. For a long time they had seen the importance of connecting Ferozepore with their main line. It was on the Sutlej, and was a great military depôt, and an entrepôt for the commerce of the large and productive districts around. They had now everythe productive districts around. had now opened negotiations, with every hope of success, for the construction of a line to connect Ferozepore by a branch with the main line. It would be about twenty miles long, and the work could be easily executed. They had also opened negotiations with, he hoped, every prospect of success, for the working and maintenance of the Indus Valley line, to which they attached great importance. Great delay, however, had attended the construction of that line. It was fourteen years since their engineers surveyed it, and he was now told the lower section would not be finished till that time next year, and that the upper section would not be opened till another year; and then there was a bridge to be built over the Indus at Sukkur, with the enormous span of 680ft, which would take another year. The delay was not the fault of the present governmental authorities, it was the fault of their predecessors—of those who introduced "that most idiotic measure for the break of gauge." In the present depressed state of exchange in India it was gratifying to find that the present Government had the courage to go on as they did with the construction of this most important railway. The trade of India, notwithstanding that it had been generally languishing, had, according to recent statements, been slowly reviving for the last two or three years, and at the close of the last financial year the exports exceeded by over £2,000,000, and the imports by upwards of £5,000,000, those of the previous financial year.—Mr. E. Thornton, a director, in seconding the report, said the Chairman had omitted to state that the large bridges in the Punjab had successfully resisted the additional strain put on them during the heavy floods of the half-year. In reply to questions, the Chairman said when the "missing link" was finished their steamers, unless they were worn out, would have plenty to do in developing the local traffic from port to port. They had every possible claim to construct the missing link, having projected, surveyed, advocated, and initiated it entirely; and unless it were given them to work the result would be most unsatisfactory to the Government and to them. The report was then adopted unanimously, and, the retiring directors and auditors having been re-elected, the proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman, the directors, and other officers.

Miscellaneous.

THE STAR OF INDIA.—The Gazette notifies that the Queen has been pleased to nominate the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, Governor of the Presidency of Madras, and Sir Philip Edmond Wodehouse, K.C.B., Governor of the Presidency of Bombay, to be Extra Knights Grand Commanders of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India.

INDIAN MUSEUM.—The Prince of Wales, the Empress Eugenie and Prince Imperial, the Princess Louise, the Duke and Duchess of Teck and children, visited the loan collection of his Royal Highness's Indian presents at the Indian Museum on Friday afternoon. Total number of visitors admitted Thursday, June 29, 2,612.

COLONEL O. BURNE'S INDIAN APPOINTMENT.—The appointment of Lieut.-Colonel O. Burne, c.s.i., as private secretary to Lord Lytton in India, the Army and Navy Gazette understands, was made for twelve months only. Colonel Burne is expected to return to the India-office next summer to resume his appointment there.

ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY.—At the examination for admission to the Royal Academy, Woolwich, which commenced on July 3, the principal portion of the literary examination will be held in the French Annexe, at the International Exhibition, Exhibition-road, South Kensington (entrance by the Indian Museum); and the Oral Examinations at No. 2, Victoria-street, S.W.

THE REPORT ON FUGITIVE SLAVES.—A volume of appendices of considerable size is yet to be issued in connection with the report of the Royal Commissioners on the question of Fugitive Slaves. It is said that this volume will contain documents of considerable importance, including a somewhat elaborate memorandum from the pen of Sir Bartle Frere.

CONSULAR.—FOREIGN-OFFICE, June 28.—The Queen has been pleased to approve Cavaliere Giovanni Gallian as Consul at Bombay, with jurisdiction on the coast of Hindostan, from Cape Comorin to Kurrachee, for his Majesty the King of Italy; Mr. C. T. Meili as Consul at Bombay for his Majesty the King of the Netherlands; and Don George B. Kerferd as Consul at Liverpool for the Republic of Nicaragua.

THE SILVER MARKET.—The Silver Market is becoming more and more disorganised, transactions having occurred at the low price of 50\(^3\)d. per oz. Large amounts, both in dollars and bars, being expected from Mexico, the United States, and elsewhere, a few days hence, the quotation may perhaps be no higher than 50d. India does not want any more silver; China, to which shipments have recently been made direct from San Francisco, is likely to become an exporter; and the question is—who is to become the buyer at all?

Home Medical Stores Department.—In consequence of the numerous complaints from the Medical Department in India of the manner in which the stores were despatched from England it has been decided to appoint an Examiner of Medical Stores at the India-office. This appointment has been given to Surgeon-Major F. N. Macnamara, M.D., whose name is well known in Calcutta, where he held the appointment of Chemical Examiner and Professor of Chemistry at the Medical College.—Home News.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The following were the exports to the East by the steamers of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company:—From Southampton, per Mirzapore, June 15—To Malta—Gold, £50,000; to Bombay — Silver, £47,000; to Penang, £6,400; to Singapore—Gold, £10,000; silver, £3,000; to Hong Kong—Silver, £40,000; to Shanghai, £5,700. Per Malwa, June 22—to Malta—Silver, £250; to Aden—Gold, £1,400; to Bombay—Silver, £38,300.

THE COMMITTEE ON THE DEPRECIATION OF SILVER.—There is no likelihood (says the London and China Express) of the Parliamentary Committee on silver currency presenting any formal recommendations to Parliament. In some other respects their work has also been unsatisfactory. They found the sources from which could they draw evidence as to the future supply of silver so utterly untrustworthy that they determined to call no witnesses on the subject. All they are likely to do will, therefore, be to report the evidence.

Assam Tea Company.—The report for last year states that the total income was £155,436, and the expenditure amounted to £106,624, leaving a net profit of £48,812, or an increase of £3,811 over 1874. The directors propose a dividend free of income-tax at the rate of 25 per cent., being  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. more than in the preceding year. This leaves a balance of £2,022 to be carried to reserve. The weather having proved very unfavourable during several months of the crop season, the real out turn has fallen short of the amount estimated by 102,400lb. of tea, while on the other hand the total cost in India and London has proved to be in excess of the sum estimated; but it is stated that against these disappointments the tea seed sold in India realised a larger sum, and the profit on exchange is considerably in excess of that made in 1874.

Funeral of Lord Sandhurst.—On Wednesday afternoon the remains of General Lord Sandhurst were deposited in the family vault in the churchyard of Digswell, Herts, in the presence of his nearest relatives and many attached personal friends. The corpsewas removed from Grosvenor-gardens at an early hour in the morning to Welwyn, where it was met shortly after two o'clock by the sons and other mourners and friends, who had served on the late General's staff both in India and Ireland. On reaching Welwyn the funeral procession, consisting of a hearse and four, and seven mourning coaches and pairs, was marshalled. After the coffin had been deposited in the vault, several wreaths from the bereaved wife and daughter of his lordship, and other devoted friends, were placed on the lid. The following is the inscription:—
"Wm. Rose Mansfield, 1st Baron Sandhurst; born June 21, 1819; died June 23, 1876."

Indian Appeal.—Cowasjee Nanabhoy v. Lallbhoy Vullubhoy.—This was an appeal by a Parsee against an order of the High Court of Bombay. The appellant was appointed manager to a certain cotton twist manufactory at Bombay, which establishment was the first to introduce this industry into Bombay. The company was wound-up after a brief period of unsuccessful efforts, but the mill and machinery, which had only cost 550,000 rupees, when sold by the liquidator realised 731,000 rupees, and against six months later 1,250,000 rupees. By the articles of the partnership agreement, the appellant was to have the management of the concern during his life, with a commission on sales effected. On the sale of the property, he took legal proceedings to recover damages for the consequent loss of this commission, the High Court holding that he was not entitled to compensation. Their lordships dismissed the appeal, with costs.

South Indian Railwar.—The ordinary general meeting of this company was held a few days ago at the offices, Leadenhall-street Mr. J. Chapman, the chairman, presiding. The report, an abstract of which has already appeared, was taken as read. The Chairman, in moving its adoption, said he was happy to say that since their last meeting some progress had been made. Since their last meeting they had obtained some notoriety, for the Prince of Wales had not only travelled over their line, but had also done them the honour to open one of the branehes—from Tuticorin to Madura. Mr. Juland Danvers, the Government director—who was present at the meeting—had also visited India, taking a careful inspection of the whole railway system there, and he was very well satisfied with the management of the line. The board were extremely satisfied with all the local officers. Sir R. M. Stephenson, the deputy chairman, formally seconded the adoption of the report, which was at once carried unanimously. The retiring directors, General Sir J. Alexander, Mr. Brockett, and Major-General Green, and the retiring auditor, Mr. Franklin, having been re-elected, the proceedings tecrninated.

INDIAN LEGISLATION.—Under the auspices of the East India Association, a meeting of gentlemen interested in the affairs of India was held on Wednesday, June 28th, at the Rooms of the Society, to consider the recent legislation of the Council of the Governor-General of India with special reference to the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Bill—a proposal which has excited much controversy and opposition in India. Mr. W. Tayler, late Commissioner of Patna, in opening the discussion, explained that the object of the Bill was to limit the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts throughout the Bombay Presidency in matters relating to the land revenue, and to increase the judicial powers of the Revenue officers, who would thus unite executive and judicial functions. Mr. Tayler, in condemning the measure, said that, admitting the general fact that the Revenue officer in India possesses greater facilities than a judge for forming an opinion regarding a contested claim connected with assessment, possession, or title, that advantage was more than counterbalanced by the absence of all possible prepossession or bias in the latter. By the universal consent and concurrence of mankind in general, entire confidence can and is only to be inspired where the tribunal entrusted with the adjudication of conflicting claims is absolutely and completely free from every possibility—whether of feeling, self-interest, prepossession, or idea—which may even by remote contingency affect or bias the judgment; and hence the general indignation and universal protest which this Government measure had provoked. In the discussion which followed Mr. Tayler's address general agreement was expressed with the views he had enforced.

The Opium Trade with China.—The first annual meeting of the subscribers and friends of the Anglo-Oriental Society for Suppressing the Trade in Opium was held on June 27, at the society's offices, King-street, Westminster. Mr. J. W. Pease, M.P., presided. The report stated that the total income of the society had been £927. 10s. 4d., and the expenditure £804. 3s. 1d., leaving a balance of £123. 7s. 3d. Mr. M. Stewart, M.P., moved the adoption of the report, and the re-election of the treasurer, secretary, and executive committee. Mr. H. Richard, M.P., in seconding the resolution, stated the terms of the motion which he was to bring before Parliament. [Vide our Parliamentary report of Tuesday, the 27th ult.] The resolution was adopted. Sir John Kennaway, M.P., moved, That this meeting is of opinion that the subsisting relations between Great Britain and China, supported as they are solely by the fear which the weaker nation entertains of the physical force of the stronger, are extremely unsatisfactory, and it is the duty of Great Britain to attempt to inaugurate a new era of mutual goodwill by withdrawing its protection from the opium trade, and it therefore pledges itself to use every effort in support of Mr. Richard's motion." Mr. Hanbury seconded the resolution, and it was agreed to. Mr. R. N. Fowler moved a resolution, thanking those gentlemen who had exerted themselves in Parliament on behalf of the movement. Mr. Ng Choy, a Chinese, seconded the motion. The resolution was put and carried. Dr. Legg moved a resolution declaring the opium traffic to be a national iniquity, and pledging the meeting to support the society in its efforts for its abolition. Mr. Clayton seconded and Mr. J. H. Taylor supported the motion, which was poken to by Sir Arthur Cotton. The resolution was put and carried.

Deputation to Lord Northbrook.—A deputation from Micheldever and East Stratton, Hants, waited upon Lord Northbrook at his residence in London on June 23, to congratulate him upon his return from India. Among those present were the Rev. W. A. Whitestone, vicar of Micheldever; Mr. W. W. Beach, M.P., the Rev. E. Jacob, Mr. Caird, c.B., Mr. Brewer, Mr. G. Bailey, and Messrs. Pain, Neate, Gale, W. Drake, Carter, Peake, Coles, Dear, Lumsden, and G. Smith. The vicar read and presented the address, at the same time expressing the regret of several members of the deputation who had been unable to attend, and among them the Mayor of Winchester and Archdeacon Jacob. Lord Northbrook warmly thanked the deputation for the address, and expressed his pleasure in again meeting his friends and neighbours, and in resuming the occupations and duties of an English country gentleman. He said that the confidence placed in his desire to do his duty by those who knew him best had been a great support and encouragement to him when in India; and that he was very grateful for the consideration shown to him under circumstances of some difficulty, both by his friends and by the public at large. With regard to the visit of the Prince of Wales to India, to which allusion was made in the address, Lord Northbrook observed that the Prince displayed in his intercourse with persons of all ranks and classes in India the grace, courtesy, and kindly feeling for which he is distinguished; that his Royal Highness had been indefatigable in taking advantage of every opportunity of cultivating the friendship of the princes and chiefs of India, and of assuring them in a manner which could not be mistaken of the lively interest taken by the Queen in their welfare. Lord Northbrook was convinced, both from his personal knowledge and from the testimony of those who had the best information, that the Prince had left behind him in India feelings of personal attachment on the part of the native princes and chiefs, which had strengthened the good relations which n

Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway.—The half-yearly general meeting of this company was held on June 23, at the offices; Finsbury-circus, E.C., Lieutenant-Colonel French, the chairman, presiding. The report, an abstract of which has already appeared, was taken as read. The Chairman, in moving its adoption, after referring with great regret to the death of Mr. Baynes, who had been secretary to the company for thirteen years, congratulated the shareholders that the Government had at last sanctioned the construction of the line they had so long wished for from Ahmedabad to Ajmere, a distance of some 300 miles. It would, he supposed, be on the narrow gauge and a state line—two circumstances to be much regretted. He wished it to be on the broad gauge and a part of the main line, so that there would be no "breakage of bulk." The line could be easily constructed, there being no difficulties in the way. The Government would furnish all the money and run all the risk; but in common, he believed, with nine-tenths of the shareholders of the guaranteed companies, they, as well as the Bombay Government, had protested against the break of gauge. The past half-year—to December last—had been the best they had had from the beginning of their work, and up to the 20th of May of the present half-year they had earned £12,400 in excess of the corresponding period of the previous year. He had no doubt the visit of the Prince of Wales had contributed largely to the traffic of the half-year, but the development of traffic and commerce on their line was steadily progressing. Another important matter was in reference to the bridge over the Saburmattee River at Ahmedabad. The bridge, which was 1,315 feet long and eighty-three feet high, was carried away last September; and from information which they had since received it appeared there had been no such rains since 1813. After the accident happened the engineer made a temporary arrangement by which there was very little interruption to the traffic. Mr. W. Hartridge, a director, seconded the adoption of the report, which was carried unanimously. Lord Gort and Mr. J. Mitchell, the retiring directors, and Mr. G. H. Harris, the retiring auditor, having been re-elected, the usual compliment to the chairman and directors terminated the proceedings.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO COLONEL DAUNT.—A very sad accident occurred in the High-street on Thursday afternoon, June 8, by which Colonel Daunt, of Eastbourne, lost his life. It appeared that Colonel Daunt had been staying with his brother, W. H. Daunt, Esq., at Hamptons, and was driving to Tunbridge railway station about two o'clock on Thursday afternoon to return to Eastbourne. He drove by himself in his brother's waggonette, using a very quiet horse; and just at the Shipbourne-road entrance to the town the horse jerked its head to dislodge a fly from its shoulder, and in doing so the bit fell from its mouth, either through the breaking of a strap or because the bridle had been too loosely fastened. Finding itself no longer under control the horse at once bolted, and the descent of ground at Dry Hill induced a greatly-accelerated speed, so that it rushed through the town at a tremendous pace, though it managed to avoid several vehicles until it reached the horse-wash at the Great Bridge. Here the available roadway had been narrowed by the excavations going on in connection with laying a new gas main, and unfortunately a waggon and team were standing in the narrow space, while on the other side a cart was passing, leaving no room for another vehicle to pass between. Colonel Daunt shouted to the teamsters to clear the way, but there was no time for this, and the runaway horse, in trying to avoid the cart, came into most violent contact with the waggon. By the force of the collision the waggonette was thrown up off the ground and completely over, and Colonel Daunt was precipitated with great violence into the road, falling with his whole weight upon his head. He was picked up quite insensible and removed to the surgery of Drs. Gorham and Ievers, and the latter gentleman gave immediate attention to otherwise. The symptoms clearly indicated that consequence and compression of the brain had resulted. cated that concussion and compression of the brain had resulted from the force of the fall, and that the injury was beyond the reach of medical aid. In this opinion Drs. Angier and Hooker both concurred, and the correctness of it was soon placed beyond all doubt, for the symptoms gradually became more aggravated, and death ensued soon after eight o'clock in the evening, consciousness never having returned from the moment of the melancholy occurrence. The deceased officer leaves a widow and very young family, he having been married only a few years.

The East Indian Railway.—The directors of this company, in issuing their fifty-ninth report for the half-year ended with December 31, state that the total receipts were £1,170,234, against £1,236,430, and the working expenses were £452,829, as compared with £492,327, leaving a balance of £717,405. On the Jubbulpore line the revenue was £76,788, against £77,859, and the expenditure amounted to £48,958, compared with £44,086, showing the nett earnings on this section to have been £27,830. The board are enabled to recommend a surplus distribution at the rate of 1s. 4d. per cent. on the consolidated stock and share capital, in addition to the guaranteed interest, leaving about £600 in hand. The expenditure on capital account on the main line to date was £26,213,158, and on the Jubbulpore line £3,376,415, of which in the former case £49,369, and in the latter case, £1,718 was expended during the past year.—The annual general meeting of the shareholders was held yesterday afternoon at the City Terminus Hotel, Mr. R. W. Crawford in the chair. The Chairman said that is. 4d. of dividend, in addition to the guaranteed interest, was not a great mercy to be thankful for, but until very lately they only earned a surplus dividend on the first half of the year, and that was owing to the famine traffic. The present was the first time it had been earned out of the ordinary business of the company without any adventitious aid, and for the whole year 1875 the profit amounted to 6s. 11d. The Government received a sum equal to that which the company divided amongst themselves; and, in point of fact, they had paid the Government back out of their advances to the company no less than £957,658, and since they had declared surplus dividends the company had divided a similar sum, and contributed £26,395 to the benevolent fund. There had been a very burdensome charge upon them beyond the control of anyone, and that was the depreciation in the value of silver. To the extent of their guaranteed dividend they were secured by their contract with the Government. The Government were bound to pay out of the earnings in India a sum which would make up 5 per cent. That was at the rate of 1s. 10d. to the rupee. The differences they had to get back for the purpose of distribution. They had this year, in June, to draw for £19,351. 3s.—that being their share out of the surplus profits, and they had incurred upon that a loss of £1,967. 16s. 3d., or about 10 per cent. That was to say that they sold their bill in England in order to obtain the cash to pay dividend at 1s. 7\frac{3}{4}d. per rupee, instead of getting, as they did in former times, a sum of 1s. 10d. If he had now to sell a bill, he did not believe he should get 1s. 7d. per rupee. They had received proposals from the Government to take their telegraphic establishment and plant, and the directors thought it would be to the advantage of the company to part with this when any definite proposal was made. The chairman concluded by moving the adoption of the report. Mr. J. C. Marshman, C.s.I., seconded the motion. Exception was taken to the granting an honorarium of £8,000 to Mr. Noad, the managing director of the company, who for thirty years had been secretary and managing director; and Dr. Beattie moved as an amendment, and Mr. M. Powell seconded, "That a sum of £8,000 be invested, and the annual proceeds be paid to Mr. Noad during his life." The Chairman announced that the amendment could not be received, as the amount had been paid, and it would be inoperative. The motion for the adoption of the report was carried by a large majority.

Imperial Parliament.

House of Commons, Friday, June 23.—The Organisation of THE ARMY.—After an unsuccessful attempt at a count-out, Captain Nolan called attention to the organisation of the army, with special reference to the new mobilisation scheme. He discussed at great length and with much minuteness the composition of our Corps d'Armée, contrasting them with the organisation of foreign armies. In many points he was understood to approve our system, but to complain chiefly that its units were too small, and that it would hereafter commit us to considerable expense.— Mr. Holms, who was interrupted by another ineffectual "count," discussed the mobilisation scheme, contending that if it were carried out we only had regulars for three army corps, militia for four, horses for one and ahalf, and guns for four. He repeated his former complaints of the composition of the army corps, and, criticising the proposals for the mobilisation of two corps this year, he sarcastically commented on the appointment of Sir William Codrington.—Mr. STANLEY replied to the various objections urged against the mobilisation scheme, and maintained that the weak points which had been pointed out were in reality the strength of the scheme. It did not aim at any extensive alteration in the manner in which our forces were arranged, but it purported to be an intelligent and intelligible scheme for marking out in a sort of time-table the precise place where particular troops would rendezvous under given contingencies. Declining to follow Captain Nolan into his technical disquisition on army organisation, he explained the consideration which had determined the grouping of regiments, and pointed out that the requirements of Colonial and Indian Services had exercised considerable effect on our arrange-At the same time there was no finality in them.—Mr. HARDY gave further explanations as to the history and character of the scheme, pointing out that it was based on the existing organisa-tion of the army. It was not a scheme for sending troops abroad, though that also had been considered and provided for. By mobilising two corps this year he was about to give the scheme a fair trial. The reserves would be called up, and he promised that there should be no concealment, but that the country should be informed how far it might rely on the scheme. Mr. Hardy also animal verted sharply on Mr. Holms's disparagement of Sir W. Codrington.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, June 26.—THE MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—Lord G. Hamilton, in reply to Mr. Smollett, said that none of the interest due from this company to Government on account of debenture debt since 1866 had been paid. It was true the sums needed for the working of the navigation and irrigation canals of the company had been defrayed for some years by the Government of India, less the receipts from the works; but notice had been given that no further advance would be made. In any future negotiations on this subject the chief object of the Secretary of State for India would be to reduce, if possible, the heavy annual charge thrown on the Indian Government by the arrangements now existing.

THE INDIAN LEGISLATURE.—Lord GEORGE HAMILTON, in reply to Sir G. CAMPBELL, said: Until 1858 it was the practice to lay Acts of the Legislative Council of India upon the table of the House, and I do not know why the practice was discontinued. There will be no objection to lay in future upon the table of the House Indian Acts after they have received the sanction of the Secretary of State for India.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, June 27.—INDIA AND CHINA.—Mr. RICHARD moved a resolution declaring that, having regard to the unsatisfactory nature of our relations with China, and to the desirability of placing those relations on a permanently satisfactory footing, the House is of opinion that the existing treaty between the two countries should be so revised as to promote the interests of legitimate commerce, and to secure the just rights of the Chinese Government and people.—He was followed by Mr. Stewart, Sir George Campbell, Sir George Balfour (during whose speech a count-out was unsuccessfully tried), Sir Charles Dilke, and Mr. Charley.—Mr. Bourke, in reply, said that the Government for a long time had thought is would be desirable to revise these treaties; they had been for many years in negotiation with other Powers, and they were now in consultation with France, Germany, and the United States on the subject. Until, however, they had two or three other Powers acting with them they had determined not to enter into negotiations with China on the subject.—After some remarks from Sir J. Kennaway, the motion was withdrawn.

House of Commons, Thursday, June 29.— The Proposed Indian Museum.—Mr. Fawcett asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether, before any charge was thrown upon the revenues of India for the erection and maintenance of an Indian Museum in London, the House would be afforded an opportunity of considering whether it was just to make the people of India contribute to the expense of erecting and maintaining such a museum.-Lord G. Hamilton: There are no definite proposals before the Secretary of State for India for the erection and maintenance of an Indian Museum. The question of the hon. gentleman is, therefor, to a certain extent hypothetical. The Secretary of State for India would not give his sanction to any proposal by which the whole cost of an Indian Museum would be thrown upon Indian revenues, and it would Indian Museum would be thrown upon Indian revenues, and it would only be in the event of the Treasury agreeing to share the expense that he would sanction a disbursement from Indian revenues. In such a contingency a vote would have to be taken in this House, and the hon gentleman would have full opportunity of expressing his opinion upon the whole subject. -Mr. FAWCETT wished to known whether, if the Secretary of State entered into any arrangement by which part of the cost was thrown on the Indian revenues, the House would be afforded an opportunity of discussing the expediency of that arrangement. Lord G. Hamilton: The procedure under which money from the Indian revenues can alone be voted is laid down in the Act of Parliament, from which the Secretary of State alone derives his powers, and I see no reason why in this particular case there should be any departure from the practice of the past eighteen years.—Mr. FAWCETT gave notice that he would move a resolution on the earliest opportunity he could find, to the effect that it was unjust to call upon the people of India to pay either the whole or part of the expense of erecting the museum.

Indian Civil Service.—Mr. Lowe asked the Under-Secretary of State for India what steps the Government had taken to remedy the block of promotion now existing in the Indian Covenanted Civil Service.—Lord G. Hamilton: A despatch was sent out last year, and upon the receipt of that despatch the Indian Government appointed a committee to inquire into the whole subject. A very elaborate report containing important suggestions was made by this committee, and received by the India-office in April. Since then the matter had been constantly before the Secretary of State, but the question is one of no little difficulty, involving, as it does, both the promotion and retirement of the Indian Civil Service. A despatch containing proposals to mitigate the present block and prevent its recurrence only awaits the sanction of the Indian Council, and I hope will be sent out in a few days to India. There will be no objection to its production.—Mr. Lowe: Has the noble lord any objection to lay the despatch of which he spoke on the table.—Lord G. Hamilton: No.

THE EX-KING OF OUDE.—In reply to a question which stood on the paper in the name of Mr. Waddy, Lord G. Hamilton further stated that there would be no objection to produce certain papers relating to the debts of the ex-King of Oude.

HOUSE OF LORDS, FRIDAY, June 30.—THE SLAVE TRADE.—The Marquis of Salisbury moved the second reading of the Slave Trade Bill.—The Earl of Northbrook was satisfied that the administrations of the native States in India would co-operate heartily with the Government of India in any measure for the suppression of the slave trade. He would reserve any remarks upon the measure until they were in committee; but he would like to ask, if any correspondence had taken place between the Governor-General of India and the Secretary of State in Council upon this subject, that it should be laid upon the table before they went into committee upon the Bill.—After a few words from Lord Stanley, the Marquis of Salisbury objected to the production of correspondence which did not relate to this Bill, but mainly dealt with legal points arising out of a decision in one of the law courts. It would not afford any material aid to the judgment of the House in respect to this Bill.—The Bill was read a second time.

House of Lords, Monday, July 3 .- The Malay Peninsula.

The Earl of CARNARVON indicated the future policy of her Majesty's Government with respect to the Malay Peninsula, and a motion which had been proposed by Lord STANLEY of ALDERLEY was withdrawn.

HOTER OF COMMONS, MONDAY, July 3.—SLAVERY IN THE RED SEA.—In reply to Sir Henry Wolff, Mr. Bourke said her Majesty's Government had received a great number of reports about slavery in the Red Sea, and as to the quarantine regulations, he had no hesitation in saying that as at present administered they were very injurious to British trading vessels.

CHART OF INDIA.

ARTHUR ALLEN DURTNALL, of the High Court of Chancery. Price, fully Tinted, mounted on Roller, or in Case, 20s. Size, about 40 in. by 50 in.

Showing, at one view, all the principal nations, governments, and empires which have existed in that country from the earliest times to the suppression of the Great Mutiny, A.D. 1959; with the date of each historical event according to the rarious eras used in India. By this Chart, any person, however ignorant of the subject, may, by an hour's attention, obtain a clear view of the broad lines of Indian History, and of the evolutions which have resulted in the dominion of her Majesty as EMPRESS OF INDIA. It will be found invaluable for EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES, especially in Colleges and Schools, where an Indian career is in contemplation. It will also be found of permanent utility in all Libraries and Oflices as a work of ready reference for the connection of events and dates. Besides the History of India, it includes the contemporaneous histories of Afghanistan, Central Asia, and

RELIEVO INDIA.

HENRY BRION.

In Frame, 21s.

"A map of this kind brings before us such a picture of the surface of a given country as no ordinary map could ever do. To the mind's eye of the average Englishman, India consists of 'the plains' and 'the hills,' chiefly of the former, the hills being limited to the Himalayas and the Nilginis. The new map will at least enable him to correct his notions of Indian geography. It combines the usual features of a good plain map of the country on a scale of 150 miles to the inch, with a faithful representation of all the uneven surfaces, modelled on a scale thirty-two times the horizontal one; thus bringing out into clear relief the comparative heights and outlines of all the hill-ranges, and showing broad tracts of uneven ground, of intermingled hill and valley, which a common map of the same size would hardly indicate, except to a very practised eye. The plains of Upper India are reduced to their true proportions; the Central Provinces, Malwa, and Western Bengal reveal their actual ruggedness at a glance; and Southern India, from the Vindhyas to Cape Comorin, proclaims its real height above the scalevel. To the historical as well as the geographical student such a map is an obvious and important aid in tracing the course of past campaigns, in realising the conditions under which successive races carried their arms or settlements through the Peninsula, and in comprehending the difference of race, climate, and physical surroundings which make up our Indian Empire. Set in a neat frame of maplewood, the map seems to attract the eye like a prettily-coloured picture, and its price, a guinea, should place it within the reach of all who care to combine the useful with the ornamental."—Home News.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Agus. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PAGE Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regreted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 1814 July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J.

THE INDIAN EMPIRE. CHIEFS OF

In 1874-75, we discussed the use of Native Chiefs to the British Government in India. We gave the outlines of a comprehensive scheme for their employment in garrisoning the frontiers of the Empire. We showed that in so employing their forces we should gratify and honour them while disarming them, and should at the same time set free our own forces now employed in watching theirs. Though that scheme was accompanied by some statistics, we have reason to believe that very much fuller details are required to show the importance of the Native Chiefs to our Empire, and the necessity for some such measure as was then proposed. It is, moreover, evident from the recent discussion regarding the Queen's new title of Empress of Hindustan that an accurate knowledge of the real status of the Chiefs will be useful in dispelling absurd exaggerations such as have been gravely put forward by writers and speakers who should have known better. Sir George Campbell certainly ought to be aware that the Nizam of Hyderabad, a Mahomedan ruling a Hindu population; that the Maharaja of Cashmere, a Hindu ruling a Mahomedan population; that the Chiefs of Gwalior and Indore, Mahratta ruling Rajput populations, do not at all answer to the description of "Heads of great clans like the Dukes of Argyll." They are the descendants of conquerors, governing dominions won by the sword.

Similarly, the writer in Vanity Fair, who stated, "There are in the peninsula one hundred and forty-eight States, of which she is neither Empress nor Queen. . . . Hyderabad, . . . Gwalior, or Baroda, or Jaipur cannot, without an insult to the rulers of those independent provinces, be called either part of the Kingdom or part of the Empire of the Queen," must have had some suspicion that he was writing nonsense. He had probably never read a certain "sunnud" granted to the Nizam of Hyderabad and all the other dependent Chiefs in 1862, and prized by each and every one of them as the most precious of their titledeeds. The word "sunnud" means, according to Richardson's Persian Dictionary, "a royal ordinance, mandate, or decree, a patent, grant, document, warrant, any royal deed of appointment under which another acts." This is its technical meaning. Its literal meaning is "a prop, anything upon which another leans, or by which it is supported." This "sunnud" runs as follows (and all those granted to the other Chiefs are couched in the same terms):-

"Sunnud granted to His Highness the Nizam of Hyderabad, dated 11th March, 1862.

"Her Majesty, being desirous that the Governments of the several princes and Chiefs of India who now govern their own territories should be perpetuated, and that the representation and dignity of their houses should be continued, I hereby, in fulfilment of this desire, convey to you the assurance that on failure of natural heirs any succession to the Government of your State, which may be legitimate according to Mahomedan law, will be upheld. Be assured that nothing shall disturb the engagement thus made to you so long as your house is loyal to the Crown, and faithful to the conditions of the treaties, grants, or engagements which record its obligations to the British Government.

> (Signed) " CANNING."

The right to grant such royal warrants is inherited by Her Majesty from the Emperors of Dehli, to whose Empire she has succeeded, and whose confirmation was always necessary to the successions of their feudatories, the Nizams of Hyderabad and others. Had it not been medically certified that the health of the ricketty child who is the present Nizam of Hyderabad would have suffered from the journey, that Chief would have attended with the others-

Gwalior, Baroda, Jaipur, &c.—either at Bombay or Calcutta, to pay homage to the Heir-Apparent of the Empire. So much for these States not being part either of the Kingdom or of the Empire. After the exposure of this gross error, we will leave the list itself to demonstrate the fallacy regarding the "one hundred and forty-eight independent States."

There is, moreover, another reason which renders the affording of a complete list of the Chiefs, with statistics showing their wealth and power, very desirable. The Indian Government has lost a great opportunity in not disposing, on the occasion of the Prince's visit, of the vexed question of precedence of the Native Feudatory Princes. Twice during the last five years has the Indian Foreign Office been discredited by a dead lock in State ceremonial arrangements caused by this question remaining in suspense.

At a durbar held in Rájpútana, in 1871, by the late Earl Mayo, the Raja of Jodhpore actually refused to attend, and remained sulking like Achilles in his tent, because he would not accept the place assigned him by the Foreign Office. Again, when the Punjab and Rájpút Chiefs met the late Viceroy at Delhi in 1874, it was found impossible to arrange for them to sit in durbar together, and at the last moment the arrangements had to be altered. At Bombay, and again at Calcutta, where numerous Chiefs with undefined precedence were assembled, much heart-burning arose. The Maharana of Udaipur actually remained standing through a ceremony sooner than sit below Baroda.

These may appear small matters to the British public, but in India very much depends on the tact, foresight, and judgment of the Foreign Office in such matters; and diplomatic arrangements are facilitated to an extent not conceivable in Europe by attention to the susceptible dignity of our feudatories. At the same time there is a limit where concession becomes weakness, and to allow the present state of things to continue is merely to court a repetition of contretemps such as those referred to. Nowhere is the fiat of the paramount Power accepted with such entire acquiescence as in India. It is because all is unsettled, and there is no fiat, that each Chief is insolent in self-assertion. Let the Empress of Hindustan once prescribe the relative places and positions of all by an Imperial warrant, and let it be understood that the arrangement is final, and the decision will be completely and entirely accepted. Each Chief will then be much better satisfied than now, when uneasy with the feeling that perhaps he is conceding too much, and that by more selfassertion he might obtain more.

Below, then, is offered, suggestively, a list of the Chiefs of India as they might be graded by the Foreign Office for such a general meeting of the feudatories as should have been held, say at Agra. to pay homage to the Heir-Apparent of the Empress. Though merely suggestive in this respect, the list will also be useful statistically, in the absence of any other sources of information than the "Treaties and Sunnuds" of the present Foreign Secretary, which is immensely voluminous and now somewhat out of date; or the incomplete compilation therefrom recently published by Colonel Malleson.

Only those Chiefs are given who exercise sovereign powers, and who are entitled to salutes. There are, besides these, certain titular princes, such as the Nawab Nizam of Bengal, or the Maharaja of Benares, who receive salutes, and also a host of petty Chiefs who exercise various degrees of jurisdiction on their estates, but whom it is unnecessary to grade, as they would not be included in a durbar such as that contemplated. The titular princes might receive places among the other Chiefs according to the number of guns to which they are entitled as salutes.

	. REMARKS.		This Chief is Racile Princeps—the undisputed Premier Peer of the Indian Empire. The present salute is 21 Guns.	Population and wealth of territory, high and ancient lineage, indicate this Chief for the 2nd rank in the Empire, though doubtless his status is less assured than that of many others. The family had been expelled by Hyder Aly, and this portion of their state was restored to them by the British Government of	free grace, after the defeat and death of Hyder Aly's son, Tippoo. It has been almost continuously, and still is, under British management. The present salute is 21 Guns.		This family is quite modern and of low origin; the present Chief is not a lineal, but an adopted heir. Nevertheless, considerations of population and wealth; of the fact that this was a kingdom which thrice waged war with us on equal terms;—and finally, the signal services of the Chief in 1857, for which he was rewarded by the restoration of territory worth £30,000 formerly ceded by him on account of the	Substituty force, cuttle twantor to the ord rank in the Empire. The present salute is 19 truns. This Chief's present salute is 21 duns. He is not entitled thereto by the size or wealth of his State. Baroda has never held the status that dwallor has, and the Chiefs have never rendered any services of importance. The last chief has just been deposed for misconduct. The family is quite modern, and of low origin. The salute should be reduced to 19 Guns, and the rank of 4th Chief of Empire is amply	adequate to the claims of the State.  This family is quite modern and of low origin. Its founder, like that of the Gwalior and Baroda families, was as soldier of fortune among the Mahrattas. Neither on this score, nor on that of population or wealth, is this Chief entitled to the position assigned. The ground for assigning it is the historical importance of the State, which, like Gwalior, has twice fought the British upon equal terms. It further rendered some service during 1857. As the 3rd of the great Mahratta kingdoms, Indore has fair claims to	rank fifth amongst the Peers of the Empire. The State lapsed in 1844, and was bestowed upon the present Chief of the free grace of the British Government. The present salute is 19 duns. Though inferior in wealth to many of the States randow him, this Chief is the head of all the Rájpúts, and on the score of immensely ancient and noble descent, and of great-consideration enjoyed among the Hindú population on that account, he is well entitled to 6th place in the Empire. The only question is whether he should not rank above Indore. He rendered no services in the mutiny, nor is his government worthy of praise. The salute is at present 17 Guns, and should be increased to 19	This family is of yet more modern origin than those of the Mahratta Chiefs. The State is a creation of our own, out of the debris of the Sikh kingdom, as late as 1846. Nevertheless its extent, wealth, and important position on the Prontice, and the loyal services of the Chief in 1857, entitle him to the position may appear a solute of the contract	This family is of very ancient and honourable descent. It has been our constant ally from the earliest days of our power in Madras, and is fully entitled on this ground, and on the score of population and	weakin, to the our piace in the Amprie. The present saline is 19 tuns.  He important position of this Chief one our Frontiers, and his different status to that of the other. Fondstories (being much less immediately dependent), entitle him to this rank in spite of the weakness and poverty of the State itself. The State was conquered, but restored by us in 1841. The present salute is	19 Guns.  The Chief of this State is the representative of the founder of the Mahratta power, and is consequently titular head of the great Mahratta Chiefs. On this account he is placed higher than considerations of the population and wealth of his State would otherwise entitle him to be. He was faithful in 1857. The present salute is 19 Guns.

This consideration, together with his eminent services rendered as an ally in the Panjáb war of 1849, entitle him to rank above wealthier States and Chiefs of more ancient and higher descent. The Chiefs present salute is 17 duns.

Summary and Review.

Our latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, June 16; Agra, Madras, and Allahabad, June 14; Calcutta, June 13.

Dr. Bellew's presence in Simla, when he might have been enjoying himself in other ways at Katmandu, had naturally given rise to some speculation, pointed by the further fact of his recent interviews with the Viceroy. Dr. Bellew is one of the foremost Pashtu scholars in India, and his possible employment in some political field where Pashtu is spoken at once suggested itself to many minds. Even the Pioneer admits that "there is no doubt something in Dr. Bellew's visit to Simla," although it questions the likelihood of any immediate mission to Afghanistan. Lord Lytton, according to our contemporary, "seems the last man in the world to make the mistake of plunging into any new projects on the strength of his prepossessions, without having given himself time to check them by observation and experience." We hope that this estimate of the new Viceroy will prove true, and that the Simla season of 1876 "will not be distinguished by the political activity of the Government." In all likelihood the settlement of the Sind and Punjab frontiers on a new basis, and some revision of our relations with Afghanistan will be subjects of discussion during the next cold weather; but for the present "stand easy" appears to be the order of the day.

A KASHMIR correspondent of the Pioneer deprecates the gloomy accounts of cholera that have been forwarded by way of Lahor. The disease, he declares, is subsiding rapidly, and, indeed, has almost disappeared. He ridicules the idea that a tour in the valley is dangerous, and points out that about a hundred and eighty British subjects are just now enjoying themselves there. Intending visitors to the beautiful valley would doubtless be reassured by this information, which comes, we are told, from a trustworthy source.

ACCORDING to the latest mail news from Khelat the Khan of Khelat reached Mastang on the 31st of May, Captain Shepherd and Dr. Duke going with an escort of Punjab Cavalry to meet him. Everything so far was well. The general belief was that Major Sandeman would soon be able to arrange terms of peace between the Khan and his Sirdars, and that the Bolan Pass will be kept permanently open.

THE Maharaja of Jaipur paid a private farewell visit to the Viceroy at Peterhoff on the afternoon of June 15. His Highness was to leave Simla early the next morning for his own capital, escorted beyond Boileaugunge by the Deputy Commissioner and two Aides-de-Camp of the Viceroy.

CAPTAIN WILSON, of the Bengal Army, who was lately appointed tutor to the young Rajah of Mysor, has already taken up his new duties. It is stated in a local paper that Mr. Saunders, the new Chief Commissioner of Mysor, intends to proceed very shortly to the city of that name, in order to consult the Ranis, or Royal ladies, on the expediency of settling the Maharaja at Bangalor until the attainment of his majority. Colonel Malleson was also at Bangalor, having left the Palace Controller to act as the Rajah's guardian.

It is said that Sindiah's visit to Simla is inspired by his wish to get some part of the Jhansi district. The Jhansi fort was given over to his Highness after the mutiny of 1857: it stands on a high rock overlooking and completely commanding our cantonment of Jhansi.

Among the deaths reported by the last mail is that of Colonel Kenneth Macaulay, commanding the 37th Madras N.I. The deceased officer, who died while on leave at Bangalor by his own hand in a fit of insanity, entered the Madras Infantry in 1840, remained a "local" in 1861, and became a full colonel in 1871. On the same day at the same place died Colonel F. B. Campbell, of the 14th Hussars, whose first commission, in the 79th Foot, dates from 1854, and who became lieutenant-colonel last year. His war services include the siege of Sebastopol in 1855, the capture of Lucknow, and other incidents in the mutiny campaigns of 1857.59, during part of which he served with the 1st Punjab Cavalry.

THE Indian Government has also lost a useful and meritorous servant in Mr. W. G. McIvor, Superintendent of the Chinchona Plantations in the Nilgiri Hills.

WE note that Colonel Macintire is appointed to command the Haidarabad Subsidiary Force with Brigadier General's rank from June 21, vice General Blake, whose tour of command would then expire.

DOCTOR BELLEW is to be the new Sanitary Commissioner of the Punjab in the room of Surgeon Major A. C. DeRenzy. Colonels H. B. Urmstone and P. Maxwell retire under the commutation scheme. Major E. P. Gurdon and Mr. Wakefield are appointed Deputy Commissioners. It is widely reported in the Punjab that the probable successor to Sir H. Davies will be Mr. R. E. Egerton, c.s.i., the present Financial Commissioner.

THE Indian Daily News hears of changes pending, or contemplated, in some of the Chief Commissionerships. It is said that the separate Government of the Central Provinces is to be abolished—one portion of the territory being allotted to Bombay, another portion to the North-West Provinces, and the remainder to Orissa, which is to be formed into a Chief Commissionership to relieve Bengal. If this be so, the last-named province is fast being shorn of its olden grandeur. Assam was lopped off some time ago; and, if Orissa is taken, the old province will be brought to reasonable dimensions. It is thought—says our contemporary—" that the object of these reductions is to bring the province more nearly into proportion with the capacity of its rulers."

THE Government of Bengal is uneasy in mind on account of the drunken habits of the Santhals, those rude but interesting aborigines to whom Mr. W. Hunter devoted many pages of his "Rural Bengal." In prehistoric days Marang Bare, the god of the Santhals, showed the first couple of the race how to brew themselves strong drink; and the Santhal of the present day has bettered the teaching of his forefathers. When a child is admitted into the tribe, a ceremony is performed, of which a carousal with rice-beer is a leading feature, and about five years afterwards admission into the race is celebrated according to the same pleasant fashion. Twenty gallons of beer atone for small offences. At a marriage, hard-drinking is the rule, and "the vice of intemperance," says Sir Richard Temple, "is in this way being taught to the young," even to the Santhal maidens. Even the rare luxury of a divorce can only be pronounced after the brewing and consumption of much rice-beer; and at last the Santhals have become such drunkards that the Bengal Government has turned its attention to the matter. "The unrestricted consumption of the home-brewed rice-beer," says Sir restricted consumption of the home-brewed rice-beer," says Sir-Richard, "if continued, must affect very injuriously, not only the physique but the character and quality of the race." Whole villages have been found drunk for days together on this home-brewed packacas, which has the two-fold merit of being cheap and easy of manufacture. The missionaries recommend the Government to set up its own breweries, to which the people should be allowed to bring their rice to be turned into beer, to stop private brewing altogether, shut up all the rice-beer shops, and if the people will drink spirits to make them so dear that hardly any one will be able to buy them. Sir R. Temple, however, declares his aversion from compulsory measures, although he considers that the existing evil "is such as a civilised Government, having the responsibilities which we have in regard to the people, cannot tolerate, and must seek to mitigate or prevent, so far as such mitigation or prevention may be possible." He is disposed to rely on the force of example and persuasion. The local officers are to be instructed to send for the various headmen of districts and of villages, and to concert with them measures for restricting the excessive consumption of the rice-beer. These men must, says Sir Richard, know the bad effects of drinking too much rice-beer, and they can induce the villagers to put some restraint on their bad habits. By voluntary agreements of this sort, coupled with the exclusion of any man who is an habitual drunkard from serving as a headman, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks that the people may become temperate in their habits, and that restrictions may be put in force which shall have the effect of stopping the home brewing of rice-beer which is now so extensively carried on. The missionaries are asked to report any instances of wholesale drunkenness amongst the people, and Sir Richard concludes by advising his subordinates to use their utmost efforts in the suppression of the evil.

The memorial lately forwarded from India by certain officers of the Uncovenanted Civil Service prays Lord Salisbury to grant them and their fellows the following boons:—(1.) A reduction of the time of residence in India required to earn a pension. (2.) A graduated scale of pensions allowing a certain increment for each additional year's service. (3.) A relaxation of the limit of age for commencing pensionable service. (4.) The fixing of the maximum limit of all pensions in pounds sterling instead of rupees. With regard to the first point it is urged that, while civil servants in England serving in their native climate have a claim to pension, on failure of health after ten years' service, and covenanted civil servants are entitled to one after five years, an uncovenanted officer cannot claim an invalid pension until after fifteen years. It appears moreover that, while the Covenanted Civil Servant earns a right to his retiring pension after twenty-five years, of which four may be speat on leave, the Uncovenanted cannot claim a pension until thirty years have been cerved in India, exclusive of all leave. With regard to the second head of complaint, it is pointed out that, while the pension of the Covenanted Civil services in India and Ceylon, and all services in England, increase after each additional year served, no increase is allowed to the memorialists until ten additional years have passed, or twenty-five years in all. Under the third head we find that uncovenanted officers are debarred from counting service for pension before the age of twenty two, whatever posts they may have previously held. Finally the outside limit of their pensions is fixed in rupees, instead of pounds sterling, a serious difference in these days of depreciated rupees,

THE mere facts of the case thus presented speak for themselves. Seeing that most of the English uncovenanted officers "are drawn from the same classes as the Covenanted Civil Service, and that the effect of the Indian climate on them must be the same," why should the former be obliged to serve thrice as long as the latter for an invalid pension, and halt as long again as an English civil servant in his own country? If a covenanted civilian has to serve only twenty-one years in India for his retining pension, on what grounds must the uncovenanted serve nine years longer for his? Is it fair again to leave out of the reekoning towards a pension such time as an officer may have served before the age of twenty-two? Until these and the other inequalities pointed out by the memorialists shall have been greatly lessened or wholly removed, they will have reason to complain of injustice done them for no apparent cause.

According to a Times telegram of July 9 from Calcutta the Legislative Council is at last in full work at Simla, but no very important measures are pending. On Thursday, July 6, Sir W. Muir presented the committee's report on the Opium Bill, which aims at introducing throughout the country a uniform system of laws regarding the manufacture of the drug and the collection of the revenue. The Presidency Magistrates' Bill has been amended, and its passing postponed until the Council meets in Calcutta. This measure, intended to diminish the criminal powers of the High Courts by largely increasing the magistrates' powers, when first published gave much dissatisfaction. Some of the objectionable features have now been removed.

FROM the same source we learn that the pacification of Khelat proceeds favourably. The Khan and the Sarawan Sirdars are now settling their disputes at Mastang under Colonel Sandeman's auspices. No bad result appears to have followed the contretemps mentioned last week. It is stated that Colonel Sandeman returns to the Punjab at the end of July, and it is feared that his departure may be the signal for a renewal of the old feuds. The Khan and his chiefs being little better than savages, small reliance can be placed on their promises; but if the Bolan Pass be kept open for commerce much will be gained.

A STRANGE story comes from Peshawar, purporting that the Commissioner summoned the Afridi Chief and told him that if the Afridis did not submit the Government would send an expedition against them in the winter. The Chief replied that the Afridis wished to try the strength of the Government. The story is hardly probable, but the fact remains that the hillmen still defy us. The Kohat Pass, which is the shortest route between the British districts of Peshawar and Kohat, traverses the country of the Afridis, enabling them to give us constant annoyance. The first collision occurred soon after the annexation of the Punjab. under Sir Charles Napier and Sir Colin Campbell chastised them in 1850. Since then numerous expeditions have been undertaken against them, each resulting, after a short but sharp struggle, in the submission of the tribes and the infliction of a fine, with quiet for a year or two and then renewed outrages.

It is announced—telegraphs the Times' correspondent—that the Commander-in-Chief will take a four months' tour among the frontier stations, starting from Simla in October. The Viceroy will join him at Lahor, and accompany him part of the way. Possibly some definite course of action regarding the hill tribes may then be determined upon.

LAST Sunday a thunderstorm of unprecedented severity visited. Calcutte, and some damage was done in the suburbs.

WE are glad to see that Lord Salisbury's Bill for bringing the subjects of native Indian princes under the Jurisdiction of British Courts in the matter of the slave-trade has made its way safely through the House of Lords, in spite of Lord Stanley's efforts to save the dignity of the Native States concerned in compliance with what he calls "the law of nations." Persunately the Secretary for India had a powerful ally in Lord Marabbacob, who bore witness from his own experience to "the desire of the Native Princes of India to support any measure for the suppression of the slave-trade." What the lamest nestions has to do with matters which concern, the Racof Chatch, and one or two other vassals of the Empress of India, in their relations with the Indian Government, we are at a loss to see. The common-sense of the Peers was satisfied with the assurance that the Rac of Cutch and his fellow princes had no thought of asserting their fancied rights on behalf of those Biniana who might be charged with carrying on a trade which even the law of nations has virtually proscribed. A becoming regard for the rights of native princes would hardly warrant the rulers, of India, in, asking their express consent to measures which consern the whole Empire, to say nothing of the world at large. There was more reason in Lord Northbrook's complaint that the Bill in question had not been referred to the Indian Government. Lord Salisbury indeed owned that it had not been so referred, but he reminded Lord Northbrook that the main points of the Bill had been suggested by the late Vicerey himself, and he implied that the substance of the measure had been duly considered by the Indian executive.

In a comprehensive and generally well-informed: anticle on the defeats of the Indian Army as now organised, the Pince unfortunately reproduced an old but ill-founded fallacy about the Staff Officers of the old Company's service. Nothing, we believe, could be further from the truth than to say that those gentlemen "actually grumbled at being called from their comfortable places to active service in the field." It is impossible terangues for isolated cases; but as a rule it certainly was not the Staff officers who grumbled at having to join their regiments in time of war. So great, indeed, as the Home Nowe justly asserts, "was their eagerness to serve in the field whenever the opportunity for so doing presented itself, that the Government at length issued an order forbidding them from leaving their civil duties, unless their services in the field were specially reopired. If they ever grumbled, it was not because they had to join their regiments, but because they were not allowed to join them. During the Sikh wars scores of officers on Staff empley hurried up to the scene of action from places many hundred miles off, some of them from the farthest corners of Assam and Tenasserim, all careless of the comforts they had left behind them, and eager only to win new laurels in the coming campaign. On such occasions the grumblers were to be found not in the ranks of these soldier civilians, but among their regimental comrades who, having never left their regi ments, had little pleasure in seeing these others return to fill up their old places and to carry off the prizes which might else have fallen to their own share. The notion to which the Times has thus given fresh currency is just as groundless as that other notion, still current in many quarters, that the Company's Europeans were an ill-disciplined and mutinous body of troops. It is easy to say magna est veritas, &c., but it is very uphill work to fight a falsehood which has once taken root in popular conversation."

Ir is amusing to observe the bewildered guesses of some Indian journalists at the identity of that Sirdar Narain Singh, whose cause was lately pleaded in Parliament by Lord Selberne. The wildest guess of all is that which would identify him with Rám Singh, the leader of the Kuka sect, who was sent to Burmah after the Kuka outbreak in 1872. He, of course, "is not wanted back again in the Punjáb" just now; but what has Ram Singh to do with a Sikh chief who has been expatriated ever since 1849? The fact is that Sirdar Narain Singh is the same person who commanded the Sikh cavalry under Mulraj at the siege of Multan in 1848-49, a brave officer who was made prisoner with the remainder of Mulraj's army in January, 1849, and has not yet been allowed to revisit his native land, although many officers who remember his gallant forward bearing in the field of battle have interceded for him, and many high officials in British Burmah have borne witness to his good. behaviour in recent years. It is hard to see what possible danger there can be in letting him re urn to the Puniab after twenty-seven years of force cxile, and as many of British rule in that province.

THE following letter which lately appeared in the Times will! explain the reason of Sir John Kaye's silence touching the attacks lately made in various quarters on certain passages in the third volume of his great work. We are happy to hear that he, is slowly recovering from a serious illuess, but his state of health must still for some time preclude him from taking on the challenge thus offered :-

SIR.—The historian who undertakes to narrate military events of a pacent date, when many of the actors therein still live, must, I am aware, be proposed to many in the actors therein still live, must, I am aware, be proposed to many in the possible that the best-meaning historizing, with every disposition to means out and to record the truth, negative occasionally in his and evours. But it is much to be proposited when any of these critics advance their counter statements or opinions with anger and discountery.

There have been several onelaughts made lately on the third volume.

There have been several onstaughts made lately on the third volume of the "Sepoy Win," by my brother, Sir Jehn W. Kaye, both in pamphleta, and in letters published in newspapers. Among the former ir one written by an officer of the 62nd L. , which has been noticed in the public prints, and largely circulated among members of clube. This pamphlet has been couched in members of clube. This pamphlet has been couched in members of clube. This pamphlet has been couched in members of larguage.

Quing to the cristal state of my brother's health, which preclades him from presently replying to the attacks made on him, I have thought it desirable to wake a few lines on his behalf, and to request that his expense nexts—the Press and the public—will suspend their judgments until he is able again to resume his pen. Sir John Kaye is at present betalewig mecovaring from a severe illness, which, at one crisis, threatened to he found; and for some times caused his friends the greatest slarm: and for some time caused his friends the greatest slarm.

appears to be grounded on the fact of certain words in a memorandum by. Sergeant Smith, of the Sappera, having been printed in italies and expitate, the writer supposing the emphasis to be the historian's own.

Such, however, was not the case. The original memorandum was fits, wanded to the printer to prevent any mistakes; the italies and expitals were wanded to the printer to prevent any mistakes; the italies and capitals were those of the sergeant.

Sir John was insteaded by unificatings of animasity towards the segiment; it was impossible that such could have been the case, as the wan never acquainted with an officer in it. He was extremely anxious for information regarding the attack on the Cashmir Gate, and, while revising; for his second edition, wrote to Lieut gen. G. Campbell on the subject; but that officer did not think fit to comply with his request.

There were, however, a few words added by Sir John Kaye in a foot-nets, which might be read as if he adopted the accusation. This was not his intention, and in the second edition he added the word "somewhere" to make the application more general.

make the application more general.

If it be any satisfaction to the 52nd, I may say that I think the said. ments of the sergeant bear absurdity on their face. A delay of tenuminates and a longle-sound repeated fifty-times are prepostations. Single-sound repeated fifty-times are prepostations. Single-sound by the captains, and multiplied minutes and bugle-sounds by ten. I do not have seen, write to take up any argument in the matter, but to beg, Sir, a lithlands-lay with all wheadsaire further to criticise my brother's work, and to ex-plain how matters stand, lest his silence should be misconstrued.—Yeurs. faithfully, E. KATE, Lieutenant General, Worthing, June, 1876.

INDIAN SALT.—The Trans-Indus salt region has recently been explored and mapped out by the Geological Survey of India. The report of the officers engaged in that work shows the existence of enormous accumulations of pure rock salt over an area of about a thousand square miles. In extent and depth of the stratum these accumulations equal, if they do not surpass those in any other part of the known world. The Trans-Indus salt region consists of what is called the Kohat district to the west of the Indus and to the south-west of Peshawar, with which it is connected by the Affridi Pass, kept open by the payment of Rs. 12,000 annually as "black mail" to the Affridis by the British Government. The general aspect of the country is wild, barren, and rocky, almost bare of trees or vegetation; low hills intersect it, twisting and turning in strange confusion, and at times presenting such abrupt outlines that the traveller thinks he sees them crowned with fort and battlement. In this wild country large exposures of the purest rock salt occur. Quarrying has been going on in a desultory way for centuries; yet so vast are the saline deposits that, taking the depth of the rock salt at only 100 feet, there is still provision for the consumption of 1,000 years. The probability is that the thickness of the stratum is very much above 100 feet. In the quarries of Bahadar Khel the thickness of the salt layer cannot be less than 1,000 feet, and may be much more. The appearance of this valley is one not easily forgotten. It seems clothed with salt, and the figure of Lot's wife is only wanted to complete the blank desolation of the scene. The road underneath the wayfarer's foot is of salt, the brook which flows through the valley is of saturated brine, and flows over a bottom of pure rock salt. The of saturated brine, and flows over a bottom of pure rock salt. The hills which hem it in glisten with the same mineral, streaked with bands of greenish clay. What the age of these hoary cliffs and enormous accumulations of salt is no one can tell. Evidence of organic existence is scanty and uncertain; a few traces of grasslike plants, and a few faint impressions of shells have been found in the limestone layers, but none in the saline series. One school of modern geologists inclines to the belief that rock salt has been accumulated by the evaporation of salt-water, or the sea, under favourable circumstances. On this hypothesis it is hard to conceive the vast period which must have elapsed during the formation of the saline deposits of Bahadur Khel. To produce the two square miles of salt found there, with a thickness one fifth of a mile, it has been calculated that a volume of sea water of the same depth and 100 square miles of area would be required. It would be necessary to suppose the former existence in this tract of country of a great inland sea like the Caspian, whose waters gradually dried up, as the Caspian is now said to be doing. But this theory the general geological structure of the country negatives, and the formation of these immense saline beds still remains an unsolved problem.—Pioneer.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE DEPRECIATED RUPEE.

How much lower is the exchange value of the rupee to go down? Last week the Indian Council drew bills on India to the amount of half a million at the rate of 1s.  $6\frac{1}{2}$ d. the rupee. The 51 per cent. rupee paper has fallen to 79. The market value of private bills on India has fallen to 1s. 61d. the rupee. In Bombay and Calcutta the markets are "quite disorganised," and the exchange for bank bills on London at six months' sight has fallen to 1s. 65d. the rupee. How cruelly this state of things presses on those who invested their money in Indian rupee paper at a time when its selling value was much above par, and who now find that value reduced by more than 30 per cent., while their incomes are diminished by about 20 per cent. it needs no special insight to comprehend. It is easy to say that the Government agreed to pay its creditors in rupees, not in pounds sterling, and that if the rupee has fallen in value from two shillings to one and sixpence halfpenny the Government is in no way bound to make up the difference. But it ought at any rate to refrain, as far as possible, from measures tending to aggravate the existing evil, even if it did not rather interfere to keep up the current value of the rupee. Has the Government so refrained? It appears from the Times that the advertisements which are usually published once a fortnight by the Indian Council, inviting tenders for their bills and telegraphic transfers, have been the means of enriching others at the expense of the Council itself. "The Indian Council, in a word, by showing its hand a fortnight before the time, has encouraged the Indian banks to depress the market for their own purposes, and the new system of telegraphic transfers has materially aided them in so doing." If this be true, one can understand the outcry raised in Calcutta when the Council for a time reduced the number and amounts of its drawings on India. It is a pleasant game for the exchange brokers; but the unfortunate holders of rupee paper, and the bulk of persons engaged in the Indian trade, are not likely to enjoy the spectacle of Government playing into the brokers' hands. If no other course would serve to help at once the sufferers and the India Office, could nothing be made out of the remedy suggested by the Times; namely, "to make no further advertisements for tender, but to place the selling of the bills either in the hands of the Bank of England or of some leading London firm, to be disposed of according to circumstances, just as other remittances are?" Or is there any sound objection to the raising of a loan in this country, in order to defray the whole or some part of the yearly charges incurred by the India Office? That would, at i any rate, be better policy than raising loans in India to meet the heavy bills drawn at stated periods by the Indian Council on Bombay and Calcutta; a process to our thinking about as profitable as the proverbial sending of owls to Athens, or coals to Newcastle. If the Home Government has to spend eleven, twelve, or more millions a year at home, what earthly advantage can there be in drawing the amount from India at a time when the rupee has lost about one-fourth of its proper value, and the Government is losing more than two millions yearly on its Indian bills? For the present, at any rate, the Secretary for India would do well to issue no more drafts on the Indian Treasury. Let him borrow at home for a twelvemonth, and by the end of that time the present crisis may have passed

The causes of the present fall in the value of silver are thus clearly stated by the writer of a letter to the Times :- " First the increase in Indian Council drafts in 1875 as compared with former average years—say, £16,000,000 against £9,000,000; secondly, the depreciation of articles of import from Asia, notably cotton, jute, silk, and indigo; and thirdly, the demonetisation policy of Germany, which during the past two months has filled men's minds with intense alarm as regards the future of silver." Not a word is said about the increased production of silver; and it is pretty certain, in view of the trifling effect produced by the gold discoveries of former years, that this alone would never have caused the present crisis. But for Germany's recent dealings with her silver currency, the rupee might still be quoted at something like its nominal value. How to arrest the falling tendency is the question of the moment for civilised States. this point the writer above quoted makes some hopeful remarks. We are told that China is seriously considering the propriety of setting up a Mint for the introduction of national silver coins, her only currency being debased copper "cash," extremely inconvenient and bulky, and large lumps of silver, called shoes. It would be difficult—he adds—"to form any estimate of the probable absorption of silver by China should a national Mint be introduced; but the Anglo-Chinese press compute the probable circulation of token coins at £100,000,000 in course of ten to fifteen years. . . . . Supposing China required but half that amount, would this not tend to arrest the depreciation of silver, and probably re-establish its former value?" Large quantities of silver might also be absorbed, if Russia, Italy, and Austria would only substitute silver money for their small notes. The resumption of specie payments in America will more than make up for the increased production of the American mines. But Germany, which is mainly answerable for the present glut of silver, and England, which has to consider the interests of her Indian Empire, might do much between them, if they chose, to hasten the return of better days for all who suffer by the present state of things. It has been proposed in some quarters to make the rupee current in England at the value of the florin, just as the Australian sovereign now does duty for the English pound. Such a measure would be only fair to India, but it may be doubted whether it would do much to ease the present strain. Of measures of a more thorough nature, a double currency both for England and India, and indeed for Europe at large, would, to our thinking, have the best and most lasting effect. In a series of articles republished from the Siecle,* this mode of solving the silver difficulty is ably advocated by M. Henri Cernuschi, who sees in "Bimetallism," or the concurrent use of gold and silver money, the only safeguard against the depreciation of either metal, consequent on the adoption of a single standard of value. If his views are not those of orthodox financiers, his arguments appeal strongly to the common sense of all unprejudiced readers, founded as they are on the results of French legislation in 1803, and agreeing as they do with the opinions held by such thinkers as Aristotle, Locke, and Newton, and with the principles applied by Sir Robert Peel to the Bank Charter Act of

M. Michel Chevallier et le Bimé: allisme, Par Henri Cernuschi. Paris, Guillaumin et Cie.

The inquiring reader will do well to consult the book It is enough here to indicate the main drift of the writer's argument. He holds in effect that the relative value of gold and silver in the world's markets has mainly depended on legal sanctions, not on the natural course of trade. Gold and silver are precious, because and while they are employed as money. Their value is determined not by the cost of production, but by the extent to which each is employed as current coin. For ages past the relative value of silver to gold has stood, with slight oscillations, at fifteen and a half ounces of silver to one of gold. In countries where gold alone is the standard of value silver tends to become cheap, while the opposite result arises from the maintenance of a silver standard alone. In France, where the law of 1803 sanctioned the double currency at a fixed rate of fifteen and a half to one, the relative value of the two metals has on the whole been steadily maintained. Under a bimetallic system, based on a careful adjustment of averages, the two metals will circulate as one, so many pieces of silver being always worth the same proportion of gold. Silver and gold will balance each other; if the one threatened to become too plentiful, more of the other would be called into monetary use. But to ensure future permanence in their relative values, it will be necessary to extend the bimetallic system to other countries besides France. For this purpose M. Cernuschi would call a congress of European Powers to meet in Liondon, the chief seat of the monometallic heresy, from which India as well as Europe is now suffering. If the English and Indian Governments are fully alive to their duties in this matter, they will lose no time in urging the adoption of such a process, even if they cannot yet see their way to any temporary expedient for India's benefit.

SILVER.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

The standard of value has depreciated 23 per cent.; the import trade of the country is brought nearly to a standstill; the salaries and savings of employés in India are reduced one-fourth in value, and rupes securities are at 20 per cent. discount in the London market. These, coupled with the prospect of a huge deficit in its finances looming in the future, are reasons of sufficient importance to justify the Government in departing from its usual policy of non-interference.—Letter in the Money Market Article of the Times of to-day.

SIR,—The India Office is now giving one rupee in India for every 1s. 6½d. received in London, and the consequence is that Manchester goods cannot be sent to India at a profit, and that Englishmen and Scotchmen sending money home from India are heavily taxed by the brokers.

Why should Government threw itself into the arms of those who are making their temporary command of the silver market the means of influencing the Indian exchanges? Why should it give them 16 per cent profit when it can borrow at 4 percent per annum? Nobody has yet ventured to assert that the present low price of silver is likely to continue for four years, so why give four years' interest for the use of money? But even if the price of silver were to fall lower the rate of exchange does not depend upon the price of silver, but on the demand for Indian produce; the latter is in demand all over the world, and the present rate of exchange will in a year or two eause an enormous increase in quantity and improvement in quality. I beg my countrymen to recollect how the high price of cotton during the American war stimulated the growth of cotton in India. At the present rate of exchange an enormous demand will arise for Indian tea, coffee, sugar, wheat, indigo, saltpetre, oil seeds, cotton, jute, &c., &c.

The idea of a gold currency as a remedy for the extravagant requirements of the Indian Office can be refuted in a few words if necessary.

I beg to suggest that the India Office should for the present meet its expenses by borrowing, and should authorise the Indian Government to lend to the Banks on good security any excess in its cash balances. This would enable the Banks to discount the bills of merchants buying Indian products. The Indian Council at home, by unexpectedly locking up cash in Indian treasuries, is partly responsible for the high rates of discount exacted in India at the beginning of this year, which mischievously checked the Indian export trade. January, February, and March are the months during which the latter is most active.—Lour obedient servant,

July 6.

SIR CHARLES NAPIER ON THE INDIAN ARMY. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—As the question of the reorganisation of the Indian Army is under consideration, particularly that part of the subject relating to the proportions of British officers that should be attached to each native regiment, the following opinion, expressed in a letter to Lord Ellenborough by Sir Charles Napier the day after the battle of Mecanec, where the native regiments were officered on what is known as the regular system, will be of acknowledged value, and may act as a warning to those who would rely upon the irregular system :- " I hope your Lordship will pardon me for saying that the want of European officers in the native regiments at one period endangered the success of The Sepoy is a brave and excellent soldier, but, like all soldiers, he expects to be led on in certain moments, and as he looks to his European officer, if he misses him the greatest danger arises. Three times I saw them retreat, evidently because the officers had fallen, and when another appeared and rallied them, they at once followed him boldly. This, my Lord, accounts for the great number of European officers killed and wounded in proportion to the whole. I am sure in observing a defect in the formation of the company's troops, the effect of which might have been so serious, I shall not be deemed presumptuous or impertinent."-Yours, faith-C. R. Low. fully,

Chelses, July 10, 1876.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER.

The Pieneer holds that the numerous questions which arise on the north-west frontier can be best decided by the consideration of general and abstract principles, rather than by slow deduction from known facts, and it has no reason to doubt that Sir Lewis Pelly, whose ability it is quite willing to take for granted, would soon be master of the situation. We require at the most vulnerable points our best and most clear-sighted officers; and with Lord Augustus Loftus at St. Petersburg, Sir Henry Elliot at Constantinople, Sir Lewis Pelly at Peshawur, and Sir Bartle Frere at the Indis-office, it would be difficult for the most determined enemy of he British Empire to find a weak point in our diplomatic cuire But quite independently of the selection of an officer for the pest, we do not believe that either the Home or Indian Governments has any such scheme as would take the difficult and troublesome charge of the Punjab Frontier under their immediate control. They would, we imagine, very soon have cause to regret the transfer. It would be to substitute weakness for strength; and we doubt whether any single officer of experience in North India, who is acquainted with the frontier, would recommend it. Nor would it be an advantage to place the whole Sind and Punjab frontier under a single officer. The length of country is so great; the absence of good roads, the number of fierce hill torrents, and the curious character of the soil which after rain becomes as slippage as in character of the soil, which after rain becomes as slippery as ice, make travelling at all times difficult and tedious, and, in the rainy season, almost impossible. The character of the people is a still strongar reason against putting the length of the frentier under one officer. There is little in common between the Biluches of the Dera Ghazi Khan, Rajanpur and Shikarpur border, and the Waziris of Dera Ismail, and the Afridis of Kohat and Peshawur, Their language is altogether different; their customs and traditions are unlike: the form of Characterists of the one made is altogether are unlike; the form of Government of the one race is oligarchical and aristocratic; of the other democratic. To apply the same rules to both would result in confusion and disaster. There is no doubt that the policy of the British Government to all the frontier tribes should be one and the same. To repress violence; to guard our borders against attack; to lead the people slowly to appreciate the blessings of ordered Government and peaceful pursuits, these are our duties, which each year has made more easy and more fruitful in good results. But unity of policy and continuity in its enforcement are now attained by placing the frontier under different Commissioners, under the Government of the Punjah, which applies the general principles and rulings of the Government of India with only such variation and modification as local knowledge shows to be necessary in each case. The Commissioner of Peshawur has charge of the Hagara, Peshawur, and Kohat border, and the Commissioner of the Derajat controls Bannu, Dera Ismail Khan, and Dera Ghazi Khan; while one of Lord Northbrook's last measures was to add to his charge, as an experiment, which so far seems fairly successful, that portion of the Sind frontier hitherto administered from Jacobabad.

THE EMPRESS PROCLAMATION.

The Madras Athenaum holds that if the assumption of a new title indicates a reformation in respect of English sentiment, and expresses a vivid recognition of the importance of India and England's duty towards it, we may congratulate ourselves and her Majesty on the step that has been taken. The designation which marks her relation to it she may bear both with pride and with humility. But as soon as we come to the actual title and the applications of it, distinctions are necessary. If India could be dissociated from the rest of our Queen's dominions and the name be confined strictly to it, we think that the title has much to be said in its favour. There can be no question that some declaration was required to express the real relation in which the British Government stands to India as a whole and the subordinate princes who still bear a semi-independent rule in it. Great evils have undoubtedly arisen from not setting forth and clearly maintaining the supreme position which our Government holds in this land. trigues have been encouraged, groundless claims have been encouraged, oppression has been protected, and insolence has been fostered even towards the power to which the pretenders owe their very existence. It would be only ridiculous, if it were not in many respects pernicious, that the ruler of the Nizam's dominions should presume to claim the honours of an independent sovereign, and dare to address her Majesty as an equal. But by condescendour Government invites the insolence, and lets its honour be be dragged into the mire. No notion can be more false or misleading than is implied in giving the name of independent to princes who cannot lift a sword without our consent, and against whom not a sword can be lifted because of our protection? The only independence they are allowed is independence to oppress their own subjects, from whom we have taken the natural remedy of liberty to revolt, and to gather around them troops of armed scoundrels, who may be ready on some evil day to let loose against ourselves. If the adoption of the title of Empress helps to put the subordinate rulers in their right place, and to intimate to the people of every province and principality in the land that they need not appeal in vain for justice and aid against the oppression even of their own prisess, it will be a step of vast progress and the beginning et a semedy for not a few crying evils. But while the new title, if it bears within it the promise of such blessings, may be welcomed by the natives of India, it naturally bears a different complexion to England and Englishmen. Unfortunately in this matter India cannot be dissociated from England, and the use of the title here be made the exception. The Proclamation has too plainly confirmed the fears of those who predicted that the omission of the title would henceforth be the exception and the use of it the rule, and the new title, like Pharaoh's lean kine would swallow up the loyal sentiments is to be devoured by a designation, which in comparison is less and empty and ill-favoured. It is like cutting off the rich and Mistrous locks of natural growth that decorate a fair and august brow to replace them by a tawdry artificial chignen. And the suspicion that the lofty lady herself desired the Brunemagen adernment! These are the aspects of the matter which make the title a bitter pill for Englishmen to swallow.

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

The Englishman remarks that we have now full means of knowing the deliberate and permanent line of action which the Government of England, whoever may be at its head, is prepared to pursue. In the fine place, it fully recognises that the question is one of the gravest import alike to our interests here and to the prestige and position of England in Europe. It is a question which it acknowledges. Looke worth fighting for if occasion should arise. But it distinctly refuses to see in the bare fact of Russian aggression, or of Russian americation in Central Asia, a legitimate casus belli. It has no belief in an "intermediary zone." It knows of no geographical point is, such a zone, with regard to which it is prepared to say to Russia—hitherto shalt thou come, and no further. But, in the second place, it keeps distinctly before its eyes that circumstances may, at no distant period, render it expedient to fix such a point, and to face the consequences. To those among us who really believe that the Russian horizon is not placed at any more westerly point than our Punjab frontier, these views must be intensely unsatisfactory. And even in England there is a large class of thinkers who hold that a policy of restrained activity with reference to Russia amounts to a policy of inaction and retrogression on our park. Generally speaking, it may be said that this party is always strong among the Parliamentary Opposition, and always weak among the political body for the time being in power at home. The irresponsible critic sees very strongly the necessity for action, while those who would be answerable for the action feel very heavily the evils and perils which would attend it. For, it is clear that if we are to set limits to the Russian advance, or to interfere in the dealings of Russia with Asiatic States, Russia will have an equal right to insist on her advice being taken with regard to our own relations with the native Powers of India. be quite sufficiently awkward to us, even with reference to our outer line of geographical frontier. We should find it an unpleasant complication in our efforts to establish order in Khelat, or in our endeavours to make the King of Burmah listen to reason, if Russian negotiators appeared on the scene in the capacity of candid critics and plain-spoken friends. We know perfectly well what the result would be. The dexterous Asiatic would do his best to balance the two European Powers one against the other, and to secure the Russian verdict against any line of repression or chastisement which we might deem it right to adopt. But this would only be the beginning of our sorrows. For it should never be forgotten that our outer geographical frontier is not our only one. Onethird of the Continent of India is still native territory, and each native State, within our dominions, has a certain autonomy of its own. Our relations with these native States are in a constant process of flux and change. At one time we find it necessary to enforce our authority, at another time we allow that authority to remain, if not in abeyance, at least out of sight. Our only rule of conduct is our own sense of equity and good conscience. But that rule can only be maintained on the assumption that our own sense of right is the only one that can be brought to bear upon the questions which arise. Now, the first result of our claiming to be heard with reference to Russia's dealings with the native States of Central Asia would be a claim on her part to be heard with reference to our dealings with the native States of India. Are we prepared to admit such a claim? This is a question which the party of action in England and among ourselves have never faced. We believe that it would be both impolitic and unsafe to place ourselves in a position towards Russia in Central Asia which would enable Russia to place herself in such a position towards us in India.

HIGHWAY ROBBERIES.—Robberies are getting so frequent in Bengal that a special police force is being called for in various parter of the prevince. The Calcutta Gazette of the 31st ult. announces that in consequence of cases of highway robbery having occurred on the Grand Trunk Road from Dehri to Muthania, and of a mail robbery attended with murder, which recently took place on the same road, the Lieutenant-Governor has sanctioned the employment for one year of a special police force, consisting of two head constables and twenty constables, at a cost of Rs. 2,058 per annum, and has directed that the force be quartered on forty-one villages bordering the above-mentioned road.

MR. INGLIS AND THE MAHOUT.—The following letter appears in the Calcutta Statesman in reference to the late affair at a tiger hunt near Dacca :- "I have read in your impression of yesterday an editorial relating to a recent occurrence here, in which it is stated that Mr. Inglis, of Cherapoonjee, while out tiger shooting a few days ago, first of all severely assaulted his manout and finally speared him. As what actually occurred has been so entirely misrepresented and so grossly exaggerated in the local papers, from which, it is presumed, your information is derived, I think it only right that you should be put in possession of the real facts. As you have stated, Mr. and Mrs. Inglis were both thrown out of their howdah by the unsteadiness of the elephant they were riding, and Mr. Inglis therefore determined to have his howdah put upon one of his own elephants. While the pad and howdah were being adjusted on its back, Mr. and Mrs. Inglis were standing on the ground, when the mahout brought up the elephant that had been carrying the hewdah. Mr. Inglis, believing the animal to be danearrying the hewden. Mr. Inglis, believing the animal to be dan-gerous, ordered the mahout not to come any nearer. The man, however, either did not hear, or, if he heard, did not attend to Mr. Inglis's order, who thereupon caught up a stick that was lying on the ground by his side and flung it at him. Unfortunately the stick had at the end of it an iron goad, of the kind commonly used by the mahouts, a fact of which Mr. Inglis was entirely unaware, until just as the stick was leaving his hand, when its weight told him it was something more than a mere stick, as he had supposed. Fortunately it was not thrown violently, and consequently only a slight wound was inflicted. The man neither is, nor ever has been, in the slightest danger, and the statement that he is lying in the Lall Bagh in a precarious state is absolutely without foundation. No. one regrets what has happened more than Mr. Inglis himself, who has taken care to provide all the slight medical treatment the woundhas required, and to compensate the mahout. There has been no attempt to husb up the matter or to stifle inquiry. The man has never complained, and the case was certainly not one that a magistrate would take up suo motu. Had a charge been brought, it would of course have been tried in the usual way. As one of the parties, I was an eye-witness of all that occurred. You may therefore he assumed of the entire correctness of the secount 1 therefore, be assured of the entire correctness of the account 1 have now given you.—J. WEMYSS, Dacca, May 31.

"HICKY'S GAZETTE."

I well remember Hicky's Gazette. It began in January, 1780, and came to grief about the end of 1781. Mr. James Augustus Hicky was the most objectionable rowdy that ever landed in Calcutta. His Gazette was always either dull or libellous. He began very mildly. He was the most obedient, humble servant of every one in Bengal who would subscribe four rupees a month for a weekly newspaper—an ugly sheet of dirty foolscap—a miserable four pages, with three narrow columns of smeared letterpress on every page. There was foreign news; for Great Britain was at war with America, France, and Spain. There was Indian news; for the English were engaged in the first Mahratta war; Colonel Goddard had marched overland from Calcutta to Bombay; and Hyder Ali was preparing to invade the Carnatic. There was a sprinkling of gossip about the Calcutta Theatre, races, balls, and masquerades. No gentleman was to bring a servant to a ball except his hookahbearer. There were advertisements of autitions, tavorns, raffes, shops, circulating libraries, and lost property. There was also a Poet's Corner; lines by a lovesick shepherdess; verses on helping a young lady off with her gloves. Mr. Hicky was requested to leave out the advertisements, and insert p etry and puns in their room:—

Confusion to the wight that crams
The hallowed page with tongues and hams!
Shall Donald come with butts and tons,
And knock down epigrams and puns;
With chairs, old cots, and buggies trick ye?
Forbid it Phœbus, and forbid it Hicky!

All this was innocent enough; but Mr. Hicky began to pander to other tastes. Captain H. was married last night to Miss P., or else he was going to marry her on some future, day. Sir Thomas Rumbold has shaken half a million sterling out of the pagoda tree. Native princes were buying uniforms, breeches, and periwigs. Thirteen ladies had come out to India in one ship; but having had some differences of opinion during the voyage, not one of them had a cap to land in. Balls and entertainments were described; so were the dresses and characters of every individual present; so were the hopes and disappointments of laties and their lovers. Even the young ladies of Calcutts, especially the once celebrated Miss Wrangham, were praised or ridiculed in poetry and prose. One young lady was charged with having lain full length upon a sofa, and then and there smoked the hookah of a gentleman who was sitting by her side. Worst of all, the amours of judges, members of council, secretaries, and other high officials, were freely ventilated. The morals of that period will scarcely bear inspection after the lapse of a century. To blazon them forth in the columns of a weekly newspaper was not likely to promote the peace of the community. Gentlemen had fallen into the cheerful habit of mistaking one another's wives for their own. Those who had left their wives in Eugland adopted the genial philo sophy of Thomas Moore:—

How pleasant to think, that where'er we rove, We still can find something that's blissful and dear; And when we are far from the lips we love, We've but to make love to the lips we are near.

Meantime Calcutta society was degenerating into a Zoological Garden, with all the animals loose. There were fierce quarrels and bitter heart-burnings every Saturday. At evening time gentlemen were to be seen oftener than ever moving towards Kidderpore with swords and pistols in their palanquins. Hastings would have hunted a native to death, just as he hunted Nundcomar; but he had a constitutional dread of his own countrymen. He pondered long and auxiously. He did not deport Mr. Hicky; he did not even stop the Gazette. He prohibited the Post-office from distributing the newspaper; and he started a Gazette of India, which was to shut up the Bengal Gazette of Mr. Hickey. This was the Gazette of India that developed the transcendent talents of Sciona-Karr and Hugh Sandeman.

For the moment Mr. Hicky was prestrate. He whined over his losses like an afflicted greyhound. He was advised to propitiate the fair Marian. He was assured that the exalted and accomplished lady of the Governor General was an admirer of his Gazette—a fact which brings out a new trait in Marian's character. Mr. Hicky tells all this in his Gazette, and confesses that he was afraid of intruding upon such an illustrious personage. He soon began to recover heart. He complained that his family was ribbed by Government. Week after week he denounced or worried Hastings under the name of the Great Moghul. He asserted that any favour might be obtained from the Governor General by delicate attentions to the interesting Marian. He published the strictly private transaction under which the wife of the portrait painter changed her name from Imhoft to Hastings. At last Sir Elijah Impey interfered—the famous judge who hanged Nundcomar. Mr. James Augustus Hicky was arrested by four European officers and two hundred peons, and brought before the terribe Supreme Court. He was required to furnish bail to the amount of twenty thousand rupees. Meantime the Calcutta public, always remarkable for its sagacity, began to cry out for the rights of Englishmen and liberties of the Press. Mr. Hicky was hailed as the Wilkes of Calcutta. He escaped from the talons of the Supreme Court, flourished a little longer, and then disappeared from the scene.

STATION TALK.

LAHOR, May 29.—The Lahor Medical School since its establishment, some seventeen years since, has taken a high place among kindred institutions, and has educated fifty-seven assistant-surgeons, and two hundred and forty hospital assistants. Figures of the kind, however, want thinking over before their meaning is fully realised. When one sees, as we did on Thursday morning last, the whole school assembled, its English speaking class, bright and alert, in the front rows, the Hindustani class, and the hakins practising in Lahor, who are encouraged to sip at the fountain of knowledge, filling up the background in front, a decorative setting of the native raises and conscript fathers of the city, and interested Europeans, and hears Dr. E. Burton Brown's account of the progress of his school, it is easier to grasp the full significance of the work. The way in which such a school grows was well put by the Chairman, Mr. Macnabb, the Officiating Commissioner, who, while incidentally noticing the fact that Drs Rahim Khan and Mahamed Hosain Khan, now officiating as professors in the school, came from his old district, Shahpur, said: - "There was at that time a first-rate school at Shahpur, and we were able to induce a number of the boys most distinguished for ability and diligence to come to Lahor to study medicine, and I have watched their career ever since, and have with pleasure seen and heard of their steadily rising from the condition of unmarked residents of obscure country towns to positions which secured for them ample incomes, an honourable status in society, and what is still more valuable, the conscious less of having employed their lives and talents for the welfare of their fellow creatures by their successful labours to mitigate the miseries of suffering humanity." All this time, however, I am dawdling with generalisations. Are you interested in the facts that there are altogether 193 students in the school, of whom fortyfive are the English class? I heard incidentally the other day that the English of native medical students is better than that of purely literary colleges and schools. There is not so much of Milton, Shakispeare, and E'Scatt in it, burit is more flexible, idiomatic, and better understood than the latter. The reason of this is plain enough. There is a class peculiar I believe to this school, of twenty-five hakims already in practice in Luhor. Rahim Khan, Khan Bahadur, is the lecturer, and after a prescribed course and examination, a certificate and the title of "linkim Hayak" is given. Medical science in England is somewhat ferocious in its dealings with unlicensed practitioners, and, as a rule, would rather haug or transport than teach them. Here the case, of course, is different in some essential points; but still the Lahor School is alone in its generous to devote the whole of their time to the school course. A little knowledge is not necessarily a dangerous thing in medicine or surgery. It may, on the contrary be the saving of many a life, and it certainly helps to link a great educational enterprise with the outside world in a useful and popular way. Then there are students from the North-West Provinces, in whom you ought to feel some interest, and more are coming next year. During the greater part of the year Dr. A Neil officiated as Principal, and to him is ascribed the credit of having produced results on which the school is to be congratulated. On the whole, then, the Lahor Medical School is doing a most important work in a very admirable way, giving freely to the people the most precious boon it is in our power to bestow. It will be long, of course, before the gift can be accepted in all its fulness. Our surgery commands their respect, but it is no wonder that the mystic fancifulness of the native mind shies at our doctrines of medicine. Prejudices peculiar to the country interfere sadly with progress, especially in mid sifery, which must long remain in a backward state, seeing that most native women of any position would prefer death to the assistance of an accoucheur. The law professorship in the Punjab University College, now vacated by the resignation of Mr. Ulick Burke, has been temporarily taken up by Dr. G. W. Leitner. The local paper comments on the subject, and expresses a hope that the arrangement may not become permanent. Dr. Leitner writes, sharply taking the paper to task for hoping that his own avowed intentions may be carried out, and demonstrates that though he would not take the post permanently, he would make the best possible professor of law. The faith of the natives in him is so great that he is able to inform the outside public that fifteen of the flower of legal youth have applied for admission to the law classes, making the curiously cool condition that Dr. Leitner, the Professor of their choice, may be permanently retained.

Miscellaneous.

It is rumoured at Simla that the Commander-in-Chief has been asked what number of troops he could spare for an Egyptian Contingent, if required.

THE MONEY MARKET .- Calcutta was in a state of semi-panic yesterday, from the news that silver was quoted in London at 4s. 3d. per ounce, and that 40 to 50 lakhs of Council Bills were sold on Wednesday at 1s. 8d. Would it not be as well for the Chamber to call a meeting of the merchants upon this subject? A Committee of the ablest of our mercantile men ought surely to be sitting en permanence on the subject.—Englishman, June 10.

HALE ROCKETS.—The Secretary of State has notified that the necessary machinery and appliances for the manufacture of 9-pounder Hale rockets, at the rate of 300 per month, will be supplied to India. The machinery, when received, is to be fitted up in the existing factory at Dum-Dum, where it is thought there is sufficient space available for the purpose, with the exception of the rocket and pellet machines, which, from the nature of the work carried on, will necessitate a separate building for each.

ACCIDENT.—On the evening of Thursday last a gentleman named Williams, whilst riding along the Strand, met with a fall from his horse, which ran away with him. When close to Fort Point the animal stumbled, and three its rider with considerable violence against the palisades, causing a fracture of the right forearm and right ankle, together with some very ugly and severe bruises about the face and body. The unfortunate gentleman was removed in a state of unconsciousness by his syce and some of the bystanders.—

DEATH OF MR. POTHECARY.—We regret to have to announce the death of Mr. Pothecary, C.E., lately attached to the P.W. Department of the Bengal Secretariat. Mr. Pothecary, much prostrated by exposure and hard-work during the famine, took short furlough to Europe, at the expiration of which he returned to this country. The change, however, had not re-established his health, and he was again compelled to apply for leave. His friends were sanguine that a long rest was all that was needed, but it was willed otherwise. He died in Paris a month ago. He had many friends in Calcutta who will mourn his loss.—Indian Daily News, June 12.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE.—The Mirror says :- " While the Governors of Bombay and Madras have been created Grand Commanders of the Star of India for the trouble they took during the Prince of Wales's visit to India, the claims of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal to some distinction which, we at first thought, had been over-looked, have been recognised at last. Sir Richard Temple has been created a Baronet, thus confounding perhaps the "Black Pamphleteer," who told us the other day that his honour has been courting this distinction long. We congratulate his Honour on his reing this distinction long. We congratulate his Honour on his receiving this mark of the Royal favour, though some people will perhaps say that not until Lord Northbrook arrived in England was the honour conferred on him. It now remains to be seen how Sir John Strachey and Sir Henry Davies are dealt with."

THE NATIVE REGIMENTS AT PESHAWAR.—A correspondent at Peshawar writes to the Pioneer: -How one of such vast experience in Indian affairs as the late Commander-in-Chief could entertain the epinion that the Native Army had never been in such an efficient state as at present is hard to understand. Take the regiments at Peshawar alone, an important frontier station, where only lately the chances of being called out was so imminent—what with officers on sick certificate, furlough, and leave for the season or two mouths nearly every native regiment at the station has but three officers to carry on the work, and in one of the cavalry corps there will shortly remain present only two captains to perform the work of the regiment. And yet it is publicly stated in the House of Commons that the Native Army is now in a better condition than it ever has been.

THE PIDDINGTON FUND.—The following appears in the last halfpearly report of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce regarding the Piddington Fund:—"Early in 1870 the Chamber ventured to enlist the sympathy and aid of the mercantile and general community in favour of Mrs. Piddington, the aged widow of Mr. Henry Piddington, author of the "Law of Storms" and for some years the Commercial Country of the Commercial Country of the Marine Country of Libert. roner for Calcutta and President of the Marine Court A liberal subscription was raised, which enabled the Chamber to improve the widow's slender circumstances by adding Rs. 100 a month to her income; and that provision was continued up to the time of Mrs. Piedington's death, which took place last September. After payment of funeral expenses and cost of a monument in the cemetery of Chandernagore, the Chamber held a surplus which admitted tery of Chandernagore, the Chamber held a surplus which admitted of a refund of a moiety of subscriptions; and the committee have therefore closed the fund by returning 50 per cent. of the contribu-

DISSATISFACTION AMONG RAILWAY EMPLOYES.—We learn that the gency of the E.I.R. Company has addressed Government asking its help, with reference to the anticipated strike among the drivers and guards throughout the line, in regard to the demands made for certain privileges which the employés think themselves entitled to; and which the company refused to concede. We are informed that the grievances complained of are participated in by men in the employ of the G.I.P. Railway. Our readers are aware of the society established for protecting the rights and interests of the subordinate railway employée—particularly as regards those who have left nate railway employés—particularly as regards those who have left "hearth and home," and hoped to save a little money for their families at home. We learn that the Government has been asked families at home. We learn that the Government has been asked to send a Deputy Consulting Engineer to each important station to inquire into the causes of dissatisfaction existing. We are informed further that there is to be a secret meeting held among the employes of the E.I.R., with reference to the action they intend to take if their rightful claims (as they take them to be) are not granted.

CALCUTTA GAIRTIES.—The Simla exodus has sadly thinned the ranks of the acknowledged favourities, and the competition therefore, though brisk, is not so keen. An untried stranger consequently has a chance of securing an eligible partner for a round dance, and if he only makes the most of his opportunity and swims favourite is assured. The ordeal is, of course, a trying one, but the price well worthy the attempt; and I am told there was no lack of new aspirants last Friday. So far as I have been able to ascertain, the result is, on the whole, favourable to the new comers, and I hasten to mention the circumstance as an interesting piece of news to the Simla contingent of Calcutta society now enjoying itself after its own fashion in the hills. Encouraged by the success of the last ball, there has been some small attempt made to repeat the experiment; but although the locality and time have been hinted at, the matter has not been discussed above a whisper. Chaperones have hardly had time enough to recover from the heat and late hours of the last ball, and could not therefore be expected to look upon an the last ball, and could not therefore be expected to look upon an immediate repetition of Friday's gaieties with any degree of favour.

NEGLECT OF DUTY.—In January last the ship Mahableshwar, when going down the Hooghly, in charge of Mr. Pilot Wells, grounded in the Rangafalla Channel, causing a loss of Rs. 25,000 to her owners. The Calcutta agents of the ship, Messrs. Lyall, Rennie, and Co., forwarded a complaint to the Bengal Government, as an alteration in the absured had been computated to the Mesters. Attending tion in the channel had been communicated to the Master-Attendant on the day before the vessel grounded, but was not made known to the pilots. The resolution of the Lieutenant-Governor in the matter is published in the Calcutta Gazette, and his Honour considers that it is clearly established that the pilot and the Master-Attendant's Office were in no way in fault, and that the entire blame attaches to the River Surveyor. The River Surveyor seems to the Lieutenant-Governor to have committed a grave neglect of duty in omitting to report, in the usual manner, a material change in one of the navigating channels; and it is to this neglect that the disaster to the ship is to be attributed. The Lieutenant-Governor, therefore, directs that Mr. Laycock be informed that his neglect of duty in this instance is regarded by the Government with serious dis-pleasure, and that he be warned that inattention and oversight cannot be excused in an officer who holds so responsible a post as that of River Surveyor.

DEATH OF MR McIvor .--We regret much to record the death of Mr. W. G. McIvor, of Chinchona plantation renown, who has been ailing for some time, from an illness which terminated fatally at three o'clock on the morning of the 8th June.

COLONEL MALLESON.—It is rumoured that Colonel Malleson, the guardian to H.H. the young Rajah of Mysor, has given over charge of his guardianship to Mr. Rungacharlu, and that the successor of the former gentleman is now on his way to Mysor.

A THOUGHTFUL MOVE .- The Traffic Manager of the S.I. Railway Company has just ordered that water-sheds be erected and a plentiful supply of good drinking water be kept, in charge of Brahmin waiters, at every station on that line, for the use of third-class pas-

BANGALOR.—A contemporary hears from Bangalor that the monsoon has fairly set in there. On the 24th May the rain came down in torrents, sadly interfering with the success of the birthday ball given by Mr. Dalyell. People are returning from the hills, and the place, long empty to an unusual extent, will soon be fall again.

DEATH OF COLONEL K. MACAULAY.—A special telegram to hand just as we are going to press announces the death at Bangalore of Colonel K. Macaulay, of the 37th Grenadiers, now etationed at Pepery, Madras. The deceased was run over by the mail train of this morning a mile from the Bangalore Station, and his presence on the line cannot be accounted for.—Athenorum, June 14.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—In a very large palmyra tope bordering on the Madras Railway South-West line, between the Vaniembay and Amboor stations, no less than forty-seven trees were struck by Tightning during a thunderstorm the week before last. Several were split open from top to bottom so evenly that one would have fancied they had been sawn in halves.

DEATH OF MR. C. SYLK — The death of Mr. C. Sylk, of the Union Hotel, has been aunounced, at the age of fifty-four years. The deceased gentleman will be remembered by many old zetired Anglo-Indians who have visited Ooty. He was much respected by all classes of society, and his remains were followed to the grave by a large number of residents. Mr. McIvor's, as well as Mr. Sylk's, demise, has cast a sad gloom all over the station, so that the many festive gathering: for which it is noted have not been as numerousl attended as usual.

DEATH OF A NATIVE GENTLEMAN.—We have to notify the death of Mr. Vencatamwmy Naidu, a gentleman of affluence and influence. Mr. Vencatasawmy Naidu commenced life at an early age as a broker to one of our leading mercantile firms, and by his own perseverance and industry he became a wealthy man. He was a Municipal Commissioner, and in this capacity took part in all the movements affecting the rights of the native community. A few years ago Mr. Vencatasa wmy Naidu visited England, where he was known as the " Naider."— Athenœum, June 14.

THE GODAVARI DISTRICT.—The merchants of the Godavari district are now carrying produce on the Godavari Canals to the value of £7,000,000 or £8,000,000 a year, at the rate of one pie per ton per mile, that is, less than one-eighth of a penny. The whole cost of this canal carriage on the goods carried last year, 1874-75, for an average distance of thirty miles, was a little over £20,000; while by ordinary land carriage it would have been £315,000. The land reverue of the whole Godavari district is but £420,000; and the saving alone by these canals enable the people to pay the smount twice over. Five-and-twenty or thirty years ago the whole export and import trade of the district was not £120,000 a year. It has since risen to £1,200,000.—Madras Standard.

THE WYNAD.—We read in a Madras paper that a deputation of S.E. Wynad planters had a most satisfactory interview with his Grace the Governor on the 23rd ult., at Ootacamund. The Duke informed the gentlemen that the cause of the delay in answering their petition for the annexation of their district to the Neilgherries was mainly attributable to the change of Governors that took place last year, but that the matter, together with the question of the Neilgherry Commissionership, had been, and still was, before the Council; the one could hardly be decided without the other, but that an answer to both might be looked for in a fortnight's time. Should Government accede to the annexation there will not be any reduction made in the executive establishment of Octacamund. The members of the deputation are of opinion that the annexation question is being discussed in a wider point of view than the limits of the S.E. as proscribed in the petition, and that, if any, the whole of Wynad will be annexed to the Nilgiris.

THE ZAMINDARI OF PALACONDA.—The Madras Mail draws attention to the case of Viziaramarazu Rao Bahadur, now residing at Mellor, who claims the title and estates of the last Zamindar of Palaconda. For forty years was that unfortunate man imprisoned in Vellor, by the British Government, for no other conceivable fault than being the son of his father, and it was not until 1869 that he was released by Lord Napier. He is now friendless, montyless, and prematurely aged; but he has plucked up a little courage, and has memorialised the Duke of Buckingham to restore him to the Zemindari that was conferred on his ancestors three centuries since, and that was torn from his possession without rhyme or reason. He asks for no compensation for his forty years' imprisonment; he asks not for a penny of the half-million sterling that the Government has derived from the estate since he was dispossessed; but he confines himself to saying that "he owes it to the historic fame of his family, and to its future representative, his son, to press for an early restoration to his undoubted rights.

THE REVENUE JURISDICTION BILL.

The House of Commons would do more good to India if it thus concerned itself with the affairs of the only people in India whom it can understand, than if as at present it made a clumsy shot now and then at protecting the native population from the supposed mistakes of the Government out here. Its next feat in this direction may not improbably be the indirect annihilation of a more sensible measure than most which the House itself passes,—the Bombay Revenue Jurisdiction Act. I hear that people who mis-understand this Bill in India are putting up others who have no means of understanding it at home to ask questions about it in Parliament, and take away its good name, to the end that the Secre-tary of State may be constrained to disallow it. There is an imbecile theory prevalent in Bombay to the effect that this measure is designed to invest an arrogant executive government with some new and unrusual powers of oppressing the people in connection with settlement matters, and of taking away from them the beneficent protection afforded generally by courts of law. The fact is, that the new Act is merely an assimilation of the law in Bombay to that which already exists in every other part of India. In Madras an Act of long-standing declares that no court of civil judicature shall have authority to take into consideration or decide any question as to land revenue payable to Government. In Lower Bengal the permanent settlement throws the whole subject into the background, but in the N.W.P. the law courts have been effectually barred from interfering in revenue matters by the Act of 1873. In the Punjab the Act of 1871 gave legal form to a similar painciple already in force practically. And on the surface it is manifest that courts of And on the surface it is manifest that courts of law swayed this way or that by skilled advocates proceeding on wilfully short-sighted principles,—on technicalities, that is, to the exclusion of natural justice, must necessarily be untit tribunals to revise the action of the Executive in the exercise of its most essential prerogative, the collection of the public revenue. But the court of law is a sort of fetish for some English people, and plain facts are ignored with what seems absolute argumentative dishonesty in many cases, in order that the new Act may be denounced, and treated as an outbreak of high-handed despotism. No doubt there was a rough era in the history of Anglo-Indian Goverament when authority was harshly exercised, and the check of English opinion inoperative, and Mountstuart Elphinstone was a man to whom such harshness would naturally be very repugnant. Snatching at any remedies that might be available, he worked out his revised code of 1827, which reduced the executive government to the subjection of the courts. But even then the arrangement was felt to be dangerous of application in the newer provinces, and was limited in its scope. Now it is simply out of date; an anachronism of the most glaring kind, which has come to work in quite an opposite direction from that originally intended, by reason of its raison d'être having melted away. The action of the Executive Government is as careful in the interests of the people as that of any judge can be, and not impeded, as the action of the judge must often be, by the tangled fetters of badly-written law, or the fogs of conflicting precedents. They have played their part in the world's history—law courts generally—as protectors of the people, as priests in a still ruder phase of civilisation did the same. Sanctuary would not be regarded as a good institution on the whole, and the interests of society at large would not be held to be served by an arrangement which enabled thieves and murderers to escape punishment by bolting into a church; but still sanctuary was once a blessed privilege of the oppressed victim of cruel power. So with courts of law. Before the sense of justice became a highly developed instinct with educated men, and before the generalltone of public morality was raised to a high level, the system on which courts of law proceed—blind white law—was a rude and clumsy, but still for the middles ages a good system to follow, and I do not say that even yet society is far-enough advanced to abolish law, and proceed entirely by the light of reason. I only affirm that it has advanced far enough to make the courtered and the system to reason. make the constant conflict between the results of legal processes and the distants of pure reason most painfully apparent. It has advanced far enough to make our great necessity of the future the gradual reference of legal procedure, on the basic of a more intelligent feeling about the preper etatus of law courts than has hitherto prevailed. The Bombay Revenue Bill may be welcomed as a microscopic step in that direction, and if it is upset at home, Indian statesmen will have the more grudge against the European branch of the Government. -Pioneer Correspondent,

Itliscellaneous.

ELECTION OF Mr. GEARY.—We are glad to see that Mr. Geary, editor of the Times of India, has been elected for the Fort Ward, a member of the Municipal Corporation. Mr. Geary will find full scope for his abilities in our Municipal deliberations.—Native Opinion, June 11.

THE ARRIVAL OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR.—His Excellency Sir Philip Wodehouse, K.C.B., Governor of Bombay, arrived from Mahableswur on Wednesday last at Government House, Gunnesh Khind; the usual salute was fired by the Royal Artillery at Kirkee on Thursday morning at sunrise.—Poonah Observer, June 10.

Puna.—The public meeting at Puna, to pass an address of congratulation to her Majesty on assuming the title of Empress, have passed an address which occupies more than two columns of small type in the Decoun Herald, and principally alludes to all the grievances under which the natives imagine themselves to be suffering, the congratulations occupying very few lines. In congratulatory addresses it is not usual to allude to political matters, so the address should be rejected.

MUNITIONS OF WAR.—Not a bad story is told in connection with the recent fine inflicted upon the P. and O. Company for importing munitions of war into Bombay. Some time ago the company brought a number of empty shells for transhipment to China. The customs officer, after a powerful mental conflict, decided that the shells could not be seized, as, being without fuzes, they could not be called munitions of war. It is no wonder that the company feel rather hurt now for importing gun carriage wheels, when they were let off with,

Mr. Pedder.—Says the Indu Prakash:—"It is with great regret that we hear of the intention of Mr. Pedder to resign his Commissionership immediately. He had no doubt long ago expressed his intention to that effect, but it was believed that he would resign at the end of the year. We must express our regret for the loss of his able services. his able services. He was always believed to be an industrious Commissioner, and, what is very rare in these days of official despotism, open to conviction, and at the same time willing to yield where he was convinced to be wrong." We believe the resignation in question may possibly take the mitigated form of three months' leave.

An Insolvent sent to Jail.—At a sitting of the Insolvency Court on Tuesday last the case of Goolabchund Amichund, an insolvent, was called on for hearing and final discharge, before the Hon. Mr. Justice Pinhey, who, after hearing evidence and examining the insolvent, sentenced Goolabchund to two years' imprisonment on the criminal side of the County Jail, on the ground of concealment of a diamond worth Rs. 3,000, which has been the subject of litigation between an opposing creditor and the insolvent in this case. Mr. Lang, instructed by Messrs. Prescott and Winter, appeared on behalf of an opposing creditor, Merwanjee Bazonjee Dubash. The insolvent appeared in person.—Times of India, June 16.

RELIEF FOR THE GOLWOOD SUFFERERS.—We have received many kind notes with respect to the poor Golwood sufferers, and the money which has been handed to us on their behalf will be forwarded to the Collector of Tanna, in whose charge Golwood lies. One correspondent makes what appears to us to be a very good suggestion; he proposes that a part of the Ahmedabad Relief Fund, which has not been entirely disbursed, should be applied to the relief of the cholera-stricken fugitives. There have been many more deaths at Golwood than there were at Ahmedabad, and the homeless survivors are quite as deserving of sharing in the surplus charity of Bombay as the people of Ahmedabad. The Assistant Collector of Tanna is now in Golwood endeavouring to prevent the cholera from spreading to other villages on the sea coast.—Bombay Gazette, June 16.

BARODA.—The 27th May being the first anniversary of the installation of the Gaikwar, was observed as a general holiday. In the evening there was a grand procession of elephants and soldiers. Afterwards the officers of the garrison and others were entertained at dinner on invitation. After the usual loyal toasts, the healths of the Gaikwar and her Highness Jumnabai were drunk. Sir T. Madhava Rao, in responding on their behalf, referred to what he could call the momentous event in the life of the Maharajah, which, was also a momentous event in the history of the State itself. He said that during the past year the Raj had not been idle; it had made. steady progress in every branch, with careful regard to existing, conditions and sound principles, so that what had been done would, stand the test of time. They had diminished extravagance and pro-moted security of life and property. They would still continue that moted security of life and property. They would still continue that policy. He spoke in high terms of the assistance received from Sir, R. Meade and Mr. Melville, and said that the Imperial Government in sending such able and select agents showed its wisdom and discretion. He concluded by proposing the health of Mr. Melville.

LEGISLATIVE.—At the last meeting of the Legislative Council the Hon. R. B. Downall, Planting member, and the Hon. J. Van Langenberg, Burgher member, took the oath and their seats as un-official members of the Council.—The Hon. Mr. Wilson moved that the Secretary of State should be asked to favourably consider, with a view to increased pension, the case of Major Skinner, who rendered eminent services to the development of the resources of this colony during forty-eight years' uninterrupted work as the head of the Public Works Department. The answer was that a dangerous precedent would be established were the Council to consider such a service as this wine were attentions. case as this, nine years after the official's retirement. Attention was then drawn to the filthy and over-crowded condition of Colombo, and a motion was made calling on Government to take up the matter. Government replied that the conservation of the town was the business of the Municipality, who would doubtless attend to the complaints. Colombo was in a much better state than it used to be; and Government could not do more than it had done.—Ceylon Times, June 10.

THE DEATH OF DR. MILMAN.

With reference to Home Dept. Notific. No. 130, dated March 16 last, the following despatch from her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, No. 5, dated May 4, 1876, is published:—

To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council.

My Lord,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of the despatch of your Excellency in Council, dated March 17, No. 3 of 1876, announcing the death, on the 15th of the same month, of the Right Rev. R. Milman, D.D., Lord Biahop of Calcutta. 2. I have received this melancholy intelligence with the deepest regret, and heartily concur in the sentiments expressed by your Lordship in Council in the Notific of March 16.—I have, &c., SALISBURY.

LEAVE AND ALLOWANCES.

The Gov. gen. in Council directs that the following be substituted for Section 20 [d] of the Civil Leave Code:—20 [d]. If the officer under Section 27 have ceased to have a lien on a substantive appointment, as for example, if a covenanted officer has been absent on extraordinary leave, in extension of furlough, in the case of a Covenanted Civil Servant, subsistence allowance; and in the case of an Uncovenanted Civil Servant, no allowance

The Gov. gen. in Council directs that the following be inserted as Rule 6 [a] under Section 27 of the Civil Leave Code:—6 [a]. So long as an officer retains a lien under this section, or if he is exempted under Rule 6 from loss of appointment, absence after the end of his leave, though not counting a continuous service, does not operate as a break of continuous service or continuous active service as defined in Section 7 [c].

The Gov. gen. in Council directs that the following be inserted as Rule 1 under Section 14 of Supplement F to the Civil Leave Code:— Rule 1. Leave without allowances cannot be converted retrospectively into leave on medical certificate; but leave on medical certificate may be given in continuation of leave without allowances.

The following resolution by the Government of India in the Financial Department is published for general information:—

Fort William, April 26.—Read Extract from the Proceedings of Government in the Marine Department, No. 37 (Leave of Absence), dated Jan. 10, and enclosures, relating to a question which has arisen whether officers, whose service is treated as inferior under Section 38 of the Civil Pension Code, can be allowed leave under the rules in Supplement F to the Civil Leave Code, apart from the rules in the exceptions to Section 1 [b] of the said Supplement.

Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council considers that Section 1 [b] of Supplement F to the Civil Leave Code authorises the grant of leave upon the conditions therein stated, not only to a superior officer whose pay is less than a hundred rupees a month, but to an officer whose service is treated as inferior under Section 38 of the Civil Pension Code, upon the condition that the grant of the leave shall not impose any cost upon the State.

THE SOLDIERS' INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION AT MIAN MIR.

A General Order says: —H.E. the C. in C. has much pleasure in publishing to the Bengal army the results of the Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition of the Industrial Exhibition of the Industrial Exhibition o bition, held at Mian Mir in January, 1876.

Although the number of batteries and regiments exhibiting was some what less than the year preceding, being fity-four against sixty, his Excellency considers the result very satisfactory.

The C. in C. is glad to notice that the 1-11th regiment again held the foremost place in the Exhibition, and exhibited very largely in each

As in preceding years, the articles were divided into twenty classes; and his Excellency has much pleasure in observing that in each class the contributions were good and useful. Some articles, however, were exhibited this year, which, it is believed, rere exhibited previously. As this is against the spirit of the Exhibition, his Excellency desires that the practice be discontinued. Some regiments also sent articles which were either not for sale, or had been sold before leaving the regiment; and, as it is unfair that the transit charges for these articles should be paid from the funds of the lighthiotion, the C. in C. directs that such expense shall be borne in future by regiments. It affords his Excellency much matisfaction to learn that the conduct of the non-commissioned officers and men, who attended as representatives of the various batteries and regiments, was excellent; and among these, Bombardier W. Skinner, B-19th brigade R A., who was in charge of the workmen, and to who e untiring energy the success attending the decoration of the building was due, and Gunner Brooks, A-19th

B.A., and Private Coldston, 1 3rd foot, are especially brought to notice. H.E. the C. in C. begs to express his best thanks to Lieut. gen. Sir C. Beid, R.C.B., then commanding the Lahore division, and to the committee, for the efficient manner in which they carried out the arrangements connected with this Exhibition, which his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was graciously pleased to declare a great success.

The admirable manner in which Lieut. col. G. B. Fisher, the hon.

secretary, performed the onerous drities which from the commencement devolved upon him, merits high commendation.

Commanding officers are recommended to purchase copies of the report, for distribution among their men.

The next Exhibition, confined to the Bengal Presidency, will be held at Umballa, in the first week of November, 1876.

EAST INDIA ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of this Association was held on July 5, at 20, Great George-street, under the presidency of General Sir George Malcolm, K.C.B.

Colonel A. B. Rathbone read a Paper on the "True Line of Defence for India," of which the following is a summarised report:— "The question how India is to be defended against foreign aggression and preserved for ever to the Crown of England is one of the largest and most complex that can occupy the nation's mind, and in this paper attention will be called to some of the most salient points of the problem. The first essential to the preservation of India of the problem.

against the attacks of foreign enemies is one which is too often lost sight of. It is that the Government of India should be so conducted as to make it a matter of moral certainty that in the event of any other European Power attempting to oust us from it there shall be no internal uprising to paralyse the military movements which the authorities may consider, on strategic grounds, the best calculated for its defence. On the sagacity, therefore, of the successive civil rulers, as much or more than on that of the successive military commanders to whom the defence of India may be entrusted, must we rely for the preservation of that magnificent de pendency of the British Crown. If we desire peace we should prepare for war, and there is no way so effective as by dealing justly with the natives of India, so as to secure their real affection and goodwill. The next point to be considered is that for the retention of India we must always be able to maintain the undisputed mastery of the sea. Without this we could not hold India for a moment in the present state of things. The Suez Canal will not afford a safe and complete sea route in case of war, and the only road to India would be the old route round the Cape. It may be safely predicted that if engaged in a war with France or Russia—the only Powers at all likely to attempt to attack our possessions in India—the Suez Canal will prove not only useless to us, but that it will impose on us new difficulties if it be kept open, which is doubtful. Our great object in such an event will have to be to get it closed, so that the position of the contending parties shall be reversed; and that, instead of our vessels having to run the gauntlet of the Mediterranean, their vessels of all kinds shall have no means of getting to India but by following, in the face of the innumerable men-of-war we should then have affoat, the old and well-known long sea route. The conclusion to be drawn, then, is that we must lay aside altogether the illusion of having obtained a quicker and more secure road to India in time of war by our purchase of the Suez Canal shares."

General Sir George Le Grand Jacob could not agree with Colonel

Rathbone's opinion with regard to the Suez Canal

General Cavanagh thought they might dismiss from their minds all thoughts of the Suez Canal being closed, for rather than allow such a thing to happen England would take possession of Egypt.

General Alexander did not think the countrylying between Russia and British India was impassable by an army. Large armies had entered Europe from the East before now, and what had been done in past times could be done again.

Mr. R. Uddin Ahmed said that with regard to British rule in India, justice had never yet been accorded to the natives, and the only way to be just to the natives was to place them on the same footing of equality with the Europeans.

Miscellaneous.

Indian Barristers.—Framjee Rustamjee Vicajee, Esq., of the University of Bombay, B.A., LL.D., was called to the degree of the Outer Bar of the Middle Temple on June 28.

LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint General Lord Napier of Magdala, R.E., G.C.B., G.C.S.I., to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the City and Garrison of Gibraltar.

EASTERN EXTENSION TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The directors of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company (Limited) have declared an interim dividend for the quarter ended March 31, 1876, of 2s. 6d. per share, being at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, payable on the 17th inst.

THE STATUE TO THE PRINCE OF WALES .- We understand that Sir Albert Sassoon, who intends to present an equestrian statue of the Prince of Wales to Bombay, has transferred the commission for this work to Mr. Boehm, in consequence of the death of Mr. Noble, to whom it was originally entrusted. The statue will cost £5,000.

Mr. Simpson's Indian Sketches. -- Mr. William Simpson's sketches and drawings made during the Royal visit to India, having been sent for inspection to Windsor, four of them were purchased by her Majesty the Queen. These, with fifteen others bought by the Prince of Wales, will be on view in the Burlington Gallery, Piccadilly, until Tuesday (this day), when the exhibition must close.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £700,000 in bills on India were received on Wednesday, the 5th inst., at the Bank of England. The amounts alloted were:—To Calcutta £374,000, to Bombay £160,000, and to Madras £2,000. Tenders on all the Presidencies at 1s. 6½d. will receive in full. No allotment under that price. This is a decline of about 1d. per rupee from the previous allotments, and as a natural consequence silver has been almost unsaleable. minsl price, however is now 4s. per ounce. The no-

THE SILVER DEPRECIATION COMMITTEE.—The report of the Select Committee on the depreciation of silver has been laid before Parliament. It is a very voluminous document, prepared by Mr. Goschen. As the committee were simply appointed to report on the causes which have led to the recent depreciation they have not made any recommendations. They report that the cause of depreciation is threefold—(1) the fluctuations of Indian trade; (2) the change of the standard of currency in Germany; (3) the enormous increase in the production of the silver mines of America.

ROYAL WARRANT.—A Royal warrant has been issued to revise the regulations with respect to the retired full pay and half-pay of combatant officers. The warrant of Dec. 27, 1870, is so modified that officers of the Royal Artillery and Engineers of not less than forty years' service will be eligible for retirement on the full-pay list. Authority is also given to the Commander-in-Chief, with the approval of the Secretary of State, to specially recommend applica-tions from officers holding the regimental rank of captain and lieutenant-colonel in the regiments of foot guards for temporary retirement on half-pay after five years' tenure of such rank.

An Indian Tent.—A very beautiful tent, brought over from India, it is understood, by the Prince of Wales, has just been erected upon the lawn at the top of the Long Walk in the private erected upon the lawn at the top of the Long Walk in the private grounds of Windsor Castle, for the inspection of her Majesty the Queen. The marquee was supported by four silver-gilt poles and cords of scarlet silk, and the four sides were composed of scarlet and blue drapery richly embroidered in arabesque patterns. After the marquee had been placed in position the Queen paid a visit to the grounds to see the tent, which presented a very beautiful appearance. The marquee, after the Royal inspection, was removed JUDICIAL COMMITTEE.—SINCLAIR V. THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA. In this case, Mr. Sinclair, who had held an appointment in India, had brought an action against Sir Henry Toombe for false imprison-ment, and obtained damages for Rs. 25,000, which were afterwards reduced to £3,000. He complained of the treatment he had met with, and asked for special leave to appeal and to conduct his case in forma pauperis.—Mr. Cowie, Q.C., appeared on the part of the Administrator General and the India Government. Sir James Colvile, after conferring with the other judges, gave the opinion of their lordships. They would allow the petitioner to appeal in forma pauperis, and would hear him on the reduction of damages, but without hearing additional evidence.

EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The report of the Eastern Telegraph Company (Limited) for the six months ending March 31 last has been issued. The total revenue in that period was £178,603. 14s. 7d., and, after deducting ordinary and special expenses, an available balance is left of £122,122. 8s. 8d., from which £6,960 is payable as interest on debentures. A final dividend of 2s. 6d. per share, making with the previous payments 5 per cent. for the year, is recommended, and the sum of £22,178. 11s. 9d. is carried to reserve, raising it to £185,765. 6s. The manufacture of the duplicate Red Sea cable is being rapidly proceeded with, over 1,000 miles having been already made, and it is expected that both sections of the line will be laid within the date specified in the contract with the Telegraph Construction Company.

ZANZIBAR SLAVE TRADE.—When the Zanzibar slave market was shut up it was said that the first effect of our policy would be to make the slavers transfer their operations to the land routes. The Foreign-office have published a correspondence which only too truly confirms this suspicion. From this document it appears that in April last Dr. Kirk, the British Consul, drew the attention of the Sultan of Zanzibar to the fact that the slave trade still went on by land from Kilwa to Pemba. He pointed out that the traffic was in the hands of low-class Arabs, and the Sultan not only admitted the force of our consul's arguments, but at once took steps to stop the trade by means of formal proclamations and threats of forcible interference. The despatches indicate that his Highness is not only desirous but even eager to suppress this nefarious traffic, and to meet our views in every possible way with reference to the matter. Dr. Kirk, however, says the Sultan stands alone in his hostility to slave-dealing. His people to a man are against his anti-slavery policy. "His governors, ill-paid, are often open to other influences, and have for the most part been themselves too often engaged in the traffic to look on it as a crime."

ROTAL VISIT TO THE POLYTECHNIC.—On Thursday the Prince and Princess of Wales, and their children, together with the Duke and Duchess of Teck, and suites, honoured the Polytechnic Institution with a visit. The Royal party were received at the private tution with a visit. The Royal party were received at the private entrance in Cavendish-square by Mr. E. A. Owen, the chairman, the members of the board of directors, and Professor E. V. Gardner. A special programme had been prepared, including Mr. J. L. King's lecture on the "Royal Tour in India," which was listened to with much interest by the distinguished visitore. The diver and diving-bell were next exhibited, the Prince of Wales, accompanied by the chairman, himself undertaking a journey to the bottom of the tank, to the great delight of the young Princes and Princesses, one of the directors at this same time explaining the principle of the diving-bell to the Princess of Wales, by means of a small glass model, which conveyed living mice to the bottom of a miniature tank. A portion of Mr. Buckland's entertainment, "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland," and an experimental chemical lecture by Professor Gardner, were likewise given, while several new inventions were produced for inspection. The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion with a fine display of palms, ferns, and flowering plants, and their Royal Highnesses on leaving expressed their gratification at the entertainment that had been provided for them.

DIVORCE CASE.—MEREWETHER V. MEREWETHER AND LEACOOK.—This was the petition of Major George Lane Cockburn Merewether, of the Bombay Staff Corps, for a dissolution of the marriage on the ground of the adultery of his wife (née Eveleen Wilmot Malcolmson) with the co-respondent, Captain Frederick Schuler Leacock, an officer in the Royal Marines. Damages were originally claimed against Captain Leacock, but withdrawn, in consequence of which an order was granted to discharge the jury, and the suit now came before the Court itself as undefended. The parties were married on July 23, 1860, at Trinity Church, Kurrachee, Scinde, and there were two children born. They lived together down to October, 1867, upon affectionate terms, when the respondent came to this country for the benefit of her health, bringing with her the two children. She returned to India in 1872, but a year afterwards again came to England and resided at Nelson Lodge, Park-road, Hythe, with Captain Leacock, by whom she had a child. Helen Baily Ponder deposed that she was present at the marriage of Major Merewether, and acted as bridesmaid to the respondent. At that time the petitioner was a lieutentant in the Royal Engineers. They appeared to live comfortably together. Had not seen Major Merewether, but thought he was now at Bombay. Mrs. Spilstead stated that in 1874 she was staying at Nelson Lodge, Hythe. The respondent and Captain Leacock were in the occupation of the house. While witness was there the respondent was confined, and she told her that Captain Leacook was the father. Dr. Hackney said that he was a medical man, and practised at Hythe. He attended the respondent in her confinement of May 10, 1874. She was very ill, and Captain Leacock was much alarmed, and told witness that the respondent was not his wife, but that he was the father of the child. Sir James Hannen thought he was justified in acting upon this evidence, and consequently pronounced a decree nisi, with costs.

LANDSEER'S INDIAN PICTURES AND TROPHIES.—One of the most remarkable of the Indian Fine Art Exhibitions several of which, as, previously noticed, have been recently opened, apropos of the recent "Royal Progress" in India—is Mr. George Landseer's collection of Indian Scenery and Life exhibited at 148, New Bond-street. Although Mr. Landseer (nephew of the famous Edwin Landseer) did not accompany the Prince, the publicity the artist has given to his collection occurs at an opportune time. The patronage of the Prince of Wales has been accorded, and many distinguished officers have visited the gallery, some of them being glad to renew their acquaintance with scenery and objects that originally attracted their attention in India. Mr. Landseer exhibits about eighty drawings, sketches, and por-Traits, being "studies" made by him in the course of his travels. The trophies, which form a setting to the pictures, are uniquely Indian. "The Golden Temple of Benares" is one of the most striking objects. The heads and skins which adorn the walls were collected from the artist's shooting excursions in India, and represent the game of India and Kashmir. The antecedents of Mr. Landseer as a traveller peculiarly qualified him to become an illustrator of the grand scenery of Kashmir. Mr. Landseer went to India in 1859. Arriving in Bombay during the governorship of Lord Elphinstone, he resided there until 1860, when he left to proceed with Lord and Lady Canning on their Central Indian journey. The portraits of Earl and Countess Canning are hanging upon the walls in this gallery. These were painted during Mr. Landseer's residence in Calcutta. He received a commission from his lordship residence in Calcutta. He received a commission from his fordship to paint a series of over twenty pictures of Indian subject; also the portraits of most of the native chiefs, amongst whom may be mentioned the Maharajaha Scindia, Indore, Kashmir, Benares, Puttiala, Jheend, Ulwa, Fureekhot, Shir Ali Khan, the ruler of Kabul, the Nawab of Malakotala, &c. Mr. Landseer remained with Lord and Lady Camping until the death of healedwhip and the Vicence. and Lady Canning until the death of her ladyship and the Viceroy's departure for England. Afterwards, during his engagements and sketching tours, he spent the summers of eight years in Kashmir, wintering in the various native States of India, and returned to England in 1874.

Sir Salar Jung.—In response to an address from the East India Association, in London, Sir Salar Jung has just sent the following reply:—"To Sir Lawrence Peel, President of the East India Association. Sir,—I have had the honour to receive an address from the Council of the East India Association, of which you are President, and I have now to request that you will be so good as to convey to your colleagues my best thanks for their good wishes on my arrival in England. With regard to the expression of your hope, that the result of my visit to England will be to strengthen the friendly feeling which has so long existed between the British authorities and his Highness the Nizam, I have pleasure in assuring you, that, while I fear you exaggerate the importance of my humble visit to this country, yet, that the recollection which I shall carry away with me of the kindness and hospitality shown to me, and of the friendships I have made here, cannot fail to strengthen my efforts to fulfil my duties as a minister of a faithful ally of Great Britain. You have been pleased to attribute very much to my personal endeavours the existing state of cordiality between the British and the Nizam's Government, but I can only claim to have performed to the best of my ability the part which strict honesty and common sense would have dictated, whether in regard to the course pursued by the Nizam's Governments during the Indian Mutiny, or on any subsequent occasion. If sincerity and faithfulness of purpose exist, they should be found as much a matter of certainty in time of need as at all other times. I hope that many, whether from the dominions of his Highness the Nizam or from other native States, may be led to visit this country, as I feel confident that a closer intimacy and intercourse between the gentlemen of England and India cannot fail to be productive of lasting benefit to either country. In conclusion, I would venture to observe that whatever success has attended my past administration, is I feel due to the leading of Providence, and not to any farsighted discrimination on my part. Again thanking the East India Association and yourself for your kind expression and good wishes—I have the honour to be, Sir, yours sincerely, Salar June."—The Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India and the Marchioness of Salisbury entertained Sir Salar Jung at dinner on July 4 at their family residence in Arlington-street, Piccadilly. There were present to meet him—his Excellency the Belgian Minister and Baroness Solvyns, the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, the Earl of Aberdeen, the Earl of Northbrook and Lady Emma Baring, Lord and Lady Ernest Cecil, Lady and Maud Cecil, Miss Alderson, Sir Frederick Halliday, Sir W. and Lady Emily Dyke, Colonel Stuart, Captain Napier, Mr. Fitzgerald, Mr. Whyte, Mr. Francis Knollys, &c. Lady Salisbury afterwards had an evening party.— On Saturday, Sir Salar Jung, accompanied by the Duke of Sutherland, Mr. John Bright, M.P., &c., visited the china works of Messrs. Minton and the Campbell Brick and Tile Company at Stoke on Trent. The party afterwards visited the Stafford Coal and Iron Company's Works at Fenton, and in the evening witnessed some experiments with gun-cotton at Trentham.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, TUESDAY, July 4.—SLAVE TRADE BILL.—On the third reading of this Bill, the Marquis of Salisbury said that when the Bill was in Committee there appeared to be a strange misconception in the mind of the noble earl who had lately been Viceroy of India. The noble earl thought the Bill had not been referred to the Government of India, in which he was perfectly correct, but he also appeared to be under the impression that the substance of it had not been referred. The truth was that in its essential parts the Bill was suggested by the noble earl himself. He (Lord Salisbury) was so puzzled that he thought he had better read the papers again before saying so. Having done so he proposed to lay on the table papers that would show the fact.—The Bill was then read a third time.

House of Commons, Thursday, July 6.—Mr. Grosvenor's Mission.—Mr. Bourke announced, in reply to a question from Mr. Richard, that Mr. Grosvenor had been directed to report to Her Majesty's Minister at Pekin. Sir Thomas Wade had gone to Shanghai to receive Mr. Grosvenor, and the Government had heard by telegraph that Mr. Grosvenor reached Shanghai two or three days ago. He had no doubt that the report would be sent home by the next mail.

THE BEHAR FAMINE.—Lord G. Hamilton stated to Dr. WARD that he had no information beyond that derived from a newspaper advertisement as to the requisition presented to the Sheriff of Calcutta for a public meeting to condemn the recent action of the Government in treating the motion for a commission of inquiry into the alleged famine in Behar as a party question. He believed that the sheriff had offered the requisitionists an interview, but that they had asked for its postponement sine die.

SURGEONS-MAJOR.—Mr. HARDY assured Dr. O'LEARY that senior surgeons-major of the army should not be superseded in their well-earned advancement when their seniority claim was accompanied by the other necessary qualifications.

House of Commons, Friday, July 7.—Slave Trade in the Red Sea.—Mr. Bourke informed Sir Henry Wolff that some of the statements in a narrative in the Anti-Slavery Reporter of July 1, with regard to the Slave Trade in the Red Sea, were well founded, and some were totally untrue. The Government had no reason to suppose there was any dereliction of duty on the part of the British Consul at Jeddah; on the contrary, it was owing to his representation that the slave market at that place had been shut up. At the same time there was no doubt that a considerable amount of slave-trading was carried on in private establishments at Jeddah still, and also a considerable slave traffic at other ports in the Red Sea. On several occasions during the last year and a half communications had been made on the subject to the Egyptian Government, and the matter would not be lost sight of. Communications had also been made to the Austrian Government with regard to the conveyance of slaves in the Red Sea by steamers of the Austrian Lloyd's, and if the Government thought they could do any good by making further representations they would certainly continue to make them.

ROMAN CATHOLIC PRIESTS IN THE INDIAN ARMY.—Mr. WHALLEY gave notice that on Tuesday next he would ask the Under Secretary for India, with reference to the recent provision of about £9,000 ayear for Roman Catholic priests in the Indian army against the protest of some of the members of the Council, whether such priests were permitted without restriction to enforce the doctrines of the Papel Syllabus; and whether they were still recognised by the Goverament as not being the servants of the Queen, not being allowed by their Church to be placed under the same regulations as the Presbyterian and Anglican chaplains.

House of Commons, Monday, July 10.—Regimental Exchanges.

-Mr. Hardy stated to Colonel Beresford that officers exchanging from a purchase into a non-purchase regiment could not exercise their purchase rights unless they returned into a purchase regiment.

NAUTICAL INCIDENTS.

Abyssinia (British Indian Steam Navigation Company's steamer) has put be to Calcutta; cause unknown.

Enterprise, for Bombay, in leaving dock at Liverpool, fouled Raven and Betha (fitts), both of which sustained damage; former was put aground at Egrement, a sinking state.

The following is a copy of a testimonial, selected from several others, from the assengers by the Rubattino steamer Australia, from Bombay to Genoa:—

Str. Australia, April &

Thave much pleasure in recording, on the part of myself and daughter, our case of the care and comfort which we have experienced on our present voyage from Bombay to Genoa. Being a great invalid myself I have met with the greatest kindness and attention from Captain Bozzoni and the other officers of the ship. We have made a rapid voyage under the captain's skilful navigation, and all the arrangements on board have been made so as to ensure as much as possible the health and comfort of the passengers.

A CHRONOLOGICAL AND HISTORICAL

ARTHUR ALLEN DURTNALL, of the High Court of Chancery.

Price, fully Tinted, mounted on Roller, or in Case, 20s. Size, about 40 in. by 50 in.

Showing, at one view, all the principal matiens, governments, and empires which have existed in that country from the earliest times to the suppression of the Great Matiny, a.b. 1859; with the date of each historical event according to the various eras used as India. By this Chart, any person, however ignorant of the subject, may, by an hour's attention, obtain a clear view of the broad lines of Indian History, and of the evolutions which have resulted in the dominion of her Majesty as EMPRESS OF INDIA. It will be found invaluable for Envariously, Purro-us, especially in Colleges and Schools, where an Indian career is in contemplation. It will also be found of permanent utility in all Libraries and Othees as a work of ready reference for the connection of events and dates. Besides the History of India, it includes the contemporaneous histories of Afghanistan, Central Asis, and Europe.

RELIEVO MAP OF INDIA.

HENRY F. BRION.

In Frame, 21a.

In Frame, 21a.

"A map of this kind brings before us such a picture of the surface of a given country as no ordinary map could ever de. To the mind's eye of the average Englishman, India consists of 'the plains' and 'the hills, 'chiefy of the former, the hills being limited to the Himalayas and the Nilgiris. The new map will at least enable him to correct his notions of Indian geography. It combines the usual features of a good plain map of the country on a scale of 150 miles to the inch, with a faithful representation of all the uneven surfaces, modelled on a scale thirty-two times the horizontal one; thus bringing out into clear relief the comparative heights and outlines of all the hill-ranges, and showing broad tracts of uneven ground, of intermingled hill and valley, which a common man of the same size would hardly indicate, except to a very practised eye. The plains of Upper India are reduced to their true proportions; the Central Provinces, Malwa, and Western Bengal reveal their actual ruggedness at a glance; and Southern India, from the Vindhyas to Cape Comorin, proclaims its real height above the sca-level. To the historical as well as the geographical student such a map is an obvious and important aid in tracing the course of past campaigns, in realising the conditions under which successive races carried their arms or settlements through the Peninsula, and in comprehending the difference of race, climate, and physical surroundings which make up our Indian Empire. Set in a neat frame of maplewood, the map seems to attract the eye like a prettily-coloured picture, and its price, a guisses, should place it within the reach of all who care to combine the useful with the ornamental."—Home News.

Summary and Revielo.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, June 23; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, June 21; Calcutta, June 20.

Religious bigotry-strange to say-seems hardly less rampart in India than at home. It appears that the Roman Catholics of Allahabad promised to give 500 free seats, in a new Cathedral they propose to build there, to the Roman Catholic soldiers in the Indian Army, if the Lieutenant-Governor would contribute Rs. 12,000 to the building fund. Sir John Strachey asked the Supreme Government to make the grant, but that being considered contrary to rule, the Lieutenant-Governor, with the Viceroy's approval, made the grant out of his Provincial Funds. On the matter being duly reported to Simla Mr. E. C. Bayley, as representing the Home and Public Works Departments, was greatly incensed at public money being given to forward the completion of a Roman Catholic Cathedral. Lord Lytton, however, when this outburst of Protestant zeal came to his notice, wrote a scathing minute, censuring Mr. Bayley and his supporters for their impertinence in interfering with the proceedings of the Lieutenant-Governor; and he refused to sanction the issue of the letter which had been prepared to the Lieutenant-Governor, and submitted for his Lordship's approval.

ANOTHER suicide is reported by the last mail. A telegram of June 22, published in the Times of India, states that Major Godwin, of the 16th Foot, shot himself at Sikandarabad the night before. He had just returned from the hills, still suffering from fever. As no reason is assigned for such a deed, it may have occurred while the delirium of fever was upon him. The Lahor paper also announces the death, by his own act, of a young assistant engineer, Mr. C. Flemming, lately posted to the Inundation. Canals, Lower Sutlej Division.

ANOTHER death reported by the Indian papers is that of Captain Boydell, Adjutant of the 39th Foot, who, whilst out tiger shooting, was severely bitten on the shoulder and knee by a wounded tiger. He was brought as far as Dagshai, in the Himalayas, where his regiment was quartered; but he died the following day.

LAHOR advices to the latest date report that Mr. H. C. T. Robinson, Assistant Commissioner of Hazara, fell from his horse on the 16th of June, and was badly hurt in the head.

CAPTAIN F. A. WILSON, formerly tutor to the Nawab of Jaura, has succeeded Colonel Malleson in charge of the Mysor Rajah. There is no truth in the story that Colonel Malleson had been dismissed. A Simla telegram to a Bombay paper says that the new arrangement carries out his own recommendations made before his departure at his own request from Mysor. The new tutor reached his post on the 15th June.

THE cholera outbreak in Kashmir seems to have nearly raged itselfout. We hear nothing very new from Golwood, or, as it should be written, "Gholwad," except that twelve more had died out of thirty-seven attacked. Meanwhile the Collector had sent brandy, arrowroot, &c., for the poor patients who were dying for want of nourishment. The Assistant Surgeon had greatly improved the sanitary arrangements of the village. Rain, too, had been falling heavily for some days, and the cholera was fast abating.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council, held at Simla on June 22, Mr. Hope presented the further report of the Select Committee on the Bill to regulate the procedure and increase the jurisdiction of the Magistrates' Courts in the Presidency towns. He also obtained leave to introduce a Bill to amend the law concerning the transfer of Bombay Municipal debentures. Mr. Hobhouse also got leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Indian Registration Act of 1871. The Bill purposes to make thirteen amendments in this Act which the past five years' experience has shown to be desirable.

THERE is sickness among the 10th Hussars at Mattra, several deaths having occurred during the week before the mail left. Some cases of dengue fever are reported from Allahabad and other places.

It is everywhere complained in India that no instructions have yet been received by the Indian Government about the new title conferred on her Majesty, nor has any official intimation of the assumption of the title been yet received in India.

THE Indian papers are speculating on the official changes looming in the early future. The additional year given to Sir Henry Davies, Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, will expire in March next, and his probable successor is to be found, it seems, either in Sir Lewis Pelly or Mr. Aitchison. To Sir Philip Wodehouse no successor is named as yet. Sir William Muir goes in November next, and if the appointment be given to an Indian civilian, probably Mr. R. B. Chapman has the best chance. Sir John Strachey goes home immediately, as he is suffering from an affection of the eyes, which makes him dependent upon the secretaries for his work. It is even rumoured that Sir Richard Temple retires in March next, but the doubt remains whether he will leave India until he has settled the Rent Question, which he has so zealously taken up.

STORIES of cattle-poisoning crop up from time to time in the Indian papers, and the crime in some parts of India is probably but too common. In one of the districts of the Lucknow Division it has just been discovered that a wholesale system of cattle-poisoning has apparently existed for some time.

Digitized by GOOGLE

The people mixed up in these cases were chamars, or leatherdressers; and the resident chamars and the poisoners shared the skins, which, however imperfectly prepared, find a ready sale in Cawnpore. That this practice was not detected before in that part of the country may be explained by the fact that it was supposed to be ordinary cattle-plague. Cows and buffaloes went out one day as usual to graze, and returning sickened and died. The poison was given, it seems, by inoculation. A number of men have been arrested, and further inquiries are being vigorously made to find out all the offenders.

THE Warora Colliery in the Central Provinces continues to be successfully worked. During the month of May last over 1,000 tons of coal were raised, 700 tons of which were sent to the G.I.P. Railway for locomotive use. The line of railway connecting the mines with the G.I.P. Railway is not completed, two bridges remaining still to construct; so that during the monsoon the work at the colliery will be interfered with. These mines, the area of which is proved to be large, can be worked by native labour, and the coal will serve very well indeed for locomotive engines. Careful analysis has shown that the evaporative power of the coal compared with ordinary English coal is as six to seven.

Now that the Queen's title as ruler of India has been settled by law both in English and Latin, it is time, perhaps, to consider how the Empress of India is to be called in the country for which her new title was expressly adopted. We have already had plenty of suggestions on this point from European scholars, but it might be as well to hear what the natives of India think about it. One of them, in a letter to the Indian Statesman, objects, as we thought he would, to Mr. Eastwick's suggestion of the word Kaan, as a mere Arabic equivalent for the Persian Khan, a word which in common use has fallen from its original meaning of "Emperor" to something very much lower. The writer in question prefers Sultán, or Sultan-ul-Salatin, and has no objection to Shah in Shah. But while this translation would do well enough for Persian or Urdu documents, he maintains that a separate translation would be required for Hindi, Bengáli, Marathi, and other vernaculars. In Hindi the correct title would, he thinks, be Chakravartin, or Mandaleshwara Rájni. But a better word, he tells us, "has been now adopted by the Bengal papers which clearly gives the meaning of the word "Empress." The Queen is now written as the Bharateshwari or the "Empress of India." This translation may be adopted by the Hindi, Mahratti, and other vernaculars that borrow words from the Sanscrit stock. The word Maharani, as usual, is to be prefixed to this translation as signifying "her Majesty the Queen."

THE Bombay Gazette finds serious fault with the Bombay Government for its selection of Lieutenant-Colonel Baker to fill the post of Chairman for the Port Trust. Instead of appointing "a good practical man, with no cobwebs hanging across the portals of his judgment," it has chosen "one of the most notorious monomaniacs it happened to possess in its service." Our contemporary has notice. vice." Our contemporary has nothing to say against poor Colonel Baker's personal character. He is "very conscientious," and all that sort of thing; but "an eccentric speculative enthusiast" is not the man for such a post.

He might very well have been left in the calm obscurity of his appointment in the Public Works Department to speculate upon the Number of the Beast, the coming of ten thousand virgins to regenerate the earth, the approaching end of the world, and to make mathematical demonstrations that Napoleon was the real Anti-Christ; but a man who has wasted the best part of his intellect in writing books upon these and cognate subjects is about as much in his right place at the head of a serious, practical, corporation of men of business as Hudibras would have been if he had been made Prime Minister of England.

We know nothing ourselves of Colonel Baker; but it is possible that the Bombay Government may know more about him than the Bombay Gazette. Granted that he is an "eccentric ideologist," with a very big bee in his bonnet; it does not therefore follow that a man who has queer views on religious and metaphysical subjects should not be able to discharge his professional duties to the satisfaction of his employers. Experience at any rate shows that a high degree of practical ability often goes along with a good deal of speculative weakness, and that much shrewdness in worldly affairs is not inbusiness is to be tested by his shortcomings or excesses in other directions, neither Mr. Gladstone nor Mr. Disraeli would ever have risen to the post of Prime Minister in such a country as

What the Pioneer calls one of the stupidest of "the idiotic abolitions accomplished by the destructive legislation of the last fifteen or twenty years," the abolition of the Indian Navy, is beginning to bear its natural fruit. The plan of lending the Indian Government half-a-dozen English men-of-war for £70,000 a year works no better than ought to have been expected; and the Indian Government, it seems, would rather have its hands free to carry out its own arrangements for the naval defence of India than put up any longer with a onesided bargain which leaves it at the mercy of the English Admiralty. The instructions issued by the latter to the officer miralty. The instructions issued by the latter to the officer commanding the Indian squadron direct him to comply with the requisitions of the Indian Government in all cases where this course may not be incompatible with other instructions he may have received. The naval officer is thus made in effect the absolute judge of the propriety of the Government of India's requests; an arrangement to which that Government has ever since for obvious reasons demurred. It was willing enough to pay a certain sum for the use of her Majesty's vessels, if they were placed at its own disposal; but it strongly objects to paying £70,000 a year for the privilege of asking naval officers to do what they may, if it so pleases them, de-cline doing. No Government like that of India could avoid rebelling against such an encroachment on its lawful rights and functions. Fancy the Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Army taking his orders direct from the English War Office, and granting only when it pleased him the requests of the Indian Government. The annoyance felt in India has been heightened by the refusal of the Home Government to grant the new service organised by Captain Taylor the title of "Her Majesty's Indian Marine," although most of the officers attached to it belong in fact to the Royal Navy; and a like privilege has long been enjoyed by officers of the Indian Army. This last piece of paltry jealousy on the part of English officials at home is a curious pendant to the Queen's formal adoption of a title which attests the close connection between the Crown of England and our Indian Empire.

A Times telegram from Berlin states that the Amir of Kashgar has marched with 40,000 men against the Chinese in Hárni, Bárkol, and Gutshin. Has this movement any sort of connection with the "commercial and political treaty" which, according to another telegram, has just been concluded between Yakub Beg and Russia?

A Times telegram of yesterday's date from Calcutta informs us that the Exchange question now fills the public mind to the almost entire exclusion of all other topics. Whether the lowest point has yet been reached, whether the depression is permanent or temporary, whether any and what remedy be possible—these are the main subjects of conversation among all classes in Calcutta. The rate is now a fraction above 1s. 6d. per rupee, so that remitting small sums costs about 35 per cent., while large sums cost a little less. This tells most severely on persons with fixed incomes and on all who have families at home; but the inevitable rise in the prices of all imports makes a serious difference to every one. The Government loss will nearly equal the gain from the opium revenue. Except the Mutiny, this, we are told, is probably the worst crisis in Anglo-Indian history, and there are few instances anywhere of a calamity so crushing and so general. If the depression continues, it will probably paralyse the import trade. The only sign which the Government gives as yet is an attempt to diminish home charges by inviting tenders in Calcutta for articles hitherto purchased in England. The Bengal Chamber of Commerce desires to move the Government, but it is rumoured that the members are much divided in opinion whether to recommend the Government to stop coining silver or to impose a heavy seigniorage charge. The other remedies suggested are the introduction of a gold coinage, and giving a fictitious value to the rupee by law. The objection to the former course is the heavy cost of changing the standard, and the latter scheme is denounced by the mercantile classes as utterly futile. It is doubtful, too, whether incompatible with the wildest flights of mental or spiritual unsoundness. If a man's fitness for this or that line of worldly a have the desired effect. Another proposel is to stop the issue of notes, and convert the existing paper currency into silver. The present Indian paper currency amounts to over £11,000,000 sterling, the silver coinage is over £4,000,000—that is, at the rate of ten rupees to the pound. If the whole or a portion of the paper were withdrawn and silver substituted, it would tend of course to increase the demand for metal, and so raise its price.

A REPORT that natives are about to be appointed to posts hitherto regarded as the monopoly of the Civil Service is again rife in India. It is stated that the Supreme Government has directed Sir R. Temple to submit a list of offices which Natives may fill, and the general belief is that the list will include important Executive as well as Judicial changes.

It is rumoured according to the Times correspondent that the substitution of Ranikhet, near Naini Tal, for Simla, as the Government summer quarters is again under contemplation, and that the Viceroy has called for reports and papers on the subject. It may be rumoured, but the notion of exchanging Simla for a new and small station like Ranikhet seems to us hardly worth a moment's thought.

THE rumours current in India of an impending campaign against the Afridis must for the present be regarded as mere expressions of military longing for something to do. difference with the hill-men who hold the country between Kohat and Peshawar may yet be settled by peaceful means; but failing the successful issue of a blockade, nothing will remain, we suppose, but the usual appeal to armed force. If it is needful for any good purpose to keep the road open between Peshawar and Kohat, the Afridis must not be allowed to stand in our way. But is there any such need? In a recent letter to the Times, a writer signing himself "Trans-Indus" maintains that no such need has been shown to exist. "We have no more right," he says, to make a road through Afridi land against the wish of that clan, than we should have to blow up the defences of Cherbourg. The Afridis are perfectly independent of us, and have never acknowledged, either by word or by deed, our authority, or that of any of our predecessors in Peshawar. If any clear advantage could ensue from the making of such a road, by all means let it be made and kept open at whatever cost. But "the fact is that when made the road can be of no public advantage, either in peace or in war. In the first place, the mere making of the roadway affords us no guarantee that the road will be available, and it is evident that to keep it open we must either return to the payment of allowances to the Pass Afridis, or maintain a force to keep it open vi et armis. And as the latter plan could not be effected by less than a strong brigade, it is easy to see our choice must be limited to the former course; so that when the war is over, we shall be in exactly the same position we were before." It must be borne in mind that Peshawar is held because it lies at the mouth of one of the most important routes from Afghanistan, and commands the fertile valley of the Kabul River. Its garrison have always to stand prepared for the defence of this gate of India and to protect the inhabitants of the valley from the hill robbers round them. On no sound military grounds can the defence or even the aid of Kohat be added to the duties of the Peshawar brigade. Again, the only reason for maintaining a force at Kohat is to protect that district and its valuable salt mines, and Kohat in its turn can have no connection with Peshawar. It is to Rawal Pindi that Trans-Indus looks for the due support of both these outposts. Rawal Pindi is equidistant from both. It is further argued that "as all correspondence, supplies, travellers, merchandise from the East, must come through Pindi, it is clear that no less on private than public, nor less on military than on political grounds, the Kohat Pass is of no value to us." The only conceivable use to which the road could be put, even in peace, would be for the private convenience of officers and their ladies visiting each other. But the officers would be sure to ride the whole way, and for these purposes the present road is good enough. It therefore comes to this, "that the only attainable good is to increase the convenience of travel of a few ladies whom pleasure may call from one station to the other. Moreover, as should an after complication break out with the Afridis, the road could be again rendered impracticable in one night, we shall, if we undertake this war, be fighting for the sake of a shadow."

THE same kind of service which Mr. W. Hunter lately did for Birbhúm and Orissa, and which Buchanan, Stirling, and Taylor were the first to do for other districts in Bengal, has now been done for the district of Bakarganj by another member of the Indian Services. "The district of Bakarganj" has found its vates sacer in Mr. H. Beveridge, a Bengal civilian who, as Collector-Magistrate of that part of the Decca Division, devoted his spare time for several years to the researches embodied in the volume just published by Messrs. Trübner and Co. The Author's first aim was to "write a book which would beuseful and interesting to the officers of Government and the inhabitants of the district." In this direction he has certainly succeeded. The thoroughness of his work deserves all praise. But he has done more than this. It is not everyone who can write like Mr. Hunter; but a more sober style may at least lack the defects of that writer's qualities, and Mr. Beveridge has the art of interesting the reader in a quiet way. His descriptions of the country are clearly and often gracefully worded. He seems thoroughly at home in the antiquities of Bakargani, and the purely historical chapters are brightened up with pleasant stories about the different families in each place. There are many shrewd remarks, too, about the people of Bákarganj, who are described as being the most Bengáli of Bengális. The statistical parts of the book are very full and instructive, and a good map helps the reader much. The amount of special information brought together by Mr. Beveridge does credit to his industry, while the closing chapter of "General Remarks' discusses some interesting questions connected with English rule in Bengal.

Mr. George Norton, some time Advocate-General in Madras, died the other day, in his eighty-sixth year. Mr. Norton's Indian career dates from 1823, when he went out to Bombay as Advocate-General. After some years' service in that Presidency he was transferred to Madras, where he held the same post with much distinction until his retirement in 1854. His legal abilities were accompanied and set off by a kindly nature, a strong sense of humour, an overflowing hospitality, and a keen interest in the social and political questions of the day. A true friend to the natives, he laboured zealously to promote the system of high-class education, which has since borne some noteworthy fruit; and the right of the natives to a growing share in the government of their own country found in him a steady and powerful champion.

In drawing up the Gradation List of Indian Princes, which appeared as a Supplement to the Mail of July 4, the author aimed not only to bring out the true relations of the 120 Chiefs therein specified with the Paramount Power, but also to impress upon the Indian Government the duty of assigning to each of them his definite place in any future State Darbar. It is a work, no doubt, of some difficulty to settle the conflicting claims to precedence of such Chiefs as Sindia, Holkar, Baroda, Jaipur, and so forth; but if the thing is possible and desirable, some attempt towards such a settlement should be made without more delay. For the carrying out of such a purpose the list to which we have referred offers at any rate some practical suggestions. It may be open to question whether Mysor should rank above Gwalior, or Jaipur and Jodhpur below Kolápur and Bhopal; but there can be no question that Baroda has no good title to a twenty-one gun salute, while Udaipur at present gets only seventeen. To that large class of readers, whose ideas about the "independence" of Native Princes are as vague and incorrect as Mr. Gladstone's, the aforesaid List would be specially useful, as setting before them a clear and accurate conspectus of the facts embedded in Mr. Aitchison's "Treaties" and Mr. Lepel Griffin's "Rajahs of the Punjab."

WE would again call the attention of those Indian officers, who have received their several shares of Bonus Compensation without subscribing to the Phillips Testimonial, to the claims which Colonel Phillips has upon their gratitude for the signal services rendered by him to their cause, services which have been freely acknowledged, not only by his fellow-workers in Parliament, but by the India Office itself. On this point there is the clearest evidence before us in a paper printed only for private circulation, copies of which can readily be obtained from the Testimonial Committee still sitting at Messrs. Grindlay's and Co. It shows that, but for Colonel Phillips, the concessions lately made to the claimants would have been still to seek, and that scores, if not hundreds of officers have now for the first time gained some tangible return for their past outlay. And yet we are assured that out of more than 500 successful claimants only 106 have hitherto paid their debt of gratitude by subscribing to the Testimonial Fund, although the moderate percentage of one and a-half on actual receipts was all they were asked to give. In other words four claimants out of five appear content to receive their money without making the least return to an officer who has spent money, time, and personal energy without stint for many years on their behalf. For the credit of the old Indian Army this surely ought not to be chargeable against it any longer. In the hope of aiding to do away with such a reproach, the Committee have once more sent out their circulars to all who have hitherto made no sign, and they have also advertised for the addresses of those who may not yet have received an appeal for help. We hope for the sake of all concerned that these renewed efforts will not have been made in vain, and that Colonel Strange will be enabled ere long to present Colonel Phillips with "such a sum as will be a befitting testimonial on the part of the large body who have derived such substantial benefit from his exertions." All intending subscribers should lose no time in mak-All intending subscribers should lose no time in making their remittances direct to Messrs. Grindlay, the bankers of the Fund.

DEPRECIATED SILVER.

In the Report of their proceedings the Select Committee on Silver thus sum up the more striking facts which have been brought before them:—

1. The total annual production of silver has risen to upwards of £14,000,000, from an average of about £8,000,000 to £9,000,000 in 1860.

2. Of this amount of £14,000,000 the mines of the United States are estimated to have produced about £7,000,000, with the prospect of an increase for some years to come. On the other hand, if the price of silver should remain as low as at present, there may be some diminution in the production elsewhere.

3. Germany has still to dispose of an amount which is certainly not less than £8,000,000, with the possibility that it may exceed £20,000,000; but, with the possibility, on the other hand, that a considerably larger sum than the estimated amount may be ultimately required for subsidiary coinage.

4. The Scandinavian kingdoms have discontinued the use of silver; but the amounts of demonetised silver coin which they have thrown or can throw on the market are not important.

5. Austria has apparently been exchanging silver for gold, the amount of silver held in the Imperial Bank having diminished from £10,000,000 to £6,600,000 since 1871.

6. Italy has been gradually denuded of her silver currency. Since 1865 large amounts have been exported; her forced paper currency has apparently expelled the whole of the metallic currency, of which the silver coins amounted at the beginning of 1866 to about £17,000,000.

7. France, on the other hand, has for some years past been replenishing her stock of silver, of which during the last four years her imports have exceeded her exports by £33,500,000.

8. England, Russia, and Spain have each been buyers to the extent of some millions.

9. Japan and China, and other countries in the East, have absorbed a certain amount.

10. India still takes silver, but in greatly decreased amounts.

11. The Home Government has bills to sell to the extent of £15,000,000 per annum, which debtors to India can buy in the place of remitting bullion. This total has been gradually reached, and represents an excess of more than £10,000,000, compared with twenty yea

From this statement of the facts concerned we may see at once which of them are in favour of a rise in the price of silver, and which of them tend the other way. It is well to compare the temporary character of some of these facts with the normal character of others. The surplus stock of Germany, for instance, may weigh heavily on the market for some time to come; but it can only be for a time. On the other hand, the United States will afford much lasting relief to the market by retaining, for their own coinage, a great deal of the silver there produced. They may even retain as much silver for that purpose as Germany may have to sell off. With regard to France the Committee think that the replenishment of her stock of silver can scarcely be regarded as other than a temporary circumstance. During the last four years, out of a total of £76,000,000 of disposable silver, France absorbed £33,500,000. The relief thereby given to the market must have been immense. But it can hardly be expected to continue on the same scale.

With regard to India and the East, hitherto the chief consumers of silver, the Committee hold that so much must depend upon the prosperity of the populations, on the abundance of the crops—in fact, on their powers of production—that it is impossible to make any forecast; and, as regards actual facts, no more can be stated than that, on the one hand, they have always possessed a very large power of absorbing bullion, while, on the other, that power has been diminished by the growth of the sums annually payable by India to the Home Government. The only facts in any calculation as to the future which are certain, and appear to be permanent, are the increased total production of silver and the effect caused by the necessity of the Indian Government to draw annually for a heavy amount. Both are adverse to the future value of silver, as far as they go; but they may be partially counterbalanced by changes in the trade with the East.

We hope that the Indian Government in Westminster will ponder carefully upon the lowering effect which the steady growth of their bills on India in twenty years from five up to fifteen millions has helped to produce upon the silver market. Let them also consider the suggestions made last week by our correspondent "T.," whose practical knowledge of things Indian gives special weight to his opinions on this subject. He may well ask why Government should give exchange-brokers sixteen per cent. profit on Indian bills, when they can borrow at four per cent. at home, and so enable the Government in India to turn their surplus cash balances to good account. It is evident, too, as we have pointed out before, that the public bidding for these bills aggravates the evil of a falling exchange, by enabling speculators in England and India to play through the telegraph into each other's hands at the Government expense.

Looking to Europe the Committee are aware that "much must depend upon the action taken by the Governments of the various countries where the question of the currency to be adopted is still unsettled." As they have not considered it to be within their province to make inquiry as to the intentions of these Governments, they would simply remark that it is obvious that, if effect should be given to the policy of substituting gold for silver, wherever it is feasible, and giving gold, for the sake of its advantages in international commerce, the preference even among populations whose habits and customs are in favour of silver, and thus displacing silver from the position (which it has always occupied) of doing the work of the currency over at least as large an area as gold, no possible limits could be assigned to the further fall in its value, which would inevitably take place.

This is the very evil which the advocates of a double currency seek to avert, and the Governor of the Bank of France is said to have expressed his opinion that, unless England and Germany adopt the double standard of metal currency, France could not continue coining silver. But the notion of a double standard seems curiously hateful to English economists, wedded as they are to their traditional belief in the virtues of gold alone. The Economist, for instance, argues that the effect of a double standard "is, at every change in the relative value of the two metals, to fill the country with the metal which is falling." It declares that "the essence of the 'double standard' is to create two legal tenders, and give the debtor the choice of paying in which he likes. The Indian rayat would, of course, pay in silver, just as now, and the land revenue would be as much impaired for the purposes for which it is wanted, by the depreciation of silver, as it is at present." We should rather have thought that a double standard would ensure the maintenance of the relative value of gold and silver money according to the ratio prescribed by law. The two metals would tend to balance each other, if both were freely accepted as legal tender, and the only persons who would suffer therefrom would be the speculators whom the present glut of silver is enriching at so heavy a cost to the victims of a financial fallacy.

OPIUM.—A letter from Ghazipur to a contemporary says:—"The weighing of opium at the sadr factory was closed last month, but supplies from the Mofussil sub-divisions are now coming in. The last season was unusually favourable for the opium crop, which thrives well when the weather is dry and the fields are irrigated by well-water. The total collection of this year will, it is expected, be close upon 60,000 maunds, which is greater than the yield of last year by about 20,000 maunds. Such a large quantity of opium the Benares agency has never, I suppose, been able to produce within the last twenty years."

SILVER-II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

The fond notion, which the Select Committee appear to have borrowed from the evidence of Mr. Bagehot, that before a fall of 2 per cent. could happen in the value of Silver in India there would be developed such an increase in the purchase of Indian products as to absorb all the additional Silver that can be expected to reach our market, appears to us to be wholly chimerical.—Article in the Times of the 11th July.

SIB,—The organs of the plutocracy naturally wish to make the most of the temporary fall in the price of silver, which has had so powerful an effect on the Indian exchanges; but your readers will hereafter find that Mr. Walter Bagehot's opinions deserve greater attention than the fond notions of the Editor of the Times regarding what is chimerical and what is not

If silver be so little appreciated in India, how is it that the rates of discount went up so enormously early this year, in spite of the great amount of paper money with which the Indian Government has provided the market? The fact is, that there was in February and March last a great demand for rupees required for the purchase of Indian produce for exportation; these rupees were lying in the Government treasuries, but instead of being placed at the disposal of merchants by means of India Office bills, were tightly locked up. If Parliament would cause to be published every week the rates of discount in the commercial towns of India, and the amount of silver coin in the banks and Government treasuries, and thirdly the amount of paper money floating, it would soon find out that there exists a great demand for silver money in India. June is the month for agricultural borrowing, and agriculture would be greatly facilitated if there were more rupees in the market to lend. Europeans have some idea of the commercial borrowings in December and January, but I have never yet met with an Englishman, Scotchman, or Irishman who had any distinct idea of the extent of the demand for rupees in June by the agricultural classes.

What can we say of a Government which last year borrowed in India 21 millions sterling which it could not use in India, but has been obliged to remit home at a terrible loss, not only to itself, but to every European resident in India who has saved money out of his hard-earned income?

What can we say of a Government which early in this year discontinued drawing money from India, but instead of utilising that money, so invaluable for supporting the Indian export trade, locked it up in a miserly way in its strong boxes?

The financial history of India during the past year has disclosed an amount of blundering unprecedented during the present century. In August last the merchants importing Manchester and other goods into India suffered great losses, owing to the blind determination of the India Office to borrow in India instead of in London. Six months after, the great merchants who export Indian produce, and have thus hitherto steadied the exchanges, were unnecessarily embarrassed and injured in pocket by the useless locking up of Government treasure. The whole policy of Government ought to be to encourage and stimulate the export trade, instead of checking it

Believe me, Sir, that there is at present a want of silver in the Money Markets of India for agricultural operations; there will be a demand for silver in November next for commercial purposes; and, if there be war in India, there will be an urgent demand for silver for Government purposes. Believe me also, that if the Indian export trade be given a fair chance, and be relieved of mischievous Government interference, the exports of cotton, silk, jute, sugar, indigo, tea, coffee, &c., &c., will not only amply provide for the India Office expenses and for private remittances, but will enable Manchester to send out enormous quantities of cloth at a good profit.

In your paper of the 6th of March last you stated that remittances to India (by bills of the India Office Council) had been withdrawn from the market to the extent of £1,700,000, or say Rs. 18,500,000. Consider for a moment how this must have checked the operations of merchants in Calcutta and Bombay in buying Indian goods for exportation. Merchants had not only to send from London enormous quantities of silver at a great expense, but had also to remit enfaced rupee paper to India to be sold or pledged in that country for what cash it could realise. On the 9th of March one steamer alone took out to Calcutta and Bombay silver priced at £217,500!

On the 15th of April you announced that the Bank of Bengal in Calcutta had raised its rate of discount to 131 per cent. for bills having more than thirty days to run! Such were the consequences of the artificial famine of money which our Government had caused; and with such a Government can we be surprised that wealthy India should have failed for the moment to make her exports exceed her imports by twenty-two

And even the Government itself degenerated more and more into a feeble and short-sighted selfishness. They were content with governing from one day to another, and barely transacting the current business as exigency required.—Page 67 of Vol. 3 of Mommsen's "History of Rome."

Your obedient servant, July 12.

THE P. AND O. COMPANY.

The Englishman remarks that the English in India owe an undoubted debt of gratitude to the P. and O. Company. the Company is a household word with us; and most Anglo-Indians have very pleasant memories of weeks spent on one or other of the fine steamers which comprise the Company's fleet. The complaints to which we have referred, and with which, recurring as they do annually, most of our readers are doubtless familiar, are in many cases, to our thinking, quite unfounded, and the criticisms which we have sometimes heard have generally served to confirm our impression of the general excellence of the service, showing, as they do, how very little there really is to complain of. It is a point, too, worthy of notice that the large majority of complaints come from homewardbound travellers-men either in positive bad health, after a more or less prolonged stay in this country, or, at the best, wearied and shaken by the heat and toil of the Indian day. We do not by any means say that the P. and O. service is perfect, or that anything like perfect comfort is to be experienced on board the P. and O. steamers, nor have we sny desire whatever to cover the shortcomings of the Company. On the contrary, it is because we believe much might be done to improve the service. and increase its popularity, that we are at present writing on the subject. But we think we only do simple justice to the P. and O. Company when we say that the sales we much to the property of the subject. in India owe it a debt of gratitude, and that it has done much to smooth the path of travellers to and from the East. No one who, after a lengthened period of heavy work in this country, has expearter a tengthened period of heavy work in this country, nas experienced the absolute rest which the wearied brain enjoys on one of these steamers, will deny this; and even the most inveterate grumbler must admit that, all things considered, the comfort of the P. and O. steamers is wonderful. The Company's fleet may safely be said to be unsurpassed; indeed, is not, we believe, equalled by that of any service in the world. The officers of the company are, for the most part, men of ability and experience, who may be absolutely depended upon in cases of necessity, and they also enjoy a well-deserved reputation for being. as a body. courthey also enjoy a well-deserved reputation for being, as a body, courteous and intelligent gentlemen, with whom it is a pleasure to travel. Indeed, the prosperity and popularity of the P. and O. Company have hitherto been, we believe, principally due to their magnificent ships and to the very high character of their officers. We can represent the property of the p snips and to the very high character of their officers. We can remember very few instances of thoroughly bad seamanship on the part of P. and O. officers, and, taking into consideration how many long voyages are made by the company's vessels, the number of accidents is infinitesimally small. In these respects, there is as yet no perceptible falling off; but we cannot help thinking, and we do most strongly think, that the directors of the company are pursuing a suicidal policy in reducing the salaries of their officers, and in undermanning their vessels. The opening of the Suez Canal and the general depreciation of trade. resulting in very heavy reductions in manning their vessels. The opening of the Suez Canal and the general depreciation of trade, resulting in very heavy reductions in freight, coupled with the deduction of £20,000 from the Government subsidy, have necessitated the immediate adoption by the company of stringent economical measures, but it seems to us that they have begun at the wrong end with reforms. They have reduced—in many cases largely reduced—the salaries of their officers; they have reduced the crews, and especially the European portion of the crews, of their ships; they have abolished steward's fees, and have thereby not only removed a great independent to read man to semain in their not only removed a great inducement to good men to remain in the service, but also taken out of the hands of the pursers a very important and necessary power; and they have in other ways done of late many things calculated to create discontent among their servants, and dissatisfaction among the public who travel by their steamers.

SUB-TENURES IN OUDH.

The Pioneer remarks that although the Oudh Revenue Bill was drafted in 1872, it is still awaiting discussion and final settlement. We do not know what fate has overtaken the Oudh Laws Bill, but it is understood that a draft Box Pill shortly be is understood that a draft Rent Bill has been or will shortly be printed. Doubtless the Legislative Council may fear to commit still greater errors than those already detailed if it is repetions from greater errors than those already detailed, if it hastily sanctions freth changes; and it may dread that future legislation will not remove present difficulties, while it may create additional evils. It is for e reasons that we have attempted to lay bare the causes of this failure of the sub-settlement policy, and to set forth as plainly as is possible the position of the talukdars and their sub-holders in the Nawabi; for in our view all reforms should take the direction of a return, as far as is practicable, to the relations which existed between the two classes prior to annexation; and no novelties of legislation or fanciful innovations are either recommended or desired. It is most carious, instructive, and interesting to observe that in regard to this question of the inability of the superior landowner to realise his rents from the tenantry, the positions of the Oudh talukdar in 1876 and of the Bengal zemindar in 1793 closely correspond, and that the statemen of that period committed the same mistakes in framing their regulations as the Legislative Council has done since 1858 in Acts relating to Oudh tenures. In the fifth report of the Select Committee on the Affairs of the East India Company (London, 1812), the results of the revenue administration in Bengal are dis-cussed at length, and it is remarked that "the new system had abolished, under severe penalties, the exercise of the power, formerly allowed the landholders over their tenantry and cul-tivators, and of the collectors of the revenue over the landholders; and had referred all personal coercion, as well as the adjustment of the disputed claims, to the newly-established courts of justice. The regulations which, in pursuance of these principles, provided for the liquidation of the dues of Government by the sale of the defaulters' lands, were sufficiently brief and efficient; but the rules for the distraint of the crop or other property, founded on the practice in Europe, and intended to enable the zemindars to realise their own rents, by which means alone they could perform their engagements with the Government, were ill understood, and not found In the courts of civil judicature the accumuto be of easy practice. lation of causes undecided had proceeded to such an extent as almost to put a stop to the course of justice; or at least, to leave to a zemindar little prospect of the decision of a suit, instituted to recover payment of his rent, before his own land, by the more expeditious mode of procedure established against him by the Government, was liable to be brought to sale in liquidation of an outstanding balance." And just as in Oudh the Government was at first most unwilling to admit that the evils and difficulties, of which the zemindars com-plained, arose from any defect in the public regulations. Indian statesmen ascribed the embarrassments of the landowners to their incompetency and mismanagement; and so prejudiced were they that they failed to see that as the Special Committee sarcastically remark, "the very grounds of the complaints which had been brought forward, namely, those whereby the tenantry were enabled to withhold payment of their rents, evinced that the great body of the people employed in the cultivation of the land experienced ample protection from the laws, and were now no longer subject to arbitrary exactions. It appears, however (added the committee), that the evils complained of did not affect the cultivators but the zemindars, who now in their turn suffered oppression from the malpractices of the former, and from the incompetence of the courts of justice to afford them redress."

MACAULAY'S INDIAN WRITINGS.

The Englishman holds that the real benefit which Macaulay conferred on India consisted not so much in the work which he was paid to do there, as in the voluntary labours which he undertook on his return home. Macanlay may be said to have introduced the people of India to the English nation. His "Essays on Clive and Hastings" have done more than the Post-office, or the Telegraph cable, or the P. and O. itself, to bring the East within the horizon of the West, and to render some acquaintance with the Indian Empire a part of the ordinary stock of knowledge of an educated Englishman. He came fresh to the subject. His stay in Bengal was long enough to fix the wondrous colouring and shifting scenes of Eastern life on the retina of his mind, but not so protracted as to weary him with their vastness and infinite variations. The vividness of his first impressions underwent no blunting process by the lassitude of that long disease which we call an Indian career. He returned to England still in the first flush of manhood, with faculties unenervated by any illness, and with a mind unwearied by those insoluble problems which crowd into the life, and dishearten the efforts of those who rise by the slow stages of Indian service to the higher posts of the administration. The result was that when he came to write about this country he brought to his task a combination of knowledge and of freshness which no other Englishman has yet displayed; and he won a success which no author, either before or after him, has yet attained. His brilliant studies of Indian history are to this day incomparably the most popular of his works. When published in a separate form, the "Essays on Lord Clive and Warren Hastings" sold to the extent of nearly twice as many copies as the articles on Lord Chatham, nearly thrice as many as the one on Addison, and five times more than the "Essay on Byron." This success, although liable to sudden strides, has steadily advanced, and is still increasing. The Sipahi Mutiny, indeed, doubled the sale of the "Essay on Warren Hastings," and trebled that of Lord Clive. But apart from such special occasions, the position of these articles in the current reading of Englishmen may be realised from the following facts. During the five years ending 1874, the demand for them was more double what it was during the preceding five years ending 1869, and treble what it had been during the previous five years ending 1864. These essays form a phenomenon unique in the annals of Indian bibliography. Any explanation of their success, which does not start with a just appreciation of the genius of their author, would be inadequate. Other men of genius have written about India, but no one has yet produced works upon this country in any degree approaching to Macaulay's. We are not now holding up his essays as models of exact history; although we might, with some claim to be heard, very briefly dispel the vague charges of inaccuracy which are thoughtlessly repeated about them. These charges, like the famous sneer about Addison's unreadiness as a despatch-writer, have a slender foundation in truth—a foundation exaggerated by the envy of rivals, and then magnified a thousand-fold by that pleasure which we all take in discovering that a great man is not after all so very different from ourselves. But the feature of Macaulay's Indian essays is not either their exactitude or their inaccuracy, but their charm. In reading his life we have tried to detect the sources which render Macaulay's Clive and Warren Hastings more delightful, not only than all other Indian writings, but even than the other essays from the same pen. We think it difficult to study the Indian Chapter of Mr. Trevelyan's excellent work without being struck with one aspect of Ma-caulay's brief residence here. He never lost his freshness. Wherecaulay's brief residence here. He never lost his freshness. Where-ever he went the sights and sounds around him struck sharply upon his eye and ear, and engraved themselves in clearest lines upon his memory. The commonplaces of our lives furnished the materials of his greatness. The things we have wearied of seeing, the facts we are tired of hearing, this marvellous Eastern life in which the ancient world rises from the dead, and enacts its primitive tragedies and Fescinine farces before our dull and indifferent eyes, were to him matters of the deepest human interest. He observed where we only look on. He enjoyed what we only bear with patience. He remembered where we forget.

STATION TALK.

MARRI, June 2.—A good many travellers have passed through to Kashmir, in spite of the disheartening reports of sickness. A fall of snow was reported to have taken place at Srinagar on the 17th instant, which, let us hope, may have a favourable influence over the health of the valley. I am informed the absence of sanitary precautions in and around the town surpasses all human under-The dead are shovelled into very shallow holes dug in standing. The dead are shovelled into very shallow holes dug in the nearest vacant spot to their own houses, usually close to the habitations of the living. The sewage is, as of old, performed by the river Jhelum, into which every impurity finds its way. In a late number of the Punjub Gazette our ever-watchful Sanitary Commissioner-now cheering us by his presence here-administered a few words of advice in anticipation of a visit from the unpleasant disease. Acting up to his obstinate theory of contagion in water (held, I believe, in direct opposition to the views of his confrère with the Government of India), he enjoined us to boil and filter our water before vouchsafing it a halting place in our interiors; and he further reminded us of the danger of permitting our washermen to purify our linen in the first unsavoury pool to hand, as is their venerated custom. In the absence of a vade mecum on the subject, I am unable to give the exact number of hundredths of an inch which a cholera germ may be, and yet communicate the disease to the human frame; but I mention the matter here that men of a thinking turn of mind may calculate for themselves the amount of risk the Punjab and Sind must incur from the simple in-pourings of this one city of Srinagar into the stream of the Jhelum. When will natives learn the importance of clean water? I have seen the straight-laced Brahmin imbibing the fluid a few yards below one of his fellow-countrymen engaged in laving his person. The snowfall in Kashmir has been more severe during the past cold weather than usual, and it is still falling in the Lolab Vailey and on Gulmarg, at which latter place it now lies over six feet deep. Here, in Murree, sleet and rain do duty just now for snow, and yesterday we had a downpour of hailstones sufficient to surprise the oldest inhabitant. Some of the roads, including a portion of the Mall, are still out of repair, in spite of the efforts of the municipal committee. Considering the heavy items for repairs year after year expended on patching up what the winter snows have destroyed, it is wonderful how any money remains from the wretchedly small income for undertaking new works. And yet there are many improvements going on which strike a visitor after a few years' absence—notably the new badminton ground and the ornamental walks in its neighbourhood.—Pioneer Correspondent.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Mr. Williams, the gentleman who was thrown from his horse near Fort Point, and sustained fractures of his arm and ankle, also severe internal injuries, died yesterday morning.—
Englishman, June 13.

Miscellaneous.

THE QUEEN'S INDIAN TITLE.—A learned pandit has sent us what he considers to be the best title that could be adopted by her Majesty in India, as a substitute for Empress. It is Raj Rajishuri, and is certainly expressive, as King of Kings. It is also, we believe, the name of one of the goddesses in the Hindu Pantheon.

ACCOUNT DEPARTMENT.—The following alteration in the Civil Pension Code has been made in regard to the fifty-five years' Rule:

—"The Accountant-General will inform the Local Government whenever any officer attains the age of fifty-five years, in order that the Local Government being apprised of the fact may take such action as it sees fit for the retention or otherwise of the officer in question."

BUST OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.—We have just had an opportunity of inspecting a photograph of a bust of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, by Mr. Marshal Wood, which has been placed in the Royal Academy by the command of her Majesty, and copies of which, in marble or bronze, can, we understand, be obtained through Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot, and Co., of this city.—Englishman, June 19.

PUBLIC OFFICES AT SIMLA.—The Delhi Gazette says that "elaborate plans are now ready, and will shortly be despatched to the Secretary of State, of the new public offices which are to be created at Simla, for the Governor General's offices, will spend their summer and rainy seasons in the Sanitarium. It has taken over three years to come to some determination about the purchase of the site for Government buildings. It will take, perhaps, three years more before the plans now to be sent home will be approved."

Patiala.—The Mirror says that "one of the members of the Council of Regency to be established at Patiala during the minority of the present Maharajah will be a Bengali gentleman, and that the choice of the Government has fallen on Babu Grish Chunder Das, Rai Bahadur, the Superintendent of the Government Toshakhana. It is probable Babu Grish Chunder will be succeeded in the Toshakhana by Babu Gopaul Mohun Sircar, Treasurer, Government House Treasury Office."

A Serious Accident Preventer.—A serious accident is said to have been prevented on Tuesday morning by the pluck of a native at the Government Bakery, Hastings. A new boiler and machinery have just been fixed, and when at full work some portion gave way, placing the boiler in danger. The noise of the rushing steam caused all the employés to run into the compound out of harm's way. The head maistre (among the run-a-ways) perceiving the danger of the boiler bursting, returned to the engine-house and opened the safety-valve, thus allowing the steam to escape, and so preventing what might have been a disastrous calamity.—Pioneer, June 17.

Sir John Strachev.—A contemporary understands that Sir John Strachey will leave India about the 10th July. His eyes have been bad for some time—so much so that he was not always able to read or write, and had to get papers read to him, and dictate his orders. Finding no improvement from medical treatment in India, he has been compelled to go to England for six months. Sir John's general health has, we regret to say, not been the best, and, unless it is so thoroughly restored as to stand the enervating effects of Indian climate, his return to India is very doubtful. In addition to Mr. Inglis, Sir George Couper is mentioned as likely to officiate as Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces.

Colonel Chesney.—The report, says the Indian Daily News, at first so quietly murmured in Calcutta, that Colonel Chesney was to be our next Finance Minister, is now so unblushingly repeated in the mofussil papers—each of which appears to have received a separate private assurance to that effect—that those who think the report at all strange may as well repeat it frequently, in order to get accustomed to the underlying fact. Other things have happened in India than the appointment of a talented Colonel to the financial portfolio. A Judge of the High Court has once been translated to the Foreign Secretariat. At any rate Colonel Chesney, if the report prove correct, will not be the first fiction-writer who has been nominated for this high office.

FATAL ENCOUNTER WITH A TIGER.—The Simla correspondent of a Calcutta contemporary writes:—"On Sunday last Captain Boydell, adjutant of the 39th Regiment, was out shooting, about one march and a half beyond Nahan, with his shikaree. They came upon a tiger on the bank of a nullah, and fired both barrels of their rifles. The animal rolled back into the nullah, badly wounded, but picking himself up, came towards the sportsman. Captain Boydell, finding his rifle would not shut, called for his extra gun, which the shikaree said was empty. He then ran up the bank, when the tiger rushed at him. He tried to keep him off with the muzzle of his rifle, but was knocked down, and bitten on the shoulder. The tiger then left him, but, seeing him move, came up again, this time biting his knee. The shikaree despatched the animal after this. Captain Boydell was brought to Dugshai, where his regiment was quartered, on Wednesday, and was carefully attended by doctors Hamilton and Sankey, who went out to meet him. He passed a good night, but died next day. The regiment deeply deplores the loss of this sterling officer and excellent sportsman."—Times of India, June 23.

The Transfer of Anti-Faminists.—A correspondent writes to the Pioneer as follows:—Sir,—If truth does not lie at the bottom of a well, it might possibly, on inquiry, become apparent that the author of the "Black Pamphlet" is not the only individual, who has been treated allopathically to a course of malarious vapour, with a view to increasing his powers of perceiving magnified images of microscopic famine. If your Calcutta special correspondent of May 21 would inquire into the reasons for transfer of Mr. Arthur C. Wright, Uncovenanted Civil Service, deputy magistrate of Sewan, to Jehanabad in Gya, and the cause of his death, the case might possibly be ascertained to be very similar, and the sudden removal of his successor is perhaps attributable to the too lucid manner in which he exposed the inner workings and emoluments of the purdanasheen cotton-spinning sisterhood in his first "narrative," and his promise to do ditto regarding the weaving fraternity in his next issue. For him, however, a course of treatment suitable to the constitution of a Covenanted Civil Servant was prescribed, so that his caccethes scribendi should be constrained under secretariat supervision. About the time of the above occurrences a course of vapour baths in the Purneah district was ordered for the relief works assistant engineer, Sewan, but, on second thought, this treatment was modified, an injection into space to the extent of 1,500 miles being considered as more likely to effect a thorough cure. This individual has been heard to assert that he now sees the greatest famine distress existing everywhere, and that it especially occurs amongst the bunniah caste in harvest time.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S INDIAN EXPENSES.—The statement that the sum of £60,000 voted by Parliament towards the expenses of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales's Indian tour has not been exceeded by the cost of the journey will be received with general scepticism. We should like to know what is covered by the phrase "the accounts of the expenses connected with the Prince of Wales's visit to India." If it be said that the full bill which these comprehensive terms may be supposed to imply has been settled for £60,000, we see at once that this is incredible. That Parliament will not be asked "for any further vote of money" to defray the expenses of the Heir Apparent in India may more easily be believed. Handsome sums were subscribed, more or less voluntarily, by the people of every city and town through which the Prince passed, and also by the people of those town to which there was only a feint of H.R.H.'s approach. Municipal and other public funds were also freely expended to eke out popular subscriptions. As we wall lavished by native princes in gifts to the Heir Apparent, and on shows to welcome him and his suite, the immense aggregate amount will become one of the traditions of the land. We are freely expended to eke out popular subscriptions. As to the sums not going to grumble at or grudge this; but we should like to know how much besides all this India has spent. Every department must have contributed something to the unconfessed undefined extra ex-Cannot we have some retrospective, some "regular," mate of it? No; because the outlay on this head was expressly excluded from separate accounts—by whose order no one will ever The other day a local contemporary referred to this prescribed mixing up of accounts, but erred as to the date and place where that strategic financial movement was made known. was mentioned by a special correspondent of our own writing from Western India, and before the Prince's Madras programme was decided by his steaming off to Ceylon. Before that period, separate accounts had been kept of "the expenses connected with the Prince of Wales's visit," and there is no doubt that the Financial Department would have been quite equal to keeping such an account all through, but it was decreed otherwise. As to the object and reason of that decree, the lieges are left to surmise; but we were rather surprised at the time that our correspondent's early and, we daresay, unwelcome notification did not attract more attention. Its significance is now apparent.—Englishman.

The Modern Babu.—Englishmen and Hindus have never as yet understood one another; perhaps they never will. An Englishman comes to India and fancies himself a very superior being. A Hindu goes to England and fancies himself in a similar case. Each on has reasons for his belief; yet both perhaps are in the wrong. Not very long ago I met an old Hindu friend in England. He was dressed like an English gentleman, saving that he wore a turban. He had tried the hat, but no one paid him any attention. He took to a turban, and the world was at his feet. He was invited everywhere, and he always went in the turban. There was a general election; the Bengal famine was at its height; Hindus in turbans were at a premium. My friend was snapped up by Mr. Fawcett's election committee at Hackney. A large placard was hung round his neck bearing a new war cry—"Vote for Fawcett, the beloved of Bengal!" He was driven in an open carriage all day long through the streets of Hackney, waving a banner in honour of the illustrious Fawcett. The admirers of Fawcett hailed my friend with acclamations as the enlightened gentleman of Bengal who was going about to see the world. The opponents of Fawcett told him to go back to his country and feed his starving fellows in Bengal. I should add that my friend knew nothing of Bengal; he was a Madras man. There are some who think that the Hindus are degenerating; that education is spoiling them; that going to England is the ruin of young Bengal. The old orthodox school of Babus complains that the rising generation is losing its Hindusim in trying to become European. But are the young Hindus of the present day really inferior men to their fathers or grandfathers? The Babus of older time was certainly very religious, after the fashion of his ancestors. He was obsequious and low-voiced, especially in the presence of Europeans. He lived in constant terror of the Brahmins; he was ever fearful of offending against the gods. He spent two or three hours every morning in worshipping the family idols, with a lamp burning before him to represent deity. He was temperate in his ways, charitable in his deeds, generous in his friendship, and lavish in his superstition. If he became rich, he still wore the plainest clothes; hived on chapatties, vegetables, rice, curries, and a few sweetmeats. He married his sons and daughters according to caste rules and as trological laws. The Babu of the present day is sceptical, presuming, and noisy. He eats and drinks forbidden things, and violates the shastras in every possible way. He laughs at the Brahmins. He is angry when the women of the household give money to the Brahmins. He gets through his prayers in a quarter of an hour. For all that he is quite as much of a gentleman as the Babu of two or three generations ago. His education may have undermined his faith, but it has familiarized him more or less with English literafaith; but it has familiarised him more or less with English literature. He is striving after something higher and better than the literary pabulum which satisfied his fathers. His efforts may be sometimes ludicrous in this direction. He may strive to impart European ideas of chivalry and devotion to the sex into his Hindu household. He may indite limping verses of love and passion to girls who cannot read them, and who certainly cannot understand them. But for all that he tries to educate his wife, and perhaps succeeds in teaching something to his daughters. The reformation has begun which is to regenerate Bengal.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Madras.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.—The Madras Chamber of Commerce, at a meeting recently, resolved, by the casting vote of the chairman, that assistants in charge of mercantile firms be considered qualified candidates for election to the membership of the Chamber.

GOLD AT WELLINGTON.—Gold has been discovered by Mr. Haymes at Wellington, and proposals are already afoot to form a company for "prospecting" the land. The discoverer is the same person who quite recently took a prominent part in testing the reefs at Colar, near Bangalor, and in making the assays given in Mr. Linton's report on the Alpha Company's mine.

Kochin.—According to the census taken in Kochin last year, the population amounts to 601,114 souls. At a census taken in 1849 the number of the people was only 356.802; so the population has nearly doubled in twenty six years. The density of the population, taking the province to be 1,361\frac{1}{3} square miles in extent, is 441 per square mile, and taking the number of houses at 117,368, there are on an average five persons in each house.

BANGALOR.—A correspondent at Bargalor says that " the most unpopular man at that place at present is the man - whoever he was—who first conceived the notion of bringing the Maharajab into Bangalor. The Maharajah is followed by thousands of ragged retainers, carrying cholers wherever they go, and the Bangalor of the future, instead of being a clean, healthy, English cantonment, will be a filthy native town, full of insolent native swashbucklers like those of Hyderabad."

THE MAHARAJAH OF MYSOR'S GUARDIAN.—We hear from Indore that Captain F. A. Wilson, Political Assistant at Tehree, in Bundelcund. has been appointed to succeed Colonel Malleson as Guardian to the Maharajah of Mysore. Captain Wilson acted in the same appointment as Guardian and Tutor to the Nawab of Jowrah, until attaining his majority last year; so that the Viceroy no doubt must have, in consultation with Sir Henry Daly, now at Simla, made this appointment, on which the Mysoreaus may be congratulated.

CHOLERA IN BIG PARCHERBY.—Owing to several fatal cases having occurred during the present week, the President of the Municipal Commission and the Sanitary Inspector drove yesterday through several of the streets of Big Parcherry, and, after making minute enquiries, directed a dooly to be kept in readiness in cases of emergency. Someonly of the Next Indian residents also writed on Dr. Dr. gency. Several of the East Indian residents also waited on Dr. D. R. Thompson, the Surgeon of the district, and requested that a dresser may be stationed in the place to render assistance, which request was granted immediately. Madras Mail, June 15.

GOLD IN MYSOR.—The following is the only allusion in the Mysor Administration Report for 1874-75 to the quest for gold in the province that is exciting a good deal of notice elsewhere :- " During the year under review certain mining rights in the Kolar district were granted to Mr. Lavelle, who is permitted to prospect and search for granted to Mr. Lavelle, who is permitted to prospect and scaled logold, metallic ores, &c., for a period of three years, from February 22, 1875, and to select one or more pieces of land; the number of pieces not to exceed ten, and no block to exceed two square miles in extent. These blocks are to be demarcated as soon as they have been selected, and leased out to him for a period of twenty years.

FAREWELL ENTERTAINMENT TO MR. DALYELL.—On Friday, June 9, a ball and supper were given at Bangalor to the Hon. R. A Dalyell on his giving up his appointment as acting Commissioner of Mysor. The entertainment was given by the European and native residents, and was very successful. On the following evening the European officers of the Mysor Commission entertained Mr. Dalyell at a farewell dinner. A dinner was also to have been given him by the officers of the Bangalor Rifle Volunteers, but was unavoidably abandoned, owing to Mr. Dalyell having no time to accept the invi-

FATAL ACCIDENT.—We regret to learn that Mr. Hope, Assistant Superintendent of Police in Malabar, son of Colonel Hope, Officiating Commandment 4th Madras Cavalry, met with a very sad death on the 10th June. A correspondent of the Standard states that he had been dining with Mr. Thomas of the Zillah School, but left the table before dinner was over, and proceeded at a quick pace towards the traveller's bungalow, where he was putting up. There is a large well close by, and as it was a rainy night and very dark he seems to have come in contact with the parapet of the well, and before he could save himself was precipitated into it. His head coming in violent collision with the laterite sides of the well, his skull was fractured and his death must have been almost instantaneous. His horsekeeper proceeding to the well on the following morning, on seeing the body gave the alarm. There was scarcely a foot of water in the well. His remains were taken to the civil dispensary, where they were examined by Surgeon Levinge, and interred in the afteronon in the Protestant cemetery.

NEWS FROM MANDALAY.—A letter from Mandalay in a Rangoon journal gives the following account of the reception of Mr. Grosvenor's party at that city :- "Since I wrote you last week, I have to report the safe arrival here of the Grovenor party, also the troops. They arrived on May 27th, at 4 P.M., and with them the King's ateamer, as escort, all well. A deputation of Woons and 500 troops received Mr. Grosvenor on the banks, and proceeded at once to the King's 'China Summer House,' to luncheon. They then left for the Residency, and remained incog., visiting the city for a short time, I believe. They had intended to see the King, but the arrangements were altered. I believe the 'Shoe Question' was the reason, but this I do not know for certain. They leave here to-day (June 1st) by steamer for Rangoon. A grand poay was given yesterday (May 31st) and Monday at the Residency, by Colonel Duncan, and it was a very brilliant affair. The best art was engaged, and the performance was excellent. It was crowded mostly by Burmese, a few Europeans being present. No news here. The King is about to erect a new cotton-mill of 20,000 spindles, to be carried out by an Englishman, at a cost of £40,000. Cholera and small-pox are decreasing.

A GIRL MURDERED BY HER SWEETHEART.-The Mangalore correspondent of the Calicut Observer relates how a girl was murdered by her lover:—"A melancholy piece of news comes to us from Buntwal, an inland town, ten miles to the east of this place. Mur ders, in every nine cases out of ten, are attributed on this coast te marital jealousies and matrimonial infidelities; it is no wonder, therefore, that a woman is at the bottom in the dastardly murder that has been lately perpetrated. A native Christian girl (so goes the version of the story I have heard) was betrothed by her parents to a well-todo young man, but they were thissfully ignorant in what light Lothario was regarded by their daughter. It appears that she bitterly disliked her intended, and was fostering some secret animosity against him. The young wooer having come to discover this maladie du cœur, determined to pay his sweetheart off, and one evening, when the girl went into a wood hard by her dwelling, he pounced upon her and inflicted several deep and mortal gashes with a whetted knife. Death followed instantaneously, and in the struggle the girl, it is said, bit off a finger of the murderer. The parents heard the news with no little surprise, and gave immediate information at the police station. The police proceeded on their scent, and-to their credit, be it said-soon captured the murderer, who is now undergoing trial at the sessions.'

THE LATE COLONEL MACAULAY.—Colonel Macaulay, the Commandant of the 37th N.I. Grenadiers, says a Madras contemporary, put an end to his life at eight r.m. on the 14th instant, at Bangalore, by throwing himself across the line of railway as the mail train was passing the 215th mile. He seems to have been quite bent on committing the rash act, for he was seen seated on a bridge near the scene of his death so early as six o'clock in the morning, and as the train was late in arriving at the Jollarpett station he had to wait nearly two hours to put his desperate resolve into execution. The train having approached, he dashed forward, and was run over. His body was very much mangled, and death must have resulted instantaneously. An inquest was held on his remains, and the jury returned a verdict that the act was committed while the deceased was labouring under a fit of temporary insanity. His remains were interred the following morning. It seems that while absent on privilege leave matters in the regiment went somewhat wrong, and on his return to duty in a feeble state of health he was, we believe, given to understand that it was desired be should take further than the same was the second transfer. understand that it was desired he should take furlough, as it was not thought prudent that he should resume the command for the present. This preyed very much on his mind, and while in a state of temporary insanity he was led by a wild impulse to put an end to his existence in the manner described. We learn that after waiting for two hours he made a deliberate jump from his seat on to the line. When the body was picked up it was found that the deceased had pulled off his shoes while waiting. A peon, who had been observing him while he was waiting said that he seemed restless, and occupied himself in pitching pebbles about and pulling up grass. A small heap of the latter was found near the parapet.—Times of India, June 23.

COAL IN SOUTHERN INDIA .- The Madras Times informs us that Major Beattie, District Engineer of Godavery, has submitted to Government reports of progress of the coal-boring operations at Beddadanole, in that district, up to the 8th of April, during absence, on leave of Mr. King, the Government Geologist. In carrying out Mr. King's instructions, it appears that bore-hole No. 5 had been deepened from 219 to 2661 feet, or 137 feet short of the depth desired, when it caved in; and that a new hole, No. 10, was sunk 239 feet or sixty feet short of the minimum depth desired, when it also had to be abandoned, a seven and a half feet seam of coal having been met with at a depth of seventy-four feet. Of its quality Mr. King gives no report, but the District Engineer remarks marginally that it was a poor shaly coal. Bore-holes Nos. 11 and 12 were still in prowas a poor shaly coal. Bore-holes Nos. 11 and 12 were still in progress at the date of the report, viz., 8th April, having been sunk to depths of 313\frac{1}{3} to 252\frac{1}{3} feet respectively, or more than the minimum depth prescribed. In No. 11, a seven and a quarter feet stratum of coal appears to have been met with at precisely the same depth as the stratum in No. 10, regarding which Government wish to have Mr. King's opinion. No trace of coal appears in No. 12. It is presumed that Mr. King has been constantly communicated with by the subordinate in charge of the works, and that he has been duly instructed by Mr. King as to his procedure, from time to time, as required. Specimens of all the coal obtained have been directed by Government to be preserved, one set to be sent to England, and another to be deposited in the Museum at Madras, and reports of progress are to be punctually rendered every month. Major Beattie states that borings may be carried on continuously till the end of September if necessary; but that during the north-east monsoon, and up to about February, the climate of Beddadanole would probably be very feverish, and it will be best to remove the party at that time.

DEATH OF COLONEL F. P. CAMPBELL .- We much regret to state that Lieutenant-Colonel Francis Pemberton Campbell, commanding the 14th (King's) Regiment of Hussars, died at Bangalore yesterday. of dysentery. He arrived in India with his regiment so recently as February last. He entered the army in 1854, and served with the 79th Highlanders in the Crimea from 12th July, 1855, including the siege and fall of Sebastopol and assault of the Redan, on the 8th of September. (Medal with Clasp and Turkish Medal.) He served also with the 79th in the Indian campaign, including the siege and capture of Lucknow, actions of Bareilly, Shahjehanpore, and Mohum-dee. He served from September, 1858, with the 1st Punjab Cavalry, and was present at the capture of Rampore Koossia and pursuit, passage of the Gogra, affairs of Churda and attack on Bankee, with pursuit to the Raptee, advance into Nepaul, and affair at Sitkaghat. He was also with Sir Alfred Horsford's force on the froatiers of Nepaul from January to June, 1859. (Medal with Clasp.) He was promoted to Captain in 1862, to Major in 1868, and to Lieutemant-Colonel in April, 1875. By this casualty the command of the regiment has devolved upon Major William Arbuthnot. This efficer is the eldest son of Mr. Archibald Arbuthnot, formerly of Messra. Arbuthnot and Co., Madras, by a daughter of the late Field-Marshal Viscount Gough, and he is a brother of Mr. G. G. Arbuthnot, and a consin of Sir William Arbuthnot. Bart., both of that local firm. cousin of Sir William Arbuthnot, Bart., both of that local firm. Major Arbuthnot served with the Rifle Brigade in the Indian campaign in 1857 58, including the siege and capture of Lucknow, and some of the minor affairs of the campaign. (Medal with Clasp.) He also served in the Abyssinian campaign as Aide-de-Camp and Assistant Military Secretary to Lord Napier, and was present at the capture of Magdala. (Mentioned in despatches, Brevet of Major and Medal.) He married, in 1865, a daughter of Lord Rivers, and two months afterwards, while travelling with her husband in Switzerland, that lady was killed by lightning. Much public sympathy was evoked in England by this catastrophe.—Bangalore Examiner, June 19.

QUARANTINE AT KURRACHEE.—The following telegram from the Secretary to Government, Bombay, to the Commissioner in Sind has been placed at our disposal:—June 12th—Quarantine of 15 days imposed at Aden on all vessels arriving from Persian Gulf or Kurrachee with cargo transhipped irrespective of length of voyage. The same should be done at Kurrachee if vessels wish to avoid quarantine at Aden.—Sindian, June 14.

MORE "MUNITIONS OF WAR."—We hear that the Superintendent of the Preventive Service and Mr. J. Tucker, one of the officers have made another seizure of munitions of war. They consist of two cases of Armstrong shot and were seized on board the P. and O. Co.'s Australian, from which vessel it was intended to tranship them to the Indus for China. It is supposed that they form part of the battery, portions of which have already been seized while in transit.—Times of India, June 23.

DARING BURGLARY.—A daring attack by burglars was made last Monday night, between the hours of eleven and twelve o'clock, on the bungalow occupied by the Rajah of Akulkote, situated on the Bund Road. The burglars would have escaped but for the opportune presence of two young gentlemen who, on hearing the shouts of "chor, chor," hastened from the Bund—where they happened to be—to the spot, and succeeded in apprehending, in an adjoining field, one of the gang, a stalwart Madrasee, with a big cudgel in his hand, and which only for the bold and determined front of the young gentlemen he might, and, had he pluck, could have wielded to his advantage. The Rajah's people, who proved arrant cowards, immediately on hearing of the capture, ran up and recognised the prisoner as being one of the gang, from the fact of his having belaboured some of them with his cudgel. We learn that three others of these desperadoes have been apprehended, and that summonses for the apprehension of three more are issued.—Puna Obrver, June 8.

NIGHT ATTACK PARADE.—One of these most useful, though somewhat tantalising, manœuvres, under the command of Major-General Lord Mark Kerr, occurred last night, each man furnished with ten rounds of blank ammunition. Immediately after the firing of the nine o'clock gun, which must have been the signal for attack-a brisk and continuous rifle firing was heard in the direction of the Masonic Lodge, the Gymnasium, and along the high ridge of stones thrown up in the excavating of the Kurruckwasla Canal. The night's programme, so far as we could learn, consisted in the 2-15th Foot resisting the advance of an enemy—the 66th coming from Ghorepoorie on to the lines of the former, and a more favourable night for a surprise by an enemy could not have been selected, for besides a constant dropping of rain, the moon, though fully obscured by dark clouds, made it a matter of some difficulty to discern an object ten paces off. We would advise our readers in future when they hear any firing at night to consider it as one of these night attack parades, for now that Lord Mark Kerr has had one of them, he is sure to have another.—Puna Observer.

ACCIDENT ON THE G. I. P. RAILWAY .--On Wednesday last, June 14, a collision, which narrowly escaped being of a fatal nature, occurred on the G. I. P. Railway, near Mazagon Bridge. It appears that as the Jubbulpore mail train, which left Boree Bunder at six P.M., Madras time, approached the railway over-bridge at Mazagon, an engine which had been engaged in shunting was standing on the line, and the driver of the mail train having no intimation of the danger, owing to a curve in the road, allowed the train to run on until within a short distance of the engine, immediately on seeing which he used every effort to bring his train to a standstill before coming into collision, but of course could not do so. Fortunately, however, he succeeded in arresting the speed of his train to such an extent as to prevent any serious damage being done. It is stated that the only passengers hurt were some of the company's servants, who generally travel by that train from Boree Bunder station to Tanna, and they sustained some slight bruises only. The shunting engine had its buffers, &c., considerably injured, the other engine escaping with a few damages on its face plate. Mr. Swan, Traffic Superintendent, Mr. Platts, the Assistant Traffic Superintendent, and some of the locomotive officers were present at the spot. The railway police, consisting of Mr. Dickenson and Mr. Simmons and some natives, were also on the spot, and rendered every assistance. The accident occasioned a delay of about one An inquiry into the cause of the accident is to be held by the authorities at Byculla.

THE CHOLERA AT GOLWOOD.—GOLWOOD, June 10.—I regret to say that the epidemic has not as yet disappeared from amongst the poor villagers of this station. On the 8th there were thirty two cases of cholera, out of which four proved fatal. Yesterday there was a little calm till the afternoon, but unhappily in the only locality, Dhedwar, where the contagion had not appeared till then, the disease carried off in a very short time about three or four men, and fright-ened the rest to such an extent that it would be no exaggeration on my part to say that these poor people were found running away as quickly as their legs would carry them with their little effects and miserably starved children, as if they were so many maniacs. Alto-gether, up to six o'clock in the evening, there were twenty-nine cases of cholera among so small a number of men, and therefore it is no wonder to see them forsaking their homes to save their dear There is a small village close by this locality known by the name of Bordee, where this miserable crowd first wanted to retire, but no sooner had they approached the limits than out came some villagers and drove them away. At about half-past eight P.M. these men and women were observed coming towards the railway station limits. I am sorry to say that these wretched refugees are being driven out from every populated place. They have taken up their temporary abode in the open fields opposite to the railway station, where they stand the least chance of molestation. The doctor, who has been sent from Bombay, complains of the ignorance of the villagers, who, being superstitious, refuse to take medicine on such occasions; but they invariably prefer muntras or jadoo, as they call it, to drive the mata (su evil deley) away, whom they consider to be the cause of the plague. At this juncture the people of the village miss their former doctor and ready adviser in Mr. Lazarus Abraham, who, owing to his wife's sudden death, has retired to Poona. This gentleman has done a great service in reforming the illiterate people in and about the village, and has gained their confidence after a patient study of their manners in medicinal cures. Even he sometimes lamented over the ignorance of the people, when in cases of sickness, they resorted to their favourite charms, &c.— Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

A Mutinous Outbreak on Board an American Ship. -On Saturday morning at eleven o'clock a boy from the American ship John Clarke brought the intelligence on board the Police Hulk that a serious row had taken place on board that ship between the seamen serious row had taken place on board that snip between the seamen and the captain and officers, in which fire-arms and other deadly weapons were being used. Mr. Moffat, the Superintendent of the Water Police, at once put off in a police boat in company with three police officers, Messrs. Ingram, Goff and Rogers. On the police officers boarding that vessel, they found a seaman, named Allick, suffering from a bullet wound on his left arm. It appears from inquiries that this man Allick had discharged a revolver three times at the captain of that vessel and the second officer. The captain retaliated with his revolver, shooting the man Allick through the left arm, the bullet lodging in the fleshy part of the shoulder blade. Previous to this the chief officer attempted to disarm the man Allick, but a seaman named Brown interfered, and struck the chief officer on the head with a heavy teak batten, knocking him down insensible over a water cask which was standing at the doorway of the forecastle, during which time another seaman, named Macmahon, taking an iron belaying pin from the rail of the ship's side pursued the second officer round the decks. The second officer was also armed with a revolver, but in the early part of the scuffle he had put it out of order by striking the opposite parties engaged in the scuffle with it. To Mr. Moffat, with the police officers on arriving on board, the crew offered no resistance. Mr. Moffat ordered the removal of the wounded man Allick to the European General Hospital, where he is at present under treatment. The seaman Brown and Macmahon were taken into custody and lodged at the Fort Police-court chowkey. The disturbance appears to have originated through the second officer chastising the man Allick for being absent from the hold of that ship, where they were stowing cargo, for a longer time than what the second officer thought was necessary. When the captain and chief officer interfered, the other two men, who took a prominent part in the scuffle, went to the assistance of their shipmate Allick. The others of the crew appear to have stood neutral, although a great deal of dissatisfaction prevailed among the crew, of which they have frequently complained to the American Consul, but they received no redress at his hands. We might mention that Captain Russel, of the late barque Kashgar, recently burnt at sea, is at present the chief officer of the John Clarke. -Bombay Gazette, June 16.

TRANSPORT REGULATIONS.

The following G. O. by H.E. the Commander-in-Chief in India is published for information and guidance:—

Head-quarters, Simla, May 8.—The following alterations are made in the Transport Regulations :-

Transport Regulations, Part I.

Para. 204 is reconstructed as follows: 204. Warrant Officers, invalided and pensioned on the Indian rate, are not entitled to free passage to Europe.

II. Warrant Officers who have served the prescribed periods entitling them to the Europe rate of pension are, on being pensioned, entitled to free passage on the regulated rate of passage money, if proceeding to Europe.

III. Warrant Officers who have served the prescribed periods entitling them to the Europe rate of pension, and who proceed home on medical certificate in view to retiring at the end of their leave, are likewise entitled to a free passage, or the regulated rate of passage money to Europe.

IV. Warrant Officers invalided in India, but qualified by service to retire in Europe, if desirous of admission to the English rate of pension are, on finally relinquishing all claims to the Indian rate of pension, entitled to a free passage, or the regulated passage money of their rank to Europe, precisely in the same manner as Warrant Officers on the effective list proceeding to Europe on medical certificate.

List proceeding to Europe on medical certificate.

V. Warrant Officers receiving retiring pensions to settle in the Colonies are allowed free passage thereto.

Transport Regulations, Part II.

The following clause to be added to para. 140A (G.O. 283 of 1873): Warrant Officers receiving a retiring pension to settle in the Colonies are allowed, in addition to free passage by sea, the cost of transit to the port of embarkation, as granted to those proceeding to England on retiring pensions.

May 20.—The following addition is made to Transport Regulations, Part I., and will be entered as para. 47a:—
47a. On board her Majesty's Indian troopships all Warrant Officers not holding honorary commissions are entitled to second class accommodation and messing. In other vessels Warrant Officers of the first class are proand messing. In other vessels Warrant Officers of the first class are provided with first class accommodation or passage money at first class rates.

The following additions are made to Transport Regulations, Part-I., to be entered as Clauses Ic. and XIV. of para. 169:—

Ic. Officers of the Indian Medical Service of the rank of Surgeon-General, who may have passed through a tour of service as Deputy Surgeon-General or exturning to England on completion of such tour, be treated deneral, or returning to England on completion of such tour, be treated in the same manner as General and other officers of the Indian Army appointed to commands in India.

Clause XIV. A free passage to England will be granted to sub lieutenants who fail to qualify for their lieutenancies.

KASHMEER CARPETS.

We heard some time since that a new manufacture in the shape of carpets from the valley of Kashmeer was about to be introduced into England; but seeing no announcement relating to these articles, we concluded the idea had been abandoned. More recently, however, we learnt that such was by no means the case, and that not only is the project in course of execution, but that Mr. H. Cope, of 22, Fenchurch-street, London, whose Punjab and Kashmeer agency we have already had occasion to mention favourably, has received a considerable number of patterns that speak well for this new branch of industry.

We call it new, because carpets, although occasionally woven in the valley, have been hitherto considered more as "curiosities of art" than anything else, giving, however, a very good idea of what could be done in this direction if occasion should offer. The Kashmeerians, whose shawls have been for ages so much admired, should be able to turn out handsome carpets, because their taste is good and highly appreciated in their own particular line, and because they are expert and intelligent weavers who, do not require much teaching from without to produce excellent and enduring work. The man who can design a handsome shawl should be able to draw a suitable and artistic pattern for a carpet, and we were not surprised on seeing the recently received patterns at Mr. Cope's office to find them, from the taste they display, the brilliancy of their colours, and the quality of the texture (the wool employed being confessedly very superior to that used in the jails and free manufactories in the plains of the Punjab and other parts of India) to be calculated to command a ready and, indeed, eager sale, as they are, we understand, offered at nearly the same price as carpet ware manufactured in those jails, that have hitherto been in much request amongst the large dealers at the West-end. We may even say that they compare very favourably with the two or three carpets specially made for presentation to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, to be seen in the India Museum, South Kensington.

to be seen in the India Museum, South Kensington.

These carpets are being woven to the order of an enterprising English gentleman who has received a concession for a term of years from the Maharajah of Kashmeer, who is snxious to secure suitable employment for the artisans thrown out of employ by the diminution in the demand for shawls. According to this concession no other person is permitted to weave carpets in the territory of his Highness, who has taken steps for placing a considerable number of artisans at the sole disposal of the concessionaire whom Mr. Cope represents in Europe and America. We recommend an early visit to his office by those who deal in goods of this kind.

All the samples forwarded are choice of their kind, and present a wide range of selection. There are no apartments, however artistically furnished, to which one or other would not add a charm such as would in vain he sought to be secured by Turkish, Persian, or English made carpets. From the variety in style and in application of colour, only illumined illustrations would suffice to convey a true conception of their beauty, whether as regards arrangement and general tone or distribution of hues. In all there is a unity of effect, the true cause of which it would be difficult to realise. The general result is cool, yet the patterns are rich and full of colour, the artists well knowing how to enhance and enliven their designs. The colours are so well distributed, each tint is so well balanced with its complimentary and harmonising hues, the geometrical arrangement of the forms and distribution of tints is such as to produce a most agreeable appearance, and this without any crudity. Here we have colours blending into each other; there tints, that like streamlets, seem to have lost their way, conventionalised flowers free from the shadings and imitations which impart a vulgarised form to essentially rich materials, geometrical groupings with tints broken up and graduated, with a true balance of parts made still more admirable by the juxtaposition of complimentary and harmonising shade. With all this, there is neither heaviness nor monotonousness. The borders constitute a special charm with their contrast of bright hues on filmy ground. We understand that no less than 5,000 weavers are available for this elaborate manufacture. The public may be congratulated on the opportunity at last afforded of the fair and full introduction of the attractive carpets of Kashmeer into this country.—Draper, July 7.

Miscellaneous.

THE LAHOR JEWELS.—His Highness the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh is disposing of that portion of his collection of jewellery which was formed at the Court of Lahor by his father, Runjeet Sing, the late possessor of the celebrated Koh-i Noor diamond.

MILITARY.—The colonelcy of the 38th Foot, vacant by the death of Lord Sandhurst, has been filled up by the transfer of Lieut.-General J. P. Sparks, c.B., from the 95th Foot; and the colonelcy of the 95th Foot has been given to Lieut.-General J. S. Brownrigg, c.B.

WILL OF THE LATE BISHOP OF CALCUTTA.—The will, dated March 8, 1876, of the Right Rev. Robert Milman, D.D., Bishop of Calcutta, who died, on March 15 last, at Rawul Pindi, in the East Indies, was proved on the 21st ult. by Miss Frances Maria Milman, the sister of the deceased, sole executrix, the personal estate being sworn under £3,000.

DEATH OF GENERAL WALFOLE.—The colonelcy of the 65th Regiment has become vacant by the death of Lieutenant-General Sir Robert Walpole, K.C.B., at his residence, West Molesey, on Wednesday last. The late general entered the army in May, 1825. At the outbreak of the Indian Mutiny he proceeded to India, and held important commands in the battles of Cawnpore, Allygunge, and Bareilly. He received the thanks of Parliament for his services.

Export of Bullion.—The following were the exports of Specie to the East by steamers of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company on the dates given:—From Southampton, per Cathay, June 29—Gold, to Ceylon, £310; Silver, to Alexandria, £460; to Bombay, £4,975; to Penang, £41,850. Per Surat, July 6—Silver, to Alexandria, £900; to Bombay, £40,000. By steamers of the Messageries Imperiales:—From Marseilles, per Peluse and Erymanthe, June 8 and 15—Gold, to Alexandria, £972. Per Iraouaddy, June 18—Gold, to Pondicherry, £842; Silver, to Port Said, £658. Per Said, June 22—Gold, to Alexandria, £600. Per Tage, June 29—Gold, to Alexandria, £190.

Indian Competitive Examinations.—Lord Stanley of Alderley will ask the Secretary of State for India on July 17 if he will move the Civil Service Commissioners to redistribute the marks given at the examination for Indian appointments so as to notify that Sanshrit, Arabic, or Persian are more important than German and Italian for Indian civil servants; and will ask him to take into consideration the expediency of making one of those three Eastern classical languages obligatory on probationers before proceeding to India. He will also call the attention of the House to Colonel Yule's recommendation that a small defined number of men who have taken honours at the Universities should be nominated to the Indian Civil Service without competition.

The Report of the Select Committee of the Postal System was presented to the House of Commons on Thursday night. No recommendation is made to alter the existing telegraph rates, so as to increase their cost, but some suggestions are offered by which important economies, it is hoped, might be effected. The whole tenor of the report indeed indicates that the Committee look upon the telegraph service chiefly as a public utility and convenience, and hold that in its administration the strict limits of a profit and loss account should not be a lhered to. The suggestion of a sixpenny rate for short messages the Committee regard as well worth consideration. No absolute increase in the rate of Press messages is recommended, but a slight alteration is proposed in the mode of reckoning. The Committee were not satisfied that it was established that any large loss arose from the Press messages, and express the opinion that if it were found necessary to add to the revenue from this source an increase in the copy rate, and not upon the initial charges for a message, should be adopted. The Committee offer a variety of suggestions as to greater economy in the working expenses; and the latter portion of the report is devoted to a discussion upon the training of military telegraphists.

The Hyderabad Diamond.—A correspondent writes to a contemporary as follows:—The way in which the Hyderabad Diamond, mentioned in your paper last week, fell into the Nizam's possession was related to me by the late Major Raynesford, an old officer of the Nizam's Contingent, and in military command of the station of Muetal, where the diamond was found. He was waited upon one morning by a Koombee, or cultivator, of the village, for advice under the following circumstances:—Some time previously he had accidentally discovered, embedded in the walls of his mud hut, a pebble the size of a pullet's egg, which, deeming valueless, he had made over to his children as a plaything. In this transitional period of the jewel's history it chanced to attract the notice of a travelling pedlar passing through the village, who, with a view to ascertain its value, of which he had a shrewd suspicion, chipped off a fragment of the stone, and departed. By-and-by he returned, having in the interim had his suspicions confirmed as to the value of the stone, and, most incautiously for his purpose, offered the Koombee some ten rupees for his children's plaything. Crafty as the pedlar flattered himself to be, he found the Koombee equally cunning, for he was informed by the latter that if the stone were worth ten rupees to him it was equally valuable to himself, and referred the valuation of the stone to the Commandant of the Station, Major Raynesford. This officer, however, was unable to pronounce any opinion, either as to its character or value, and recommended consulting the jewellers in Hyderabad. They instantly recognised its nature, and rapidly the news spread from the Bazaar to the Palace, that an immense diamond had been found. The Nizam's Minister, Chandoo Lal, lost no time in putting in his master's claim to the treasure-trove, and rewarded the humble Koombee with a pair of shawls and a modest pension for life. Where it came from, or by whom secreted, was never known, but it evidently was a buried hoard of one of those plundering fr lances that swelled the armies of Hyder Ali and his son Tippoo, who devastated Southern India, looting temples and palaces alike. The famous Pitt Diamond was the spoil of war to an English soldier of those times, who dug it with his bayonet out of an idol's face, where it was made to represent its eye.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, July 11.—ROMAN CATHOLIC CHAPLAINS.—Mr. WHALLEY asked the Under Secretary of State for India, with reference to the recent increase of £8,570 a year to Roman Catholic chaplains for the Indian army against the protest of members of the Council, whether such chaplains are to be permitted without restraint to inculcate on British soldiers the doctrine of the Papal Syllabus of 1864; and whether their claim to be recognised as not being the servants of the Queen, and not to be subject to the same regulations as Presbyterian or Anglican chaplains, as was stated by the noble lord on the 11th of February last, is conceded by the Government.—Lord G. Hamilton said there were three statements in this question of the hon. member, and not one of them was correct. (A laugh.) The increase was given with the consent of all the members of Council except one. He did not state what the second part of the question represented him to have stated, but he had said that certain of those chaplains who were not on the establishment of the Government of India were not subject to the same regulations, and did not receive the same pension, salary, or allowances as chaplains who were on that establishment. As to the doctrine which might be preached by these gentlemen, he saw no reason why the Government should impose on them in India restraints which it was not deemed necessary to impose on chap-lains at home.—Mr. WHALLEY proceeded to question the noble lord further on the same subject, but was declared out of order by the Speaker.

THE CASE OF CAPTAIN SULIVAN, R.N.—The case of Captain Sulivan, who had been removed by the Admiralty from the command van, who had been removed by the Admiratty from the command of the London (late East India station), was brought before the House by Mr. E. Ashley. From the papers laid before Parliament Mr. Ashley read a narrative of the squabble, which related chiefly to the mode of performing Divine service, the Chaplain being High Church and Captain Sulivan a Nonconformist. The Chaplain, Mr. Ashley contended, had displayed great insubordination, and though the result of a Court of Inquiry had been a sentence of the property of the Chaplain of the Court of Inquiry had been a sentence of the property of the Chaplain of the Court of Inquiry had been a sentence of the property of the Chaplain of the Court of Inquiry had been a sentence of the court of the Chaplain of the C tence of removal against both, the Captain only had been removed. In conclusion, he moved a resolution expressing the opinion of the In conclusion, he moved a resolution expressing the opinion of the House that Captain Sulivan should not have been dismissed without an opportunity of defending himself before a court-martial.—Sir A. Gordon, in seconding the motion, contended that the Admiralty had not treated the Captain in accordance with the Naval Discipline Act, and though he admitted the right of the Queen to dismiss any officer without reason, he denied that even the Prerogative could condemn a man without hearing, in order to dismiss him.—Mr. Hunt contended that what had been done was entirely outside the Naval Discipline Act. The Admiralty had exercised the supreme authority of the Crown delegated to it or remove Captain Sulivan from his ship which was a very different thing Captain Sulivan from his ship, which was a very different thing from dismissing him under the Naval Discipline Act. There was no punishment accorded against him at the Admiralty, and he had offered to give him employment again. Mr. Hunt, in his turn, went through the papers, contending that, at the beginning of the disputes, the captain had been to blame, and that the chaplain had been respectful and subordinate. This he showed was the opinion of the Commodore at the Cape and of two successive Admirals of the Iudia station. Ultimately the chaplain did misconduct himself, and behaved insubordinately to his superior officer. The Admiralty having been appealed to, a Court of Inquiry was held, upon reading the report of which the Admiralty came to the conclusion that discipline required the removal of both Captain and Chaplain. The intelligence was sent out to both by the same mail, and communicated to both at the same time; but by an accident no orders were sent out for the chaplain to come home immediately. As to a court-martial, no charge could be framed worthy of such a tribunal, and what Captain Sulivan had asked for was that a ship should be sent out specially with officers to form a court-martial.— Mr. Goschen contended that the dismissal of the Chaplain and a reprimand to the Captain would have satisfied the justice of the case; while Sir J. Hay insisted that the Captain should have a courtmartial.—Mr. Anderson made some remarks, and on a division the motion was rejected by 102 to 91.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, July 13.—ROMAN CATHOLIC CHAPLAINS IN THE INDIAN ARMY.—Mr. WHALLEY asked the Under-Secretary of State for India, with reference to increased pay to Roman Catholic chaplains in the Indian Army, whether it was not the fact that many of them were not English, and could not even speak English. Whether the Duke of Argyll had pointed out the broad distinction between the position of the clergy of the Churches of England and Scotland and that of the priests of the Church of Rome in India the former Kaipe hound to show the orders of the Rome in India, the former being bound to obey the orders of the Government, and the latter only the orders of their spiritual su-Government, and the latter only the orders of their spiritual superiors. And, whether any provision had been made in conceding an increase in pay of £8,570 a year for insuring discipline and loyalty on the part of Roman Catholic chaplains.—Lord George Hamilton: I believe some of the Roman Catholic chaplains are not English by birth, and some few speak English badly, if at all. (A laugh.) The passage from the Duke of Argyll's letter is correctly quoted. The increase to these chaplains pay was made in consequence of their satisfactory conduct in the past and the Inconsequence of their satisfactory conduct in the past, and the Indian Government have no reason for believing that they will behave differently in the future.

THE KIRWEE BOOTY.-The LORD MAYOR asked why the return of property owned by the ex-chiefs of Kirwee did not contain the proceeds of all their movable property acquired by the local Government.—Lord G. Hamilton: The return alluded to gives all the information required by the order of the House of June 24, 1871, and if my right hon, friend will read from pages forty-eight to fifty-two of the return (No. 298 of 1869) he will there find reasons stated why the items enumerated by him are not comprised by the terms of the present return. I never stated this return to be incomplete. In March, 1875, in reply to a question, I said we had not then received information necessary to fulfil the orders of this return. In May, 1876, the return was laid upon the table of the House, and, taken with other previous returns, it gives the fullest and most complete information concerning the whole of the property owned by the ex-Chiefs of Kirwee. I have no objection to give any correspondence not published between the Secretary of State and the prize agents.

DEPRECIATION OF SILVER AND THE INDIAN REVENUE.

The Times maintains that the single use of the investigation into the causes of the depreciation of silver is to ascertain whether the depreciation is likely to continue, and on this point the evidence ap.

Digitized by GOGIC

pears to be conclusive that, while it may be aggravated, it will not be mitigated. This is the only safe basis from which the practical politician can start, and the question which must engage his attention is what he should do with this prospect before him. We in England can be calm about this depreciation of silver, but those who are responsible for the government of India cannot. They are already hard pressed by the cheapening of the metal. The Indian Government is embarrassed because its land revenue is received in silver, and the value of this metal is undergoing a great, and threatens to undergo a greater depreciation. In view of this difficulty the Times proposes that these silver rents should be at once converted into gold rent-charges according to the rate of exchange of ten rupees for the sovereign, which practically prevailed when the whole of them were assessed. Thus, if a ryot had been assessed to pay fifty rupees, he should be required to pay instead five sovereigns, or as many rupees as may become the equivalent of five sovereigns. It is said that this would augment the depreciation of silver, since it would exclude silver from being the medium of payment of the land revenue; but this is plainly an error, for silver would still be admitted in payment, though at a variable rate of exchange, and silver would be no more depreciated by the enactment than gold is depreciated here because we make the amount of gold necessary to discharge a tithe-rent charge dependent on the prices of corn. Then it is said that the ryot would complain, and justly, of breach of contract. It is true that there would be a variation in what may be called a contract, but its terms would be varied in order that its substance might be preserved unaltered. Justice would be maintained intact and sacred by what hasty observers might think to be an infraction of it.

THE CROPS.—The following are the general remarks of the Agricultural Department on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ended the 1st of June :- "In Madras rain has fallen throughout the province, but, except in the Kistna District, it has been light; prospects are satisfactory. No rain is reported from Bombay except in the Kanara District; its want is becoming felt. Light showers have fallen in most districts of the Central Provinces, where preparations for the kharif continue. No rain has fallen in Berar or Central India. In Rajpootana showers are reported only from Tonk, Kota, and Jeypor, In Bengal copious rain has fallen in the Eastern and Central Districts. West of the Hooghly and in Chota Nagpore it has been scanty, and in Behar little has fallen; in Orissa no rain is reported from Pooree; the other districts have had a good fall. Agricultural operations are vigorously progressing. In Assam the rain continues, and prospects are favourable. In the North-Western Provinces showers are reported only from Bareilly and Almora, and in Oudh from Fyzabad; but there are said to be signs of the setting-in of the monsoon in the Eastern districts. In the Punjab no rain has fallen except at Rawalpindi; prospects are good. Rain has fallen generally in Mysor."

DURTNALL, of the High Court of Chancery. ARTHUR ALLEN

Price, fully Tinted, mounted on Roller, or in Case, 20s. Size, about 40 in. by 50 in.

Showing, at one view, all the principal nations, governments, and empires which have existed in that country from the earliest times to the suppression of the Great Mutiny, a.D. 1853; with the date of each historical event according to the various eras used in India. By this Chart, any person, however ignorant of the subject, may, by an hour's attention, obtain a clear view of the broad lines of Indian History, and of the evolutions which have resulted in the dominion of her Majesty as EMPRESS OF INDIA. It will be found invaluable for EDUCATIONAL PURPOSES, especially in Colleges and Schools, where an Indian career is in contemplation. It will also be found of permanent utility in all Libraries and Offices as a work of ready reference for the connection of events and dates. Besides the History of India, it includes the contemporaneous histories of Afghanistan, Central Aria, and Europe. Europe.

RELIEVO INDIA. MAP $\mathbf{OF}_{t}$

BRION. HENRY Вт

In Frame, 21s.

"A map of this kind brings before us such a picture of the surface of a given country as no ordinary map could ever do. To the mind's eye of the average Englishman, India consists of 'the plains' and 'the hills,' chiefly of the former, the hills being limited to the Himalayas and the Nilgiris. The new map will at least enable him to correct his notions of hidle geography. It combines the usual features of a good plain map of the country on a scale of 150 miles to the inch, Indian geography. It combines the uneven surfaces, modelled on a scale thirty-two times the horizontal one; thus with a faithful representation of all the uneven surfaces, modelled on a scale thirty-two times the horizontal one; thus bringing out into clear relief the comparative heights and outlines of all the hill-ranges, and showing broad tracts of uneven ground, of intermingled hill and valley, which a common map of the same size would hardly indicate, except to a uneven ground, of intermingled hill and valley, which a common map of the same size would hardly indicate, except to a uneven ground, of intermingled hill and valley, which a common map of the same size would hardly indicate, except to a uneven ground, is the plains of Upper India are reduced to their true proportions; the Central Provinces, Malwa, and very practised eye. #### DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoes, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Loncet, lat Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Tisses, 18th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 13d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimeny accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Rebielv.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, June 30; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, June 28; Calcutta, June 27.

THE meetings of the Viceroy's Council were resumed at Simla on the 29th ult. The Report of the Select Committee on the Merchant Shipping Bill was taken into consideration and passed, after a short discussion raised by Sir Andrew Clarke on the third section. The Indian Registration Bill was introduced by the Hon. Mr. Hobhouse, who explained the more important sections.

It has already been stated that nothing can be officially known as to the results of Mr. Grosvenor's Mission until that gentleman shall have reported to his immediate superior, Sir Thomas Wade, for the information of the Foreign-office. But the Bombay Times now says it believes that the Mission was singularly devoid of practical effect, and that Mr. Grosvenor was not long in coming to the conclusion that he was taking part in a solemn farce. "There appears to be very good grounds for imputing the chief share in the plot to murder Mr. Margary to an official named Tsén, the Governor of the Province of Yunnan, who was himself a member of the commission of inquiry. He was, in fact, appointed one of the judges of anybody he chose to accuse as a murderer with a view to screening himself."

THE Times of India hears from a good source "that officers on furlough are to be once more allowed to draw their furlough allowance at the rate of two shillings to the rupee."

On the 16th ultimo no less than fourteen cases of sunstroke were reported as having occurred in the 33rd (Duke of Wellington's) Regiment at Kamptee: four of the cases terminated fatally.

GENERAL BIDDULPH has successfully opened the Hill Home at Mussoorie, with forty-six soldiers' children, and has obtained a volunteer lady superintendent.

It is asserted that the unusual sickness and mortality amongst the 1-25th (King's Own Borderers) at Fyzbad, is largely attributable to the numbers in the ranks of immature years.

THE Rajah of Nabha had arrived at Simla. The Rajah of Jhind was expected. Difficulty was felt in the immediate settlement of the Puttiala administration, owing to the hostility between these Rajahs and others to Kalifa. A strong feeling exists among the Sikhs and Mussulmans on this question, which will probably restrain the Punjab Government from issuing final decision for some time.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Times of India writes that a shock of earthquake was felt at Simla on the 17th ult.

It was reported in Calcutta just before the mail left that the Positive Life Assurance Company had stopped the payment of dividends, a measure which had been proposed at a meeting held of this Company.

THE death of Captain J. C. M. Russell, of the 16th N.I., is announced from Jubbulpore.

A SERIOUS fire is reported as having broken out in a train on the Northern State Railway, crossing the Chenab Bridge. Much damage was the consequence. Three carriages laden with tea and cloth were burnt.

UNDER the sanction of the Government of Madras, a prospectus, announcing the establishment of a School of Agriculture at the Sydapet Farm, is being widely circulated in that Presidency.

It is stated in the Bangalor paper that the Surgeon-General, Indian Medical Department, has recommended to Government that the retired Deputy-Inspector-General Jackson may be granted the next higher rank of Inspector-General, with the relative rank of Major-General, and Inspector-General Mackenzie the relative rank of Lieutenant-General.

THE new schedule of Post-office charges was published in the Bombay papers. The Anglo-Indian Press does not appear to be very grateful to the Post-office authorities, for the newspapers sent from India to England have to pay just as much as ever. The almost prohibitory rate of three pence a copy is still charged, though the postage on letters and parcels has been considerably reduced, and even that on newspapers addressed to France, Belgium, and America has also been cut down. A newspaper may be sent to France for one anna and to America for two. Why, then, should two annas be charged for a newspaper to be delivered in the United Kingdom? Our Bombay contemporary, the Times of India, says:—A concession might have been very properly made to the press and the public in this matter. Those who have a desire to send papers to friends in London ought at least to be placed on as good a footing as the smaller number of people who may desire to pay a similar compliment to friends in Brussels or Berlin.

THE Medical and Sanitary Report on the Native Army of Bengal for 1874 discusses, among other things, the effects of heavy rainfall and bad drainage on the health of the troops. The remarks on the sanitary state of Meerut seem to bear out the general belief that saturation of the soil, although it may cool the atmosphere, has a baneful effect on the health of the men, and gives rise to malarious diseases. "There can hardly be a doubt that a water logged soil, and generally defective drainage, have been the chief factors in the generation of the prevalent malarious sickness of the last few years. The regiment was tolerably healthy during the dry months of the year, but with the rainfall of July came a rate of admission for fever, which increased up to the 18th of September, until it reached 18 per cent. of the strength of the regiment." Again, speaking of Dehra Ismail Khan, the Surgeon of the 6th Panjab Infantry says :- "There has been a steady increase in the rainfall of the Derajat since we took the Punjab, due, I should say, to the greater cultivation and irrigation which came in with our With regard to Meerut, we are told that "the distance of the level of the subsoil water, on the 30th November, 1869, was 12 feet 2.21 inches; on the 30th November, 1873, it was 10 feet 5.29 inches; and on the 30th November, 1874, 7 feet 7.79 inches only." If, during those five years, there has been this rise of the subsoil water, what are we to expect in 1881? The Report finds just fault with the accommodation for native troops, "consisting, as it does, mostly of rude huts, whose floors are on a level with the ground, and built with little regard to sanitary principles." To rebuild the Sepoy Lines throughout the country on improved principles would cost a good deal of money; but if the Native Army is worth its keep, it certainly deserves to be better housed than it now is. In the matter of shoes also the Sepoy might be better furnished. At present he has to pay for such things himself, and as the whole of his monthly pay is barely enough to meet his regular wants, it may be imagined how little he has to spare for the protection of his feet. It appears from the Report, at any rate, that, during the five years under notice, there were 9,801 cases of blistered and ulcerated feet, owing to bad boots and shoes. In 1873 also there were 2,194 cases. A sore footed soldier is an evil which the Government would do well to lessen by supplying its Sepoys with good boots and shoes at its own cost.

A Times telegram of July 23 from Calcutta gives the following items of latest news from the Indian frontiers:—The Khan of Kelat and all the Chiefs are now with Colonel Sandeman at Mastang, and negotiations are proceeding favourably. After the disputes are settled, Colonel Sandeman will return to India. The Kohat Pass is quiet. No further Afridi raids are reported, but the tribe is still in arms. The Amir of Kashgar is sending a mission to India, whose object is unknown. The Envoy is Yakub Khan, nephew of the Amir; the same who went on a mission to the Viceroy in 1872, and proceeded to Constantinople with letters to the Sultan.

FROM the same source we learn that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce lately met to consider the currency question, and the following resolutions were passed:—

First, that the continued depreciation in the value of silver is a question most seriously affecting the political and financial interests of the country, and that, in view of its very great importance, the Committee be requested to address the Government in order to obtain such information as they may be able to give with regard to the policy which they propose to pursue under the circumstances; secondly, that it is expedient for the Government to suspend Clause 19 of Act 23 of 1870, which makes it obligatory on the Indian Mint to receive all silver tendered for coinage, as also Section 1 of Clause 11 of Act 3 of 1871, which makes it obligatory on the Currency Department to issue notes against silver bullion sent in, and that during such suspension it be unlawful to import coined rupees.

The second resolution met with some opposition, being described as an attempt to give the rupee a fictitious value. A further resolution advising the adoption of a gold standard was proposed, but withdrawn for the present.

A TELEGRAM dated Penang July 15, reports the arrival of the Maharajah of Johore's gunboat Pantie there, bringing Maharajah Lelah and Pandut Indut, in charge of Secretary Or Hole (?) and Abdul Majad, officers of the Maharajah of Johore. The Pantie was to proceed direct for Johore.

WE are glad to hear that there was a slight improvement in the exchange last week in Calcutta, and that prospects in the silver market now look somewhat better.

A RECENT Viceregal minute appears, from the Times correspondent, to have caused some sensation in Anglo-Indian circles. A gentleman residing at Agra slapped and pulled the hair of a native servant, who fell and died soon afterwards. The cause of death was rupture of the spleen, which was found so diseased that slight violence was enough to cause death. The Joint Magistrate tried the case summarily, and inflicted a fine of thirty rupees. The Allahabad High Court said the sentence was, perhaps, too light, but was not especially open to objection. The Viceroy has since censured the magistrate for not committing the accused for trial, the High Court for the opinion it expressed, and the Local Government for not instituting an inquiry. We hope that Lord Lytton's boldness in this matter has been well-advised. A very little violence may sometimes bring on the death of a native from ruptured spleen; but it does not therefore follow that the person causing the death deserved a heavier punishment than the fine inflicted in this case.

SIR J. STRACHEY makes over the Lieutenant-Governorship of the North-West Provinces to Sir G. Couper at Lucknow tomorrow, July 26. Sir G. Couper proceeds at once to Allahabad to assume charge of his new post.

In proposing the other day to make Sanskrit and other Eastern classics enter into the first or test examination of candidates for the Indian Civil Service, Lord Stanley of Alderley seemed to ignore the main purpose for which that examination is designed. As Lord Salisbury pointed out in his reply, the object of that examination is "not to select those who are ready at once to enter the Indian Civil Service, but to select the raw material out of which Indian civil servants may be manufactured." We want, in fact, to pick out the best men among the competitors, according to the standard of education accepted in these days; not the young men who have made a special study of subjects taught at none of our leading schools. Until some radical change is generally demanded in the present mode of educating our English youths, most people will be satisfied with the kind of tests by which Indian candidates are now selected. A few enthusiasts, more zealous than discreet, may continue to urge the claims of Sanskrit in preference to Greek as the right mental training for English schoolboys. But "the common sense of most" will agree with Lord Salisbury in turning a deaf ear to demands so preposterous. A due knowledge of Sanskrit and Persian may be useful enough at a later period in the training of the Indian candidate, and in this direction the Secretary for India seems ready to go quite as far as Lord Stanley himself. During the two years of his probation the selected candidate will no doubt be expected to learn something of those classical languages which furnish a key to the modern Indian vernaculars, and equip the student in many obvious ways for his future career. Neither does Lord Salisbury appear altogether to scout the proposal borrowed by Lord Stanley from Colonel Yule, that a few "honour men" from our Universities should be allowed from time to time to enter the Indian Civil Service without competition. He admits indeed that this proposal "will not meet the difficulty of the case;" and it certainly might be held to clash with the scheme already approved by Lord Salisbury, which includes the lowering of the outside age for competitors, with the express object of opening the Universities to candidates who have already passed their first examination. only way of reconciling such a scheme with the principle of Lord Stanley's demand would be by allowing a few "class men" from Oxford or Cambridge to pass at once without further probation into the Indian Civil Service, provided their "honours' included a mastery of Sanskrit and other studies indispensable for an Indian career. In view of the movement now making, with every chance of success, for the admission of certain Indian studies into the University course, such a condition would not be unfair to any one concerned.

Among lately published Parliamentary papers is a Copy of the Minutes of the Members of Lord Salisbury's Council on the subject of "the Draft of a Despatch to India, replying to a letter from the Government of India, No. 3 of 1876, in the Financial Department, on the subject of the Indian Tariff Act of 1875," which was read at a meeting of the Council of India, held May 23, and, after discussion, was approved by ten votes to three. At the same meeting was read and approved the draft of another despatch to India in reply to a subsequent letter of 1876 from the Viceroy, touching the relations of the Indian to the Home Government. On this question Sir Henry Maine's Minute contains the following sound remarks:—

There is one sense of the words employed, in which I do not altogether agree with the position, that the initiative in Indian legislation should be left to the Government of India. I think that the best arrangement is that which Parliament in its wisdom devised, which it has not yet seen fit to repeal, and which was carried into practice till the other day. Under this arrangement, the more permanent and important Indian laws were prepared by a Law Commission (16 and 17 Vict., c. 95, s. 28, following 3 and 4 Will. IV., c. 85, s. 53), and its only defect was that the limits of the authority of the Commissioners and of the authority of the Indian Legislative Council were not distinctly defined. But, as against the Secretary of State for India in Council, I quite concur with some who dissent from the present despatch in holding that the general initiative in legislation should be left to the Indian Governments, merely adding an expression of my wonder that anything which has proceeded from the India Office should have been thought likely to take it away. The initiative in fiscal matters seems to me even less threatened than in any others. The despatch before us to me even less threatened than in any others. The despatch before us is wholly concerned with legislation, and asks that information of the fact is wholly concerned with legislation, and asks that information of the fact that a law is about to be passed, as was the Tariff Act at Simla, should be communicated by telegraph. But during the tenure of his office by the late Governor-General, three budgets out of four required no legislation whatever. It is only when the financial provision for the year involves a distinct fiscal innovation, and therefore requires legislation, that the Secretary of State is to be informed of it, so far as regards the present degratch despatch.

In case of a dispute between the Viceroy and the Indian Office, the worst that ever happens to the former is, as Sir Henry truly remarks, the receipt of a scolding from this office, which is usually taken with the greatest equanimity. Lord Laurence, it may be remembered, spoke some months ago to the same purport. With regard to the question of responsibility, Sir H. Maine argues that if there be one branch of Government more than another for which the Secretary of State cannot throw the responsibility on the local Indian authorities, it is legislation. Parliament has not left to the Indian Legislature a pretence of claiming the immunities enjoyed by the Colonies having representative institutions. In emphatic and even solemn language which still makes part of the law, it has declared (3 and 4 Will. IV., c. 85, s. 51) that it reserves to itself a "full, complete, and constantly existing power" to "control, supersede, and prevent all proceedings and acts whatsoever af the Governor-General in Council, and to repeal and alter at any time any law or regulation" made by him. The clause ends with a direction to lay copies of all Indian laws and regulations before Parliament. The instruction has not been followed since 1857, doubtless because in 1858 a Minister responsible to Parliament was created. But I cannot understand how Parliament can "prevent" or "control" Indian legislation unless the responsible Minister is informed concerning it at all its stages.

Another Parliamentary paper just issued contains the Furlough and Retiring Rules of 1796, the Furlough Rules of 1868 as published in G.G.O. No. 1064 of 1868, and the same as republished in G.G.O. No. 171 of 1874. Colonel Jervis, the mover for these papers, also called for the correspondence between the India-office and the Government of India regarding the difference in the wording of certain clauses as they stand in the above-mentioned orders, but the official reply was simply that there is no such correspondence. We are glad to see that, owing to Colonel Boisragon's memorial, those officers who elected the Furlough Rules of 1868 before July 1, 1871, are to be allowed the benefit of the two-shilling rate of exchange, with effect from April 5, 1876. The date was originally fixed from June 1, but as the subject was first considered by the Council on April 5, accounts are to be adjusted from the latter date. It appears that the Council have called for a return showing the probable cost of the concession, and we hope that the result will encourage them to take yet one more step backwards, even to the repayment of all arrears on this score. The very concession now made involves a moral obligation to go yet further in the same direction.

At the presentation of prizes to the successful students of Cooper's Hill on Friday last, Lord Salisbury made an excellent speech on the advantages of practical knowledge for young engineers, on the supreme necessity of economy in the Public Works Department, and on the duty of Englishmen in India to cultivate a friendly intercourse with the natives, so far as lies in their power. With regard to the last point his lordship remarked that the "very distinguished body of travellers" who lately visited India found a greater degree of coldness between the two races than "anything they had learned at home had led them to imagine." It is to be hoped that the travellers in question jumped at their conclusions as travellers are wont to do, on scanty or mistaken grounds. But there is, we fear, some truth in the complaint so often raised of late years, that the gulf between rulers and ruled in India has visibly widened since the Mutiny. If this be so however, it would be unfair to ascribe the whole blame of it to our own countrymen, who are generally inclined to treat the natives kindly and with due courtesy, and who never invented those caste rules and religious ordinances which tend to keep the two races socially apart. At the same time young men on first going out to India are a little too prone to despise what they do not understand, and to resent by hard words or blows some act or saying, which a longer acquaintance with native ways and languages would find harmless enough. Such warnings therefore as those uttered by Lord Salisbury, and repeated in effect with kindly earnestness by that brave old engineer Lord Napier, never come unseasonably on such occasions.

OUR readers will, we are sure, learn with sincere regret that it is our painful duty to record the death of Sir John Wm. Kaye, late Political Secretary at the India-office, in the sixty-third year of his age, which event took place at his residence, Rose-hill, Forest-hill, on Monday evening, July 24. Sir John entered the Bengal Artillery in 1832, which service he resigned in 1841 for the purpose of carrying on his more congenial literary pursuits. In 1855 he obtained his appointment in the Political Department at the East India House, which he continued to hold until compelled by failing health to retire in 1874. He was created a K.C.S.I. in 1871. A more detailed account of his Life and Writings will be given in our next issue.

THE death is announced of Licutenant-Colonel W. Tudor Boddam, late of the Madras Cavalry, at 12, Arundel-gardens, at the age of seventy-two. "Hart's Army List" records this officer's commissions as Ensign on December 11, 1841; Lieutenant, January 24, 1845; Brevet Captain, December 11, 1856; Captain, October, 1857; Major, December 11, 1861; Lieutenant-Colonel (Madras Staff Corps), December 11, 1867; and Brevet Colonel, December 11, 1872. Colonel Boddam was Assistant Adjutant General of the Nagpore Field Force during the insurrection and Mutiny of 1857.

THE Army and Navy Gazette contains the following:—It is proposed considerably to shorten the term of service which Line regiments are now called upon to spend in India, and it was to this decision that Mr. Hardy lately referred in the House of Commons when he stated that next Session it was his intention to introduce a measure which would have the effect of removing the difficulties standing at present in the way of the War office in its attempt to make the requirements of our Indian possessions dovetail in with the changes that short service in the army has brought about. The idea is that each regiment should be absent from home about five, or at the outside six years, instead of twelve, as is now the case. The proposal to localise the European troops in India has, we are pleased to hear, been strongly condemned.

INDIAN SURVEYS.

In his abstract of Indian Survey Reports for 1873-74 Mr. Clements Markham continues the work which he has for some years past so ably discharged. He begins with a brief account of the new marine surveys started under the direction of Captain A. D. Taylor, one of those officers who earned his scientific laurels in the days of the old Indian Navy. Little of course had been done by the new department in the year under review, beyond the collection of charts and the drawing up of survey programmes. But Mr. Chapman in the Constance made a survey of Kolachel port in Travancore, besides taking fresh soundings in Palk Bay and the Pamban Channel, examining the neighbourhood of Coconada, and extending his researches about Bahrein in the Persian Gulf. Lieutenant Coghlan, R.N., in the Guide, found time to survey the Hughli Reach, near Diamond Harbour, as well as the famous James and Mary Shoals, and a part of the Rupnarain river. Mr. Carrington compiled from previous surveys a chart of the west coast of India, from Sumniyani Bay, north of Karachi, to Pigeon Island in 14 degrees south latitude.

During the same year the officers of the Great Trigonometrical Survey measured 70 principal triangles, covering an area of 7,190 square miles, besides 8,862 square miles of secondary triangulation, and the fixing of a large number of peaks in the mountain ranges north of the Assam Valley.

The last remaining gap of 108 miles in the revision of the southern portion of the Great Arc was filled in by Major Branfill's party. A search made for one of Colonel Lambton's old stations in a group of red sand hills resulted in showing a movement of that group south-eastward at the rate of 17 yards per annum; all efforts to arrest this remarkable sand-wave having proved unsuccessful. Major Branfill then reconnoitred the Straits of Manaar, with a view to connect the Indian and Ceylon series. This done, he proceeded to carry his triangles eastward from the great Arc to the coast, and thence to Neduven-tivu on the Ceylon side, opposite Rámiserám.

In the Assam Valley 47 more miles were triangulated, almost up to the Sibsagar Station. Points were fixed in the Dafla and Naga Hills, and connections made with the Revenue Survey stations in the valley. A useful member of the survey party, Mr. G. A. Harris, died of fever. Captain Carter found it no easy work to complete a gap of 54 miles in the Brahmaputra series, before the jungle fires of March broke out, especially as he had to build lofty towers in default of hills. The Jodhpur series was pushed some way northwards through th sandy wastes of Márwár and Jesalmír. The Eastern Frontier Series in British Burmah, after a stoppage of four years, was resumed by Mr. Rossenrode, whose work was greatly hindered by the smoke of the jungle fires, and afterwards by the monsoon rains which flooded all the lowlands from one to four feet. Good progress was made by Lieutenant Harman in obtaining levels in the Madras Presidency, his surveys extending from Guti through Bellary to Karwar.

In Kátiawár an area of about 2,201 square miles was topographically surveyed by Lieutenant Pullan, whose party was weakened by the loss of three assistants, two from death, and one from madness. A survey of Rajkot was also made on a scale of twelve inches to the mile, and the revenue survey of Gujarat was greatly aided by the co-operation of Colonel Walker's department. Some 450 miles were triangulated, and 534 topographically surveyed by Captain Thuillier's party among the upper valleys in Kamaon and Garhwal. Some members of the same party aided Captain Bailey in surveying the Dehra Dhun.

Amidst circumstances of no small difficulty Captain Baird and Mr. Rendell pursued their tidal observations on the western coast and in the Raun of Kachh. On topographical surveys seven parties were employed, who completed 24,103 square miles of final topography, besides 19,623 square miles of triangulation in advance. In the course of their explorations in Gwalior and Central India, one of Captain Strahan's parties noted the manufacture of a strange kind of jewellery in the cities of Partabgarh and Deola. It consists of all kinds of shapes of green glass, on which grotesque figures and hunting scenes, in which the lion constantly appears, are delineated. The secret of this manufacture is so carefully kept that the men will not allow their daughters to enter the workrooms, lest after marriage they should betray what they had seen. Another party under Mr. Girdlestone measured the fall of the Narbada between Mortakka and Khéri, 73 miles apart, and visited the ruins of Mandu, in the Vindhya Hills, with its walls thirty miles round, and its vast remains of palaces, temples, tanks, and well built streets, once the glory of successive Bahmani Kings, but now inhabited only by "a few wretched Bhils."

Lieutenant Holdich's Survey Party in the Central Provinces did good work among the broken rugged hills stretching from the Eastern Ghats south-westward into the table-land of Haidarábád, an unhealthy region of dense forests haunted by tigers, and relieved by a few isolated villages of aboriginal Kóls. Colonel Depree's party also made satisfactory progress in Rewah, Mandla, Bálaghát, and Biláspúr, in spite of the ground they had to work over. The Bhopal and Malwa Survey under Captain Riddell also got through a good deal of hard work. The sixth party was employed in surveying the northeastern frontier of India and the Manipur State. At the end of the season there remained a small strip in the Nága Hills still to survey. A good deal of the country explored and mapped out was unknown except by name to the oldest and most experienced frontier officers, and the whole party suffered much from bad or scanty food, fever, and exposure at one moment to malarious heats, at another to the great cold on the snow-covered hills.

The Rájputána and Simla Survey was carried on vigorously by Captain G. Strahan's party through a region consisting mainly of plain studded with saudhills, where grass, water, and other supplies were hard to get. A curious method of telegraphy is employed, across the desert from Ajmir to Bikanír, by the opium merchants who, by means of mirror-flashes, make known the selling price of opium in Calcutta. The same party completed a large-scale plan of Simla and Jatog.

The area mapped out during the year amounted to 21,383 square miles, and progress was made with the engraving of maps of Sind and India. No fewer than 27,800 photographic copies of outline maps were printed in aid of the famine relief works, besides a vast number of lithographed maps and plans for general purposes.

HAZARISTAN.—I.

Macmillan's Magazine of November last makes the statement that "no mention of Merv in connection with Russia is to be found in any book or article published prior to the year 1874." This is an error. In 1866 the present writer, speaking of a combined Russian movement on Herat from the Caspian and Bokhara (the latter not then subdued by Russia), wrote:—"From Charjoe the eastern attack would easily cross the desert to Merv on the Moorghab by Russia's Desert route which is only 190 miles in length and on which Burnes's Desert route, which is only 120 miles in length, and on which water is everywhere obtainable within thirty feet of the surface." And again:—" Although the direct Kafila routes are useful to save time, the natural lines of departure from the basin of the Oxus, as the natural lines of approach to the same, are the valleys of the rivers that flow towards it. Thus the Russians will desire to move upon the Oxus at Charjoe by the parallel lines of Zeraffshan and Karohi rivers, and to leave it by the valley of the Moorghab-all fine open country, with communications protected by deserts on either side—instead of plunging direct into the Uzbeg Khanates by Andkhoi, and skirting the dangerous Paropamisus by Maimunna."

These articles in the Friend of India were reprinted as a pamphlet in London under the title of the Cabul Question, in 1869. In 1873 the present writer further commenced a "Note on our Policy Towards Afghanistan" (published in London in May of that year), with the following remark:—"It has been sufficiently demonstrated by competent authorities that Russia's line of advance in Central Asia points at present towards Merv, the valley of the Etrik, and generally in directions leading on and south of Herat, and that the question of the Afghan boundary on the upper course of the Oxus is not really one of primary importance as affecting that advance." Evidently, then, the importance of Merv, and the significance of a Russian move upon that place—as pointing full on the gap in our mountain barrier, in which stands Herat, and through which leads a plain, direct, and cosy route to Candahar—have not been lost sight of by those who have discussed frontier matters previous to the writer in Macmillan's Magazine.

In the preface of the pamphlet mentioned the present writer referred incidentally to a proposition which he worked out at greater length in the note written in 1873, and which is, in another shape, the subject of the present paper—this is the advisability of directing the application of the subsidies we pour into Afghanistan. For ten years the writer has been constant and instant in urging the policy of strengthening Afghanistan as an outwork against Russia. A considerable advance has no doubt now been made since 1866, when the proposal to interest ourselves in Afghanistan was considered absurd, as was the assumption upon which the writer's arguments (in the Friend of India) were based—that Russia's action was persistently aggressive, and that in a very short space of time she would subdue Khiva and Bokhara, in addition to Khokand, which she then occupied.

The support of Afghanistan is now a policy as fully accepted as the fact that Russia's military progress is to be constant, and that the Turkomans and Yarkandis will be the next nations to acknowledge her sway. It is the manner of extending such support and of checking such progress which is now the subject of the greatest diversity of opinion. Men's minds, we fear, incline to a very strong and decided policy, without sufficiently considering whether we are in such a military and financial position as to justify our attempting it.

In 1867 the writer anticipated this, and combated it in anticipa-He urged that the diplomatic measures should be adopted, which were shortly after (in 1869) adopted to a certain extent—that the ground might be cut away from under the feet of the possible advocates of such a policy. In August of that year he wrote:—"If we procrastinate and let matters stand over till we are wrote:—"If we procrastinate and let matters stand over till we are seriously threatened, and the British public, roused, demands that immediate measures be taken for the protection of our Indian Empire. . . . . We are compelled to secure our own safety by militarily occupying the important points of the country . . . . we shall have to hold those portions of the Cabul kingdom the retention of which would be requisite for the security of our dominions, with the "strong hand against the Afghan nation" (an operation the burden of which during two years only was fast ruining us when, thirty years ago, the Cabul disasters released us therefrom). "instead of hy rears ago, the Cabul disasters released us therefrom), "instead of, by timely use of diplomacy, money, and tact, being able to do so in co-operation with and by means of that warlike and turbulent people."

In the end of 1874 the writer again argued, in these columns, that neither our military nor financial resources were adequate to a "strong" policy. He suggested certain palliatives for both deficiencies—of which, indeed, the first depends entirely upon the last. Those papers were republished in pamphlet form, and the political and financial retrospect of the year which has elapsed since their appearance, only confirms the writer in the views then expressed. The political crisis draws nearer, and our resources for meeting it are yet in no way developed, nor can they be to any material extent till some means are found of considerably enhancing the revenue. Till this is done by the cancelment of the permanent settlement, and the imposi-tion of marriage and succession taxes, as proposed by the writer, or by other better means—our existing financial and military resources must be eked out to the best advantage. To enlist some fifty thousand efficient troops of the feudatory chiefs in our frontier defence, without expense to ourselves, would set free a large portion of our Digitized by army as disposable force which is now distributed in garrisons. To cheaply hold and strengthen the formidable field of operations in our front will be to increase indefinitely the strategical power of this disposable force. In this view the writer strongly advocated, in his "Note on our Policy towards Afghanistan," written in 1873, the expenditure of a portion of our cash subsidies to Cabul in the improvement of main routes and the strengthening of the strategical points of the country, under the superintendence of our own officers. He advocates this still, and he further urges, as he then urged, and has urged since 1869, that the arms supplied, and the major portion of the money given should be devoted to equipping and training a contingent of Afghan troops, under British officers, who would be capable, at a pinch, of occupying and holding those strategical points, so strengthened till support could reach them from India by those communications so improved. The exact method in which he would carry out this proposition is the subject of the present paper.

The best and cheapest method of creating such a contingent as is proposed, and, at the same time, of disposing it to advantage on the points where it is required, is to lease from the Ameer of Cabul the Hazıristan (the ancient Paroramisus) at a fair rent, such lease being the condition on which our present relations of moral support and substantial assistance shall be maintained in future. The hold of the Ameer on the Hazuristan is of the slightest; it now adds very little to the strength of his kingdom, and his revenues derived therefrom are but very slender. The Eimak and Huzareh tribes in the immediate neighbourhood of Herat, Candahar, Ghuzni and Cabul, render a sort of allegiance thereto, and pay a miserable tribute, 1 arrly in kind; but the whole return of the Hazaristan to the Ameer's Governors is under forty thousand pounds per annum, and takes at least the quarter of that sum to collect and realise. We could afford to lease it at a progressive rate, commencing with £3,000 per annum, and increasing by yearly increments of ten per cent. Administered on an inexpensive system, and developing very rapidly in population and cultivation-as under our just and moderate rule, and energetic and enlightened officials it assuredly would—the revenue derived from the country would suffice to pay for the administration and to de-fray the payments under the lease. The money we should lay out in raising and maintaining a strong Hazaristan contingent for the Ameer's service, and in constructing serviceable communications up to and through this tract, which might be made the cutwork and bulwark of Afghanistan, would represent, as the subsidies we now pay to the Ameer do represent, the cost of our insurance against the much greater military expenditure which would be entailed upon us were our frontiers conterminous with those of Russia. Such subsidies would, of course, no longer then be paid on the present scale, though presents of out of date arms and munitions of war might still be occasionally made to the Ameer. The contingent force would be, as one of the terms of the lease, at the service of the Ameer for all internal and defensive warfare; but not for external warfare save under special circumstances, to be decided on by the Government of India.

For a full understanding of all the bearings of this proposal it is evidently necessary to possess the caste du pays. In this view it is proposed to give,

The statistics of the Hazaristan.

A notice of the districts and routes east, north, and west of it. The study of any good map will afford the rest of the knowledge necessary to understand the question.

For convenience we will deal, first, with the environs of, and afterwards with the Huzaristan itself. The great range of the Hindu Kush, which shelters Afghanistan proper from Chitral to Herat, is known as the Koh Baba west of the 68th degree of east longitude, where the Hazaristan commences. A degree and a half west of that point this main range divides into three, the Tirbund of Turkestan to the north, the Sufed Koh in the centre, and the Sinh Koh in the south. East of the 68th degree the Hindu Kush stretches eastward, getting higher and higher and more and more impracticable till it joins the great table-land of the Pamir in longitude 73 degrees. West of longitude 68 degrees, i.e., in the Hazaristan, the mountains are traversible at many points, but the Hindu Kush itself can only be crossed by special passes. Between longitude 68 itself can only be crossed by special passes. Between longitude 68 and 70 degrees the country to the north of the range is partly included in the Hazaristan and partly in the district of Kunduz subject to the Government of Afghan Turkestan. South of the range there is the district of Kohistan, and the communications between the two are by three main routes, each of which have several alternative passes, by which the actual ridge of the mountain is crossed. These are, from the east, the Punjsher, Perwan and Ghorbund routes—being the valleys of the rivers of those names, which all eventually unite and fall into the Cabul river. These passes are practicable only during five months of the year to laden animals, on account of the snow. There are no particular physical difficulties during those five months on the principal passes, which are all used by horsemen and laden camels, and have been traversed by Central Asian armies with artillery. At the same time they may safely be left out of consideration among the routes available to an European Napoleon certainly crossed the Alps with a modern army, but he did so from one fertile and populous country into another, and by a good military road, and his operation was unmolested. It may safely be affirmed that no general of modern times could convey an army from Afghan Turkestan into Afghanistan (that country being in hostile occupation; by any route east of longitude 68.

East of longitude 70 deg. are two or three passes, leading from the country of the Siahposh Kafirs into Badakshan, of which nothing is known, as no traffic can pass through the savage Kafirs. East of these are the following passes between Chitral and Badakshan:—Durra, Kharteza, Nuksan, Agram, Sateshterak, Peerkhar—of which only the first and last are even practicable for horsemen and laden animals, and which are all consequently out of the question for military operations.

Evidently, then, the right flank of the Hazaristan is quite secure, and needs no attention. If in safe hands, it would also be perfectly impregnable in the centre, as will be seen from what follows. The routes leading through the Hazaristan between Afghan Turkestan and Afghanistan are as follows:-

1. The great route between Khulun and Cabul, via Bamean.

The route from Balkh to Candahar by the Balkh river.

3. The route from Maimunua to Herat.

Besides the alternative and branch routes pertaining to each of these main routes, there are also cross routes through the mountains, practicable only for horsemen, and of which no notice need here be taken. All will be referred to when the statistics of the Hazaristan are given in detail. The rentes here given are those used by traffic and by Central Asian arm es; they have all been traversed by artillery. Nevertheicss, when the best of them, that by Bamean and Khulen, was examined and reported upon by a British officer in 1839 with a special view to moving troops thereby, he pronounced even the main line impracticable without great labour on the construction of the road to render it passable by artillery, which must even then be drawn over the passas by hand, as no labour could render them practicable for horse draught. A good deal was then done to improve the portion of the route between Cabul and Bamean, but since our evacuation of Cabal the road has deteriorated into its former condition. One branch of route No. 3, crossing the western extremity of the Hezaristan, was recently traversed by Mr. Vambéry; a second, in 1845, by General Ferrier; and a third, in 1839, by Major One branch of route No. 3, crossing the western ex-Pott nger. The description of all shows that they are impracticable in their present condition for European troops, and that they would require considerable labour to render them traversable; and subsequent native accounts show this to be the case at the present day. The central route (No. 2) has not been surveyed, nor reported upon by any European officer, but native accounts describe it as inferior to the other two.

THE NAVY IN INDIA.

The Englishman, in a recent article, observes that the Pioneer has recently come out valiantly in vindication of the old Indian Navy and Marine Services, and in denunciation of the Admiralty's raid on the Indian revenues to the tune of £70,000 per annum—repairs and coals into the bargain. Although the Pioneer seems to forget for the moment that thriving young man of the sea who carries on the functions of Lord High Admiral of India on a mountain top as far from his native element as he can get, there is quite sufficient in our contemporary's retrospect of the blundering and plundering that has characterised home dealings with our marine affairs, since the abolition of the Indian Navy, to arouse righteous indignation. But we are fain to ask why so late? Perhaps it is only natural that to a remote land-locked station like that of Allahabad the sound of maritime affairs should travel slowly; but there are newspapers published in the two chief ports of India, a few copies of which daily reach that far inland city. And, if our memory serves us aright, all that our contemporary is now saying as to the stupidity of sweeping away the Indian Naval service, and the rapacity which has been displayed by the Admiralty whenever that institution has been able to touch the Indian revenues, was said years ago, both in our own columns and in one of the Bombay journals. Had the protests then raised, and fairly put, been heartily supported by the Pioneer, who can tell what good might have been done? Unfortunately, it was then the cue in official quarters to let the marine question slide, or that unwarrantable imposition of the marine question slide, or that unwarrantable imposition of  $\pounds70,000$  per annum—permitted, as we always suspected, by the culpable indifference of the Duke of Argyll, and the weakness of Lord Lawrence—might have been warded off, or largely mitigated. However, we are right glad to see light breaking at last from the North, and trust that it will, at least, spread far enough, and rapidly enough, to check the movement now stealthily but determinedly going on, to quarter as many Royal Navy stipendiaries on the Indian revenues as possible. We would fain trace, in the new light breaking on a seven-year-old question, the influence of Lord Lytton's fresh mind. fresh mind.

ment so as to strengthen Indian interests, and to enlighten the British public upon matters which they do not understand, and which are of great importance to India. Though Sir George which are of great importance to India. Though Sir George Campbell was not a "popular" man in India, it was generally admitted that he had originality of idea and force of character to make himself felt in some situations. He did so undoubtedly while he was here. But we had no hesitation in saying that his success in the House of Commons was simply impossible. the most tolerant of assemblies in the world; but it will not be The members cannot prevent each other from speaking in the ordinary sense; but they can and do refuse to listen to dull prosy speakers who persist in trying to thrust their inflictions on the House. Sir George Campbell's abilities, if they were twice as great as they are, would not compensate for the execrable style in which he endeavours to convey his ideas. But even that would be tolerated, for the House will tolerate very bad speaking when the speaker has anything to say, and will keep his inflictions within bounds. But Sir George is one of those loquacious men, of whom we have several in India, who think it is incumbent upon them to talk on every occasion and on every subject that ever comes before any assembly of which they form a part. It is this that soon gets a public man the character of a bore. Some men attain it through riding hobby-horses. Whatever the subject under discussion they will bring in their mag as certainly as Uncle Toby. These men also som become bores. Sir George Campbell is not of this order; for he has ideas on many subjects; but he forgets that other people have also ideas, and when they have expressed them, there is no need for a repetition, because he thinks the same thing. He is diligent in attendance in Parliament, but seems to have an idea that the members are so much in the dark, that if he does not enlighten them, they will go astray. This is too fatal a delusion to be commonly entertained. The House of Commons contains many hard-headed practical-minded men, who become impatient of crotchets, and have a wholesome horror of bores. By speaking so often Sir George has got the reputation of a bore; and when last month he sought to address the House on two subjects of real importance to India, the members resented his boredom by counting him out. He could talk, but they would not listen, standing just outside the door of the House until the members were counted; and he was thus bowled out. This is rather hard on a member to occur twice in a week; but it tells better than anything else could give it, the position of so "able" a man as Sir George Campbell—"the Indian nightmare." With every desire to serve India, we believe, Sir George sees his ability literally lost and sat upon, owing to his unhappy style of oratory and his propensity to talk. Nor is India often very fortunate in her advocates and representatives. With the best intentions and good speech, Mr. Fawcett lacks experience, and often his services are of questionable value. Sir George Balfour is as great a bore as Sir George Campbell; and very few of the old Indians get the ear of the House. They suffer for it, and so does India, and it is rather hard upon the latter that she should be so greatly neglected owing to the incompetence of her friends and representatives.

UNCOVENANTED SERVICE PENSIONS.

The Pioneer admits that probably the Indian pensions may not be very bad as compared - without making allowance for varying circumstances—with those given by other Governments in other countries. We are writing without having hunted up the exact terms of the Civil Pension Code in England, because no comparison between the two systems can really affect the point at issue. Even granting, though we believe the concession cannot properly be claimed, that the Indian Code is as generous as the English, there remains the overwhelming fact that service in England and service in India are two wholly different things. There is only one rational way of treating the pension problem here. What kind of pensions will be so far acceptable to men in the service of Government that they may be induced to retire at such a rate as will keep up a healthy flow of promotion through all ranks. It is manifest that, though the views of Government and of young officers may differ very widely as to what rate of promotion is healthy, a stagnation injurious to the public welfare may be conceived in the imagination. And hence it follows that Government is not only acting ungenerously but inexpediently, if it proceeds on the theory that mature servants of long experience are more likely to be useful than youngsters, and that consequently it is right to throw obstacles in the way of the retirement of such men. The object of Government should be to compromise between its dislike on the one hand of new comers and of ions, and on the other, of an inefficent service, recruited from men in despair of doing any good in better grooves of life, and discontented with things in general from the outset of their career. Now, the pensions given or offered—for scarcely any one ever takes themresent to the Uncovenanted Service have ignominiously failed to accomplish the end for which they were designed. It is therefore, we repeat, beside the question to say that they are as good or better than the pensions given under different circumstances in other countries. We have already said, indeed, that absolutely, and without referring the discussion to public interests in any way the pensions strike us as very mean. And the net-work of restric-tions under which they are bestowed are essentially mean, like stop-of a soldier's pay. The recruiting sergeant in this case ges out -" It is necessary to express the pay in a sum that may sound liberal; if the soldier's spendable surplus alone were quoted nobody would enlist," but the plea of necessity in matters of this kind only aggravates the inherent impropriety of the arrangement. However, we are not discussing the details of the Pension Code now, but the broad principles that ought to be observed in recasting the pension system. It is obvious that when men hold on to their work out here until they die, finding it impossible to live at home in decency on the pittance Government offers them, unless, perhaps, they happen to be single and free of all encumbrances at tifty years of age, the pension system prevailing must be a mere mockery. Of course, it is open to contention that the whole theory of pensions is unsound, that men ought to save from their salaries during their working lives that which will provide for their necessities in the working lives that which will provide for their necessities in the future, but that theory is generally allowed to be too finely-drawn for the present age of the world. Besides, as applied to the uncovenanted servants of India generally, it would be little better than mockery of a new kind. Out of such pay as they receive on the average, saving is certainly impossible on a large scale, unless the average. the institution of marriage be first abolished, and human nature metamorphosed into the bargain.

STATION TALK.

SRINAGAR, June 9.—The view of the Kashmir Valley from the Baramula Pass is certainly five. What was grand and beautiful in the valley of the Jhelum, in its limited extent, is here expanded into more striking dimensions-extended snow ranges, enlarged grassy slopes, wide cultivated fields, the Jhelum now quiet and smooth, as if on its good behaviour under the maternal eye of the Woolar Luke from which it has just descended. One can scarcely believe that the river so tranquil here could become co-disturbed in its rocky bed a few miles further down. This Woolar is no doubt a beautiful piece of lake scenery, all the more beautiful for its grand surroundings, but unless the sky is clear not much of it can be seen at one time. The journey by water from Barannia to Srinagar is luxurious in the extreme. I do not know of anything more calculated to soothe a crabbed old Qai hi, with a bad liver, than to put his pipe in his mouth and place him reclining on his bed on the deck of a doonglet and be towed up these waters. If, under the circumstances, he could utter a growl, I would have him sent back to the plains as unworthy of nature's delightful gifts bestowed upon him, and order that his liver might be slowly consumed. In a morning's ramble I came upon the Kashmir Mission House, or rather hospital, for the mission here, as you are aware, is medical, and although an hospital has been established the Mission House has yet to be built. The hospital is on an eminence near the foot of the Tukht-i-Suliman, and under the great zeal and excellent skill of the late Dr. Emslie and his successor, Dr. Maxwell, has attained a wide reputation, so that people come long distances from the adjacent States to seek relief at the Padré Sahib's hos-Unfortunately, there is no missionary doctor available at present, Dr. Maxwell having worked himself into a state of bad health which compelled his retirement; but under the guidance of the Rev. Mr. Wade, who himself has a considerable smattering of medicine, the native doctor, who is also an ordained clergyman of the church, performs his double function with untiring energy, and the large number, from one to two hundred, of daily attendants for medical advice and medicine shows that the medical portion of the work at least is appreciated and attended with success. But I fear the rest is up-hill work, and that more funds, to supply more missionaries and medicines, are much required. What has to be done here is more than any one man can do. I was told that a considerable number of the patients suffered from a certain kind of cancer which follows on burns received from the fire-basket. These baskets, kangris as they are called, are earthen vessels surrounded with basket work, in which in cold weather the patives carry fire under their clothes, and as most of the people have only one article of clothing it follows that the kangri is very apt to come in contact with the skin, with the frequent result of burning it, and the not unfrequent sequence of the cancer referred to. surely must be something wrong socially or politically amongst a people in a pastoral country, where woollen textures cost next to nothing, who prefer to keep up animal heat by carrying baskets of fire under their clothes to covering themselves with warmer garments, or building houses sufficiently protective from the climate. The Star of India.—We hear that rumours are abroad of the probable creation of some new star of India. The names we have heard thus far as likely to be placed in the exalted firmament are those of certain members of the Legislative Council of India. We should like to see an impartial record of the vast services quoitur ad astra.—Indian Daily News, June 24.

Arming of Native Infantry.—The Civil and Military Gazette says that Government has ordered that all regiments of Native Infantry serving in the Bengal Presidency, now equipped with muzzle-loading rifles, shall at once indent for ten Snider rifles, in view to their being able to compete on equal terms, in the several army and divisional matches, with corps armed with the Snider rifle.

divisional matches, with corps armed with the Snider rifle.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—On Thursday evening of last week as a party of officers were returning from the Lancers' theatre at Sealkote, the horse they were driving shied, and they were all thrown out. At first it was feared that one of the party, Lieutenant Lendrum, of the 72nd Highlanders, was very seriously hurt, but it was afterwards found that his injuries, though bad enough, were not of so very serious a nature. He is now rapidly recovering, we are glad to learn.—Indian Public Opinion, June 16.

The Maharajah of Jhallawar.—The widow of the late Maharajah of Jhallawar, says the Pioneer, failed to fulfil her promise of producing an heir within what is considered by Government a reasonable time after her husband's decease. Brahminical law fixes the limit, we believe, at two years; but the Foreign-office justly looks on this as going too far in the direction of hopefulness, and has declined to give the lady more than ten months. This having elapsed, the late Maharajah's adopted son, Bakht Singh, is to be placed on the gadee at once. The boy, a promising lad of twelve years, has left the Mayo College, Ajmere, where he has been a pupil for the last three months, for Jhalrapatan, to be formally installed on the throne.

JAIL EMEUTE AT LUCKNOW.—We regret to learn that there was an emeute at the Central Jail last Thursday night, at about eight o'clock, but our informant does not state whether there was any bloodshed or loss of life. Dr. McReddie, the superintendent, the jailors and warders were all speedily on the scene of action, although they had mostly retired to their several homes for the night. Mr. Horan, of the jail, is particularly named as having behaved very pluckily, rushing in among the rioters sword in hand, long before even the guard could effect an entry. The riot, or whatever it was, was finally quelled, but what gave rise to it is a matter of detail, and the particulars have not yet reached us.—Lucknow Times, June 19.

A Famine at Darjiling.—Darjiling is suffering very severely just now from famine, or, at all events, a very near approach to it. The luxuries, as well as the necessaries, of life have been becoming steadily dearer every year. The inevitable skinny Moorghie is selling at fabulous rates; exorbitant prices are being asked, and given, for eggs; sheep are worth nearly their weight in copper; potatoes are at tive annas a seer, and bad at that; while vegetables of any kind can hardly be got for money; charcoal, heavily weighted with water, is selling for fourteen annas a maund; and house rent has gone up about twenty-five per cent. within the last two years. In fact Darjiling is far becoming too expensive a place for any but those having an income of not less than four figures per mensem.— Darjiling News.

The Prince's Expenses.—A good story is in course of circulation which may serve to explain how it happens H.R.H. has not exceeded the vote of the Commons. After one of those many charming dinners given by the coming King, when moving about Upper India, sight-seeing and shooting, a great bon vivant and authority remarked, "Well, if the Prince understands nothing else, he understands how to give a dinner. Last night's entertainment, given under every possible disadvantage incidental to camp life would have soothed the soul of a French epicure." The Anglo-Indian gourmand was not aware that he had been the guest of poor Lord Northbrook, whose cook, wines, everything, were freely impounded by the Royal tourist. What those little dinners and their surroundings cost the Viceroy it would be curious and idle to inquire.

THE RAIN AT CALCUTTA.—The rainy season appears to be upon us. At noon on Saturday heavy clouds were hurried over from all directions by a stiff breeze, and the storm burst over the town with the usual amount of thunder and lightning. The rain was not heavy, and it did not seem to reach far in any direction until later, when the sky assumed that dull unbroken appearance betokening a lengthened downpour. The rain fell steadily until seven or eight in the evening. Yesterday morning looked fine though cloudy, and there was a sharp shower about mid-day. The sun set amidst banks of clouds, and at night-fall the atmosphere had a heavy and watery aspect, suggestive of a further heavy fall at any moment. We have had little to grumble at in the way of heat the last few months, interspersed as the sunshine has been with frequent showers. On the whole, the hot weather of 1876 has been unusually mild in Calcutta.—Calcutta Statesman, June 20.

The Patna Murder Case.—The excitement caused by the trial of the now celebrated Patna murder case in the city of Patna has by no means terminated with the trial, and we are informed that many of the residents are so dissatisfied with the conduct of Maulvi Amir Hossain, the Deputy Magistrate, who first investigated the murder case, and one of the principal witnesses in the case, that they are about to memorialise the Bengal Government for his removal from Patna. We also hear that Mr. Grey, the judge who tried the case, has made some strong comments on the conduct of the Deputy Magistrate. If we may judge of his conduct only from his evidence in the murder case, which is given in full in the Behar Herald, it certainly calls for some explanation, for he admits having married in nika a dancing girl, who had been under the protection of several other men, so as to prevent her appearing as a witness in Court.—Englishman, June 26.

HEAT-APOPLEXY.— During the continuance of this fearfully oppressive weather, the General Commanding has very properly, and with a right regard for the best interests of the troops, ordered that after 10 a.m. no soldiers are under any pretence to be absent from barracks. Notwithstanding this injunction, we understand that the other day a man "broke out of barracks," and having got liquor from somewhere or other was brought to his regiment (the 85th) a corpse—struck down with heat-apoplexy. The heat in well protected houses is all but unbearable, and what the risks are if people will expose themselves to the direct rays of the sun, every day casualties are sufficiently making manifest. The dhobies are falling victims to sun-stroke and heat-apoplexy, in common with many others, and only a couple of days ago two of these people were tumbled over on the river's bank while engaged in their useful avocation.—Lucknow Times.

The Monsoon.—The downpour predicted in my last began almost before the copy had gone to press, and has continued, with one or two breaks, pretty well throughout the week, greatly to the delight of Nature, barring the crows, which look draggled and altogether disconsolate, and including man, who, a few weeks hence, however, will probably be cursing the rains, as more monotonous and discomfiting than even the hottest of hot weather. Already one's boots and books and clothes are beginning to yield abundant harvests of mould, a kind of crop which would puzzle believers in the eternal fitness of things to discover any final cause for, except the punishment of human vanity. But where are our annual visitors, the adjutants? Here and there a solitary individual is to be seen; but the paucity of their numbers is striking. Has there been a plague among these wonderful freaks of Nature, or has Calcutta found a rival for their favours? Our public buildings sadly miss them.—Englishman, June 26.

The Cholera at Darjiling.—We are glad to hear that cholera in the Terai seems to be decreasing, although it is still far more prevalent than is at all desirable. On the hill gardens there is still a good deal of sickness, and cases of cholera make their appearance occasionally here and there on different gardens, though, apparently, the majority of deaths reported are probably not due to cholera. On the whole things appear to have improved steadily during the week. The heavy rain which has fallen during the past fortuight will, doubtless, tell, in a little time, on the outturn of those gardens round Darjiling which had previously suffered from want of moisture. Jungle has been growing very fast recently, and, owing to the panic caused by sickness amongst the coolies, cultivation has on many gardens been necessarily neglected. However, the coolies have not left the gardens altogether, but have simply left their lines temporarily and gone into the jungle (about the best thing they could do) until the sickness abated. They will all, or very nearly all, return to work, as soon as they think the worst is over, and as on several gardens the muster has been going up steadily every day this week, it may fairly be presumed that the worst is over. The quality of tea being manufactured appears, on the whole, to be satisfactory, and good prices continue to be realised for all that has reached Calcutta.—Darjiling News.

SIR R. TEMPLE.—A year more and Sir Richard Temple will, it is believed, resign the Indian service, and probably seek to enter Parliament. He has been irrepressible during the whole of his career, and is made of the stuff that some Ministers value in an Under Secretary. The India-office may yet hail him in a more important official capacity than a member of the Dummy Council; and then woe betide Madras, woe betide the Madras army and Madras Military Establishments, woe betide the Madras Governorship, Commandership-in-Chief and Council. Sir Richard Temple is a believer in the desirability of concentrating the military manufactories of India in Bengal (in Allahabad by choice), he advocates the reduction of the Madras Governorship to a Lieutenant-Governorship, à la Bengal, and the abolition of the minor Presidency Commanderships-in-Chief and Councils. The time has passed when the Madras Governorship would have met his views. He has become a capitalist, and a baronet; his name and that of the other recently created baronet, Sir Bartle Frere, are almost the only names of Anglo-Indians familiar to the British public; his foibles have yet to be discovered in England, and when discovered, they should not be ridiculed by a nation that tolerates a Disraeli. "He laughs who wins;" and Sir Richard Temple, Bart., K.C.S.I., will have good cause to indulge in a hearty laugh at the Stracheys; at many a senior and contemporary in the Civil Service, who sulk at the comparison of his luck with their own; and at pamphleteers, whose efforts to expose his wind-baggery have possibly, by keeping his name before the world, assisted him up the social ladder, and landed him among the hereditary aristocracy of his native land.—Madras Mail.

THE MARTINI-HENRY RIFLE.—There are now four regiments of British infantry armed with the Martini-Henry rifle in this country, viz., the 1-25th at Fyzabad, the 34th at Ferozepore, the 33rd at Nagpore and the 2-16th at Secunderabad. We understand that for some years to come there will be no general attempt made to change the arm of the infantry in this country, but that as regiments come out from home they will bring the new rifle with them. The accounts of the performances of the new rifle are still contradictory, but it seems to be agreed on all sides that the barrel, sighting, and ammunition are excellent—in fact, can hardly be improved on. The shape of the stock excited some adverse criticism at the National Rifle Association Meeting at Wimbledon in 1874, and the stocks were lengthened, with good results. The weak point of the Martini-Henry is undoubtedly in the lock and action. The principle of a coiled spring igniting the cap in the cartridge by a pushing blow, instead of the direct sharp impulse given by the old flat main-spring, is pointed to as the real cause of unpopularity among riflemen who purchase their own arms, as the competitors at Wimbledon do. Not five per cent. of the men who shoot in the "any military rifle" matches use the Martini, most of them preferring the Swinburn, the Henry, or the Farquharson, all of which depend for their action on an ordinary lock and main-spring. After the summer manœuvres an ordinary lock and main-spring. After the summer manœuvres of 1875, some of the rifles were tested in the 77th Regiment, and it was found that in some the "pull" had gone up to 15 lbs.; in others, the trigger had become practically a "hair" one. Again, in the mere opening and shutting of the breach, a difference of "pull" of several pounds can often be made merely by opening and closing the breach sharply or gently. If a rifle pulling normally 7 lbs. has the lever depressed very gently, and closed as gently after the insertion of the cartridge, it will be often found the "pull" has fallen to 5 lbs.; while, on the other hand, if the breach is closed with a sharp the trigger will weigh as much as 8 lbs. or 9 lbs.—Plancer. snap, the trigger will weigh as much as 8 lbs. or 9 lbs.—Pioncer.

The Composition of the Native Army.—The Bengal Army includes about 22,200 Hindustanis, 19,700 Trans-Jumna men, 4,700 Trans-Indus men, 9,100 Goorkhas and other Hill men. There are also 260 Christians in the Bengal Army, whose pedigree, less clearly defined than their religion, renders their classification embarrassing, but of whom many good people at home will think with innocent satisfaction as a band of apostles leaving the Heathen hordes of their too tolerant sovereign. As a matter of fact, we believe the 260 Christian soldiers, having inherited their faith from ancestors, who, in a less moral age than our own, may have loved not wisely but too well, turn their attention now to drums rather than to divinity. Leaving them to their musical duties, we may analyse the religious divisions of the main body divided above merely into nationalities. The Hindustanis consist of 6,400 Mohammedans, 8,000 Brahmins and Rajpoots, 1,900 Jats, 5,800 low-caste men. The Punjabis are divided as follows:—5,900 Mohammedans, 800 Hindus, 11,700 Sikhs, 1,200 Musbi Sikhs. The Trans-Indus men include 2,300 Afghans, 2,400 men of other border tribes. The Hill men include 5,100 Goorkhas, 3,100 Dogras, 850 men of other tribes. It is essential to a proper comprehension of the constitution of the Rogal arms to understand that some regiments are composed. the Bengal army to understand that some regiments are composed of one class of men, as the Goorkhas and the Musbi Sikhs-some are on the class company system, and some on the general mixture system. The Madras army, of which the regiments are recruited on the general mixture system, may be analysed as follows:-1,960 Christians, 11,200 Mohammedans, 1,000 Brahmins and Rajpoots, 430 Mahrattas, 10,000 Telungas and Gentus, 3,100 Tamils, 2,100 men of other creeds and races. The Bombay army, very similarly classified, yields the following results:—310 Christians, 250 Jews, 4,400 Mohammedans, 2,900 Brahmins and Rajpoots, 8,000 Mahrattas, 3,000 Perwaris, 1,787 Punjabis, 800 Trans-Indus men, and 3,000 not coming under any of these heads.—Pioneer.

MINERALS IN BURMAH.

We find it stated that though the general impression is that there is not much gold in Upper Burmah, there seems to be good grounds for believing that it exists very extensively. A Mr. Golding, of Australian experience, entered into a contract with the King to work a square mile of gold field in the Magoung district for ten years, and he pronounced the fields to be better than any in Australia. Mr. Golding fell a victim to a malarious fever, and after his death no more attempts have been made by the Burmese Government to work the mines. There is reported to be a gold field in the Shan States to the N.E. of Mandalay. At Thayelpeingua to the S.E. of Mandalay gold quartz is found in abundance. Gold also is obtained in the Yaw district, to the S.W. of Mandalay; and at Sagaing, Kannee, and Seinjo, and it is procurable not only from Kyeendeen river, but also from the sands of most streams between Mandalay and Magoung. Silver is found in many places in the

Digitized by GOOGLE

Shan States to the east of the Irawaddy river; but the most prolific mines are at Bawyine, Kyouktch, and Toung-byne, near Tleebaw to the N.E.E. of Mandalay. It is mixed with lead. A mine at Kampanee yields 40 ticuls of silver and 25 viss of lead to one basket of ore. There are other mines at Bandween, Bandweengyee, and Saigang. In many places silver is found unmixed with lead.

Copper is found in the Shan States, but it has not been utilised to any extent. The mines at Saigang were formerly worked by the Chinese. The ore on the surface is not promising. Copper the Chinese. The ore on the surface is not promising. Copper is also found at Bawyine and Kolemmy, where the malachite appears to be of a rich description. Iron is also found in the Shan States; and the district of Pagan, to the south of Mandalay, is noted for its richness in this metal. The ore in the form of a rich hematite is found in abundance to the west of Saigang for miles up the Irrawaddy river.

Tin and platinum are also to be found in the Shan States, but the mines have never been worked.

Coal is known to exist at Thingadaw, about seventy miles above Mandalay; on the western bank of the Irrawaddy; at Shunygoo below Bhamo; at Mainbaloung in the Shan States, east of Mandalay; at Yaignaw, east of Nattaki; in the Yaw district to the south-west of Mandalay. It is found at Pagan and Shimpagah, and it is probably to be found near Menhla and Yeynagyoung.

The coal-bed in the Shan States contains the true mineral coal, and has been pronounced by an experienced mining engineer to be equal to the best English coal. Sulphur is also very abundant in Upper Burmah, and is found not in mass or in its native state, but in the form of efflorescent salts. There are in all about eight places where sulphur works are carried on with an average yearly return of about 28,000 viss. It is found from twelve to twenty feet below the surface embeddied in the tertiary blue-clay, which is an alluvial deposit of the old red sandstone.

The soil of Upper Burmah, in many parts, is extensively impregnated with nitre, which presents peculiar facilities for the manufacture of saltpetre; works are carried on at twenty-three places. The average outturn is about 40,000 viss. The price of saltpetre is about

Rs. 50 per 100 viss; that of sulphur at Rs. 3 per viss.

Petroleum is very plentiful in Upper Burmah. At Yeynangyound there are at present about 150 wells being worked—the daily outturn is estimated at 15,000 viss. The total yield of these wells is 6,000,000 viss, or 9,375 tons per annum. The total quantity of earth oil yielded by the wells of Upper Burmah is 6,600,000 viss, or 10,3121 tons per annum.

As to gems-rubies, sapphires, and garnets, &c., are to be found in abundance at Mayonk, Ryatspeen to the N.E. of Mandalay—near Momeit. The ruby field extends over a large area of hill country. The gem sand is found from three to tifteen feet below the surface

A German mineralogist, who had been engaged to develop these mines, but left in consequence of some disagreement declared that with careful working rubies as large as pigeons' eggs could be extracted, and that the mines are very rich. Mines also exist at Mayoung, where very fair rubies have been found. Marble and lime-stone also abound in Upper Burnah, which, irrespective of the exuberant fertility of its soil and the value of its vegetable productions, possesses such exceptionally rich resources in metals and minerals that if they were properly developed it would become in no long time perhaps the richest country in Asia.—Delhi Gazette.

Hiscellaneous.

THE LATE CAPTAIN J. C. M. RUSSELL,-Intimation has been received from Jubbulpore of the death of this officer, who was officiating Quarter-master 16th Regiment N.I., on the 15th inst., from heat apoplexy.-Madras Mail, June 21.

THE MONSOON, -We learn from Cochin that the south-west monsoon has fairly set in on that coast. It commenced last Thursday, and ever since there have been heavy showers. We also learn that the sea has of late considerably encroached on the beach in the town of Cochin .- Madras Times, June 21.

NEILGIRI DISTRICT.-The Madras Council recently considered all the matters relating to the Neilgherries, but were unable to come to a decision. It has, however, leaked out, that in all probability the S. E. Wynaad will be annexed to the Neilgherries, and that the present constitution of the Neilgherries will remain unchanged.

COFFEE IN KURG .-- It is feared that the coffee crop in Kurg this year will not be so good as it was anticipated at the time of blossom. A large percentage of the berries is not likely to ripen. The "borer" is showing itself in many of the estates in the "Bamboo" district.

Forest Department.—The Madras Government have sanctioned the holding of an examination for the upper subordinates of the Forest Department. The officer at the head of the department and the Board of Revenue recommended the proposal, and sanction was readily granted. The subjects for examination will be English, accounts, the measurement and valuation of timber, cost of conveying timber, and all matters in connection with the working of he department.

Mysor.—As a proof of the commercial prosperity of the Province of Mysor, a Bangalor paper points out that, during the past official year, sixteen new banks were registered and opened native institutions—with a gross capital of Rs. 460,000; the whole of these banks are doing a good business.

THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS.—The Duke of Buckingham and him Grace's family and suite propose leaving Ootacamund for Kotergherry on the 15th proximo, and of remaining there two or three weeks. Koter Hall and Mr. Ouchterlony's house, both looking over the plains in the direction of Coimbatore, and affording lovely views have been engaged for his Grace.—Madras Mail, June 26.

JUSTICE DONE. The Madras Government lately issued a strong order, censuring Colonel Richards, the Joint Magistrate at Wellington, and Major Jago, the Deputy Conservator of Forests, for a miscarriage of justice in reference to a native Badager Christian, who cut down a tree in his own land, and was punished for doing so with six weeks' imprisonment, and a Rs. 50 fine.

MR. C. B. SAUNDERS.—The Chief Commissioner, Mr. C. B. Saunders, with his Secretary and Colonel Hay, accompanied by Major Pearse, visited the Maharajah of Mysor at the palace at Mysor on Saturday. The interview lasted two hours, during which Mr. Saunders heard all the grievances of the Ranees and promised them consideration. - Madras Mail, June 26.

GOVERNMENT SOLICITOR .- Mr. Ernest Barclay, of the late firm of Messrs. Prichard and Barclay, has been appointed Government Solicitor, Madras, in succession to the late Mr. H. G. Prichard. Mr. Barclay has been acting Government Solicitor since Mr. Prichard's death, and he also held the acting appointment during that gentleman's absence in Europe two years ago.

THE COIMBATORE KHEDDAHS.—We learn that it is in contemplation to abolish the Coimbatore Kheddahs, as the expenditure has much exceeded receipts during the time they have been in operation. The tame elephants employed there are to be something the Mysor Keddahs, where they can be much more remuneratively employed.—Madras Mail, June 22.

THE SUPERINTENDENT, CHINCHONA PLANTATIONS.—No successor has yet been appointed to succeed the late Mr. McIvor as Superin-We daresay tendent of the Government Chinchona Plantations. Government will take the present opportunity to review the whole question of Nilgiri chinchona cultivation, and if it should appear to them advisable to continue to compete with private enterprise in the production and sale of quinine, there will be but little difficulty in getting a qualified man to follow up the management of the plantations, on the well-defined lines laid down by Mr. McIvor. Either Mr. Jamieson, of the Government Gardens, or Mr. Rowson, who has been in charge for some years of the Nediwuttum plants. tions, would be the fittest for the post.—Neilgherry Courier, June 29.

FRAUD.—One of the effects of the visit of the Prince of Wales is related by the Neilgherry Courier, which says:—" During the peat fortnight a Mussulman has been making large purchases of bullocks—so very extensively, indeed, have been his transactions that they created a suspicion in the mind of our energetic Sur Amia, who, having caused inquiries to be made, ascertained that the worthy follower of the Prophet had given out that he was authorised to purchase 200 pairs of bullocks for the Prince of Wales. Some poer fools caught at the bait, and parted with their cattle, which, of course, were immediately re-sold for half and quarter of their value. A warrant was in the meantime issued for the man's apprehension, and after a little search he was found, tried, and sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment."

A TIGER AT QUILON.—A Cochin contemporary reports that a live tiger of considerable size was actually seen in the town of Quilon near the large stone bridge last week, and that the beast made his presence felt by carrying away a cow that happened unconsciously to be grazing on the slopes of the canal. "Whence he came or whither he went deponent sayeth not; but it is a positive fact the tiger was not a two-legged Mohurrum affair. He was one of the real sort. It was said that a shikarring party was being organised to beat the place and give master stripes his quietus; but whether the spirit of Nimrod actually prevailed and the tiger was traced we are not informed. Mr. MacGregor, that terrible tiger slayer, was here at the time; and it must have made his heart glad to hear that there was a tiger so near the Residency. But how it all ended no one knows.—Madras Times, June 27.

CHINCHONA CULTURE.—Some time ago a commission was appointed by the Madras Government, with Sir William Robinson as President, to go into the whole question of chinchona cultivation on the Neilgherry Hills. The first fruits of that commission was the visit of the Governor and Sir W. Robinson to Nediwattum a fortnight ago. The Duke, in his usual practical way, had some chinchona trees that had been barked, and others that had not been barked, cut down. He found those that had been barked and mossed (i.e., a covering of moss wound round the stem which had been partially barked) had "heart shade"—a technical term to signify a beginning of rotting in the centre of the tree. Those trees that had not been mossed, or barked, were healthy enough. The Madras Mail remarks on the above facts that Mr. McIvor's death will be a great loss to the commission, for he knew a great deal on the subject, which, it is feared, he never reduced to writing, and it is probable the commission will have some trouble to arrive at all the facts, and all the superintendent's strong convictions on this subject which had for him a very great interest.

PARTIAL FAILURE OF THE SOUTH-WEST MONSOON .- We regret to learn from the Western Coast, and Wynaad and the Neilgherries, that the South-West monsoon has so far proved light and in-adequate. The "burst" was delayed at least a fortnight, and the rainfall since that event has been ominously meagre as compared with the fall of former years. As the rainfall last year was much below the average, anxiety is caused by the partial failure of the present monsoon; and, as an inevitable consequence of abnormal weather, the health of the public is suffering. At Vythery there is a great deal of sickness among the coffee-coolies and other natives; and the mortality among the Badagers of the Neilgherries and native residences at Ootacamund, Coonoor, and Wellington is said to be exceptionally high. These facts have attracted the notice of the Government. Dr. Cleveland, of the Indian Medical Service, has been ordered to visit all the Badager villages and other places, such as Kullar, Burliar, Kulhutty, Missnaconie, Vythery, &c. He has begun with Kaity, the head-quarters of the German Mission. The soldiers at Wellington have been more than usually sickly. The hospital is full of cases of a sort of sunstroke and fever.

COLONEL BODDAM.—Lieut.-Col. Boddam, Staff Corps, has been permitted to retire from the 16th instant. This gentleman's connection as agricultural officer of the Mysor Commission has been for a long series of years, and his services have been of the most useful kind. The tours he made, often through the Districts, led him into contact with the ryots, and by Government orders he was expressly to meet these with Deputy Commissioners, in order to instruct them in the art of agriculture as well as to improve the native system. His labours towards horticulture are well-known, for are they not written in the books of the Mysore Agri-horticultural Society? As Honorary Secretary, he devoted himself to introducing innumerable new varieties of plants and seeds, and his floral experiments in his quiet retreat at Morrison's Gardens were always utilised for the benefit of the public ultimately. The Lal Bagh owes much of its present improvements to his advice and suggestions to successive superintendents of the garden, and he had also the looking after of the Government House grounds, Cubbon Park, and the Rajah's palace grounds, all of which testify to his taste and skill. The allowance he drew from local funds, on special duty, was not much, and in retiring from the service, Bangalor loses one of its most useful public servants.—Bangalor Spectator, June 24.

THE MONSOON.—The monsoon set in at Katiawar on the 13th June. There were smart showers of rain in the Joonaghur, Godul, and Rajcote districts, and the weather has assumed a monsoonish appearance at Rajcote, where no rain had fallen up to the 16th.

OODEYPOR.—We hear from Oodeypor that on the 16th inst. his Highness the Maharana held a "Duree Khana" Levee on the occasion of his accepting the hand of a Princess of the Kishengurh House. It is not yet known when his Highness will celebrate his marriage. - Times of India, June 30.

CHOLERA AT PANCHGUNNY.—We regret to hear that cholera has broken out at Panchgunny. A private telegram received in Bombay on Tuesday stated that two of the boys in the Panchgunny school had died, and that others were seriously ill and not expected to live.—Times of India, June 30.

CHOLERA AT TANDUR.—A telegram from Seram, in the Nizam's territory, dated 21st June, states that three or four days previous to that date cholera broke out at Tandur, and carried off some twenty of the inhabitants. The police have, it is added, made the necessary arrangements, and the Resident at Hyderabad has been applied to for medical aid.

CAPTURE OF A SHARK.—A shark upwards of eleven feet in length was caught by some fishermen in their nets at the stakes, just beyond the middle ground, on Tuesday. It was brought to the Victoria Bunder Basin in the evening, and was still alive. About forty men were required to haul it ashore, after which it was cut open and a large quantity of oil extracted. It was cut up and sent to the fish market on Wednesday morning.—Times of India, June 30.

MILITARY.—Brigadier-General Schneider having left Aden on six months' leave to England, the military command of the brigade has devolved on Colonel Ker, of the 6th N.I., the next senior officer. In taking up his new charge, Colonel Ker is obliged to give up command of his regiment for the time, as he draws half the brigade al-Colonel Elder, 2nd in command of the 6th, acts as comlowances. mandant, Major Dodd (author of an excellent work on military law) acts for Colonel Elder, and Captain Prideaux, the adjutant, will act as wing officer, in addition to his other duties. Aden will not be liked the less by the 6th for this pleasant little shuffle of the cards.

THE NEW FURLOUGH RULES.—The question of the new furlough rules has apparently been decided in the way that we informed our readers was most probable. At least that is the only inference to be drawn from the fact that in a recent General Order, Captain Frere, R.E., Executive Engineer, Rutnagherry, was granted furlough to England for six months under para. 11 of the 1876 As we before pointed out, to imagine that Government regulations. had published rules in 1876 which could only come into operation in 1881 was an obviously absurd reading of a clause which certainly might have been clearer, and we repeat our former conviction, that to all officers under twenty years' service the new furlough rules hold out advantages not offered by any that have been published of late years .- Times of India.

GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE.—We hear that Dr. A. N. Hojel has been appointed to the chair of Physiology in the Grant Medical College and as second Physician of Jamsetjee Hospital, in succession to Dr. Cook, now acting Principal and first Physician of the Hospital. As Dr. Hojel has acted twice, and with marked success, in the position he is now to occupy, the nomination is one that will give general satisfaction. The function of dispensing medical patronage in this Presidency has been no sinecure of late. There have been many more men eligible then posts waiting to be filled. The conflicting claims of seniority and special fitness have rendered choice difficult; while the caprices and subordinate personal interests of influential official friends of several of the applicants have been enough to puzzle and perplex even a more experienced administrator than Sir Philip Wodehouse. But if half we hear about these small politics be true, his Excellency has very fairly held his own. In several instances the net has been spread very vainly in his sight, and accomplished fowlers have been disconcerted.—Times of India.

AN IMPORTANT CASE TO SHAREHOLDERS.—The case in which the London, Bombay and Mediterranean Bank sued Mr. Rustomjee Cowasjee Soortee to recover the sum of Rs. 3.200, being the amount of calls due by the defendant to the plaintiffs, was heard before the Hon, Sir Charles Sargent on Monday last, and was resumed for further hearing yesterday. The defendant in his written statement denied that he was indebted to the plaintiffs in the sum or any part thereof, neither did he ever sign the articles of agreement, nor held any shares in the plaintiff's bank as alleged. An important question having arisen as to whether the Court of Chancery has any power over the defendant in the present case, several witnesses were examined on behalf of both the parties, after which his Lordship said that the Court of Chancery had no power over the defendant, and dismissed the suit with costs. Messrs. Starling and Farran, instructed by Messrs. Lynch and Tobin, appeared for the Bank. Messrs. Lang and Jardine, instructed by Messrs. Prescot and Winter, appeared for the defendant. During the hearing of the case the Court was crowded with shareholders, mostly Banians, who were very anxious to know the result of the case. Times of India, June 30.

ROBBERY AT THE ALBERT MUSEUM.—The above Museum was broken into on Saturday or Sunday evening, and property to the value of nearly Rs.1,000 stolen from it. It appears that the Museum was closed, as usual, at about 5.30 P.M. on Saturday last, everything being in proper order. On Monday morning when it was opened it was found that the place had been broken open and many of the things stolen. The thieves, for it is pretty clear that two or more were concerned in it, had effected an entrance by smashing one of the thick plate glass windows on the garden side of the Museum. Putting a hand through they unbolted the window, and then smashing the shutter on the inside had unbolted that in the same manner. The framework of the next window is partly broken away, showing that the thieves had tried to break that open, but had failed. Amongst the property stolen is a silver coffee pot, presented by the Rao of Cutch, a battle-axe, a silver model of a musjid, some sashes, The thieves were evidently not acquainted with the value of some of the things there, as they left behind a gold medal, of the value of about Rs.800, and other small articles quite as valuable as those they took away, and much less cumbersome. The police are making inquiries, and have arrested a man who was formerly employed at the Museum, and who has been lately seen loitering about there. The gates of the Victoria Gardens are closed at ten o'clock at night, and as there is no ramoosee or guard at the Museum the thieves had plenty of time to execute their purpose. A number of half-consumed matches were picked up near the cases from which the property was stolen.—Times of India, June 30.

DEATH OF SERGEANT H. RICHARDSON.—The mention of the name of Sergeant Richardson will call up in the minds of old residents in Bombay very lively remembrances of a character whose stern sectarian tenets and fiery rebukes of the faithful in general drew to him much attention. We refer to a period dating about twenty years ago. As a soldier he had been in many a hard-fought engagement, and when he became unfit for further duty he retired on his pension, in 1850. Being of active temperament, and under the influence of strong religious convictions, credited also with an irre-proachable character, he accepted the appointment of City missionary in Bombay, and subsequently was appointed Superintendent of the Pensioners' Home and the Magdalen Asylum. Whether, in his new line of life, he was solely concerned in waging war against sin and ungodliness, or whether his strength was spent rather in proselytising efforts in favour of his Baptist views, we cannot say, but he was soon ejected from all his appointments—not, however, until much rancour and bad blood had been stirred. In his retreat the old Sergeant kept up a running fire on the several committees of those institutions, which for sarcasm, reproach, and raillery could hardly be matched. The press opened its columns to some of his fulminations, and when that channel was closed against him he set up a press in his own house, and worked it with his own hands—all unpractised as he was in the craft—from whence he issued what he designated "Tracts for the Times." The odd medley of type (which he had picked up in the bazaar), with the liberal scattering of italics and capitals, and other devices for giving emphasis to his objurgatory language and withering scorn, fitly correspond to the rough and incongruous style of the matter he wrote—which was a mixture of religious po-lemics and personal vindication. Regarding the distribution of his tracts, he announced that "the poor and all lepers [sinners] will get one of each gratis—the rich and the clean [self-righteous] will pay 3 as." In his tract No 2 he relates a conversation with a chaplain at Poona, who called on him, with the view, as it would appear, of drawing out the old Sergeant on religious subjects. Here is a part of the dialogue:—"Sergeant: If Parson: We know nothing about them; they were not brought into the covenant.—S.: But it behoveth me to know something about them, because I have buried four; now I ask you, are they saved or lost?—P.: They are not saved.—S.: That is plain, and tantamount to saying that they are lost." He further says:—"A memo. was taken; the whole scene stands as vividly before my imagination as when it occurred—the lordling attitude, and the unwarranted and wounding expressions, of the parson can only be severed from memory by the keener scythe of Death." The incidents of this unfortunate interview had evidently sunk deeply into his soul, as he again refers to it on another page with indignation and in language of deep feeling:—" We shall tell a strange story," he says, "when we shall publish our life and letters; when we come to show in detail all that we have met with from this class of harpies (the ministers on the Bombay establishment)—how we and our family have been treated, our innocent children called heathers when living, and set on a par with dogs when they have been called for by Death." The valiant old Sergeant displayed his soldierly qualities of courage and fearlessness among his theological foes as unhesitatingly as he had done in mortal encounter with those of his country, and his own convictions of what was truth he loyally maintained against all assailants. That he gave no quarter may be attributed to the treatment which, as he says, he experienced; and while we may regret the bitter and violent spirit which too often characterised his speech and "Tracts," yet that there was a deep and ardent "soul of goodness" in the sturdy veteran no one who knew him would hesitate to admit. His quaint diction and copious illustration, his Hibernian humour and keen repartee marked him out as a very original character, and all regarded him as a diamond in the rough. He died on Saturday last, having attained the age of sixty-nine years. - Times of India, June 23.

NEW INDIAN SEES .- The Propagation Society on Friday discussed the proposals for the endowment of the new sees of Lahor and Burmah; when, on the one hand, the proposals of the Committee for grants of £500 were defeated by Sir Bartle Frere, who succeeded in substituting £2,000 in each case; while, on the other hand, persistent attempts to refuse any grants at all, because the Bishops were connected with the State, were negatived.

EAST INDIES .- POSTAGE ON PRINTED PAPERS AND PATTERNS.-In the notice which was issued on the 5th June last, relative to that the rates to be paid on printed papers and patterns for India, as well as for Aden and Zanzibar, would, in future, be—via Southampton, 2d. for 2oz., via Brindisi, 3d. for 2oz. Many articles of ampton, 2d. for 2oz., via Brindisi, 3d. for 2oz. Many articles of this nature, however, not exceeding loz., have since been posted prepaid at the former rates of ld. via Southampton, and 2d. via Brindisi, and in order to prevent any inconvenience from the detention of such packets for such insufficient payment, the Postmaster-General considers it necessary to point out that the new rates of postage, as above indicated, are applicable to all such articles, even if they do not exceed loz. in weight.

BANQUETS TO LORD NORTHBROOK.

A banquet was given on Tuesday evening to Lord Northbrook at the Guildhall, Winchester. When Lord Northbrook was appointed Governor-General of India, in 1872, the then Mayor of Winchester, Mr. Robert P. Forder, gave him the first farewell banquet in the county at Winchester, 160 being present, including several members of the Cabinet. The present Mayor, Mr. Morshand decimals to give Lord Northbrook a suitable and hearty head, desirous to give Lord Northbrook a suitable and hearty welcome after his services in India, invited his lordship to a banquet. The Mayor occupied the chair, having on his right the Earl of Northbrook, and on his left Bishop Harold Brown, the party numbering about 100, including Bishop Macdougall, Lord Selborne, Mr. Bonham Carter, Sir Henry Mildmay and officers of the Hampshire Yeomanry Cavalry, Colonel Pemberton, the Warden and the Head Master of Winchester College, Mr. William Bramston Beach, M.P., Mr. Barrow Simmonds, M.P., Major Naghten, M.P., &c. After the dinner the gallery was occupied by ladies, invitations having been previously given them by the Mayor.

On Wednesday evening his lordship was entertained by the Mayor of Portsmouth (Mr. W. Pink) at a public banquet in the Lecture Hall of the Soldiers' Institute, Portsmouth. Covers were laid for 150. The Mayor, who presided, had on his right the noble guest of the evening. In front of the gallery was the design "A hearty welcome to the Right Hon. the Earl of Northbrook, Viceroy of India, on his return from the most successful government of that important part of her Majesty's Empire." After the usual loyal toasts, the Mayor, in proposing "The House of Lords," coupled with the health of the Earl of Northbrook, alluded to the difficulty and anxiety which had characterised the government of India by and anxiety which had characterised the government of India by their noble guest, and the commendable way in which he saved the natives from starvation. All must wish that his lordship might be blessed in his family connections, revered by his intimate friends, and treasured in the hearts and affections of his countrymen.

Lord Northbrook, who was received with cheers, responded. After acknowledging the cordiality of his reception by men of all parties, which he attributed to the respect in which his father was held, he disclaimed the merit of having averted the famine in India, as the safety of the millions of inhabitants depended not upon the action of the Government or the conduct of the Governor-General, but upon whether rain fell at a particular time. He paid a high compliment to Sir Richard Temple and the other civil and military servants of the Crown. He said that as far as he understood the policy to be pursued, the Government of England was based upon the proclamation of the Queen in 1858, in which it was laid down that England required and intended no extension of dominion in India, and that the rights and dignity of the princes of India would on all occasions be respected. In consequence of the policy of the country the native princes were satisfied with what they did with respect to the Guicowar of Baroda. Under these circumstances it was not surprising that as soon as they heard the intimation that the Prince of Wales was about to visit India, from all parts of India came solicitations from the native princes to be honoured with visits. The qualities of the Prince of Wales were of the greatest possible service; for his Highness whilst in India, by his kindness, dignity, and courtesy combined, had acquired over the native rulers and chiefs an influence that was something remarkable. The visit, he was certain, not only from personal conviction, but from what he had been told by officers of the Government of India, had resulted in a high political advantage. The knowledge in England of Indian subjects was very superficial, and based on incorrect reports, but much satisfaction had been expressed in India that in a time of extreme difficulty and anxiety. England had placed that time of extreme difficulty and anxiety England had placed the Indian Government under many obligations by the confidence which had been shown to be reposed in the administration there. It was a matter of the greatest importance that there should be great precaution and deliberation before imposing new taxes. The noble earl thanked the company for his reception, and said it was to him a matter of great pride and satisfaction to return thanks in a borough with with his father was so long associated, and that he should have had the advantage of thanking them for the same hospitable and cordial reception on his return from India that was given to him when he was on the point of starting.

ROYAL INDIAN ENGINEERING COLLEGE.

The annual presentation of prizes to the successful students at the Royal Indian Engineering College, which is situate in the delightful neighbourhood of Egham, took place on Friday. The reports of the President, Colonel Chesney, and of the examiners, were of the most satisfactory character, and in reference to the third batch of students who, after completing their three years' training at the college, are about to proceed to India to enter the service of the Government, it was stated they had acquitted themselves very creditably, even the lowest on the list having reached far above the qualifying standard. The Marquis of Salisbury distributed the prize.

in the presence of a numerous and distinguished company. After having presented the rewards he proceeded to address the company. Having congratulated the heads of the college the company. and the students on the happy results of their labours, his lordship said:—Far be it from me to say a word implying the faintest disrespect for Buddhist or Hindoo architecture, but, in the relation in which I stand to the Government of India, par-don me if I attach more value than you appear to do to the excellence of estimates in matters of architecture, or rather to the excellence of that economy of which adequate and judicious estimates are the foundation. It is impossible to address a number of gentlemen who are now going out on engineering service in India for the first time without feeling that we are sending out there a very powerful financial engine. Therefore, although economy has been often the text for a very dull sermon, perhaps I may be allowed in the present state of affairs to say to you, who will have so much power in reference to future Indian budgets, one word in its behalf. You know the condition in which our Indian finances just at this moment are. Probably rumours of the great silver panic have reached even these secluded halls. I use the words silver panic advisedly, because, in my opinion, matters are made out to be very much darker than they really are, and prophecies of evil are indulged in for which there is no foundation in ascertained facts. Still, making allowance for that, and fully admitting, as I do, that the larger amount of our present trouble is due to purely transient and temporary causes, there is no doubt that, by our mode of governing India and our method of raising money for its requirements, we have placed ourselves in this unpleasant position—that we have to bring home a very large sum—£15,000,000 annually—for the wants of the Indian Government at home. The progress of the discovery of silver, and the action of foreign nations, make that difficult, and add to the burden of doing it; and there can be no doubt that, although the burden is not so great as some people think, the call for economy will be greater in future years than it has been in the past, owing to that cause. I would impress upon engineers, therefore, that this is a serious question, in which they, in their professional capacity, may have great influence for good or evil. Whatever may be the case in England, where spending more or less money means more or less unpopularity, it cannot be too earnestly impressed on all who take part in the Government of India that economy there is not a matter of discretion or choice, but of absolute necessity. What is the reason why our rule in India is accepted so patiently and contentedly by vast millions of human beings, with whom we have in other matters little sympathy, who are aliens from us in colour, race and creed? The reason is that under our rule they are free to exercise their industry unharassed by any excessive imposts or capricious exactions. As long as that continues they will be content with us; but if there arose in India any Government which despised economy, which trusted to its force to exact new and unaccustomed taxes from the people, that Government would be straining its power to the utmost. Economy is the very sceptre of It is the lightness of our imposts which cements that compact with the people by virtue of which they are glad that we should rule. The duty of contributing in every way not only by personal exertion, but by the expression of individual opinion, to the performance of that duty which is the first the Indian Government ought to keep in mind, is incumbent not only on the heads of the Government, but on every member of the great services by which India is ruled. I therefore in no mere theoretic spirit plead with you that in your future career you will give no encouragement to that contempt of economy which has sometimes prevailed with engineers of the older school, which even now has not disappeared from the popular or even the official sentiment, and which, objectionable everywhere, in India is little short of suicide. There is another thing I would mention. I think there is in the country no nobler spectacle than the services that work under the Government of India. We have achieved wonderful results, owing to the fact that we are able to enjoy all the honour and the integrity which belong to officials bred in an atmosphere of freedom, while we have all the power and vigour which belong to a Government whose form is absolute, and that combination which, on so vast a scale, the world has never seen before, will, as long as it lasts, be productive of unexampled blessings to the human race. But if there is one drawback to be found it is the tendency to increased distance between those who govern and those who are governed. As you know, a very distinguished body of travellers left these shores, since I addressed you last year, to visit India. They have returned. I have talked with several of them, and have had the opportunity of learning the opinion of others; and whilst generally their language has been one of unalloyed admiration, whilst all they saw filled them with the greatest respect for the qualities of the race by whom such things could be achieved, they yet brought home the painful impression that there was more coldness between the two races than anything they had learnt at home had led them to imagine. That coldness I need not say is full at least of injustice and possibly in the distant future of danger. It is contrary to the wishes of the people of this country, and to the tendency of the legislation which they authorise. As you know, under the late Government, provision was made for introducing natives into the Civil Service, and under the present Government rules for carrying that provision into effect have been issued. They will not remain a dead letter; they will gradually receive more and more effect, and over a wider area. What occurs to me chiefly as a matter of solicitude is that that inevitable increase in the share which our native fellow subjects must in the future take in the administration of their country should be received not as a hardship, not as something to be lamented or kept at a distance, not grudgingly, in fact, but cheerfully, by the English services with whom they are to associate. To your service it will be no novelty, for natives have worked with you for a long time; but still on your opinion much will depend, and I trust you will put earnestly from you those old jealousies, sentiments, prejudices, or whatever name you choose to call them by, which establish a deep gulf between the English and the native.

Lord Napier of Magdala remarked that his course of conduct in India had been to take care that no native should leave him without the feeling that he had parted from a friend. He had never done a kindness to a native of India which had not been repaid him a hundred-fold when opportunity offered. In every difficulty in which he had been engaged he had always received the greatest support and assistance from the intellectual natives of India.

The following are the successful candidates at the recent open competition for admission to the Royal Indian Engineering College: —
J. W. Wyatt, F. G. Heaven, H. G. S. Savory, W. H. M'Connel, R. O. Clayton, E. H. Tuck, W. L. Strange, A. Brebner, A. Hill, J. F. H. Collett, F. St. G. M. Smith, J. P. Coy, F. W. M. Scott, G. H. Morse, D. W. Herbert, W. T. Anstruther, H. Roche, H. A. D. Wathen, C. J. Cole, A. M. Hayes, A. Leventhorpe, A. R. Boyle, H. F. B. Frost, H. J. Graham, A. I. Lewin, H. I. Bell, J. A. Schofield, L. G. Bonham-Carter, J. P. Henderson, W. H. Jackson, W. B. Campbell, H. H. Roden, A. R. Macdonald, W. B. Bestie, E. B. Hanson, H. Kench, T. Butler, L. S. Staley, W. B. Gordon, F. B. Claudet, A. M. Foord, A. M. Fagan, C. E. Jeffeock, C. E. C. Montresor, R. H. Dorman, W. J. Turnbull, W. E. Muntz, W. E. Pedley, F. J. Wilson, L. R. Fraser.

Miscellancous.

IN MEMORIAM.—A lady, under the initials "A. D. M.," has presented to the National Lifeboat Institution £1,000, in memory of two officers of the Indian Army (Madras), Hawkins and Spinks, many years deceased, and in appreciation of the work performed on the coast of the United Kingdom by the institution.

INDIAN APPEALS.—RAI NURSING DOSS V. RAI NARAIN DOSS.—This was an appeal from the High Court of Allahabad, concerning the partition of the joint estate of an undivided Hindoo family, living in commensality. The property in question is valued at over £100,000. Mr. Doyne appeared for the appellants; Mr. Leith, C.C., M.P., Mr. Cowie, Q.C., and Mr. C. W. Arathoon for the respondents. Their Lordships dismissed the appeal, with costs.

Ouvah Coffee Company.—The Ouvah Coffee Company (Limited) in their report state that the net profit for the year has amounted to £11,162, and, with the balance of £3,744 brought from laat year's accounts, there is a total of £14,907. In January last an interim dividend of 10s. per share, or £5,000, was paid, and it is now proposed to divide a further sum of £7,000, or 14s. per share, making in all 12 per cent. for the year.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S RETURN FROM INDIA.—Her Majesty held a Court yesterday at Osborne to receive addresses of congratulation on the safe return of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales from India. Addresses were presented by the Corporation of the City of London, her Majesty's Commission of Lieutenancy of the City of London, and by the Corporation of the City of Dublin. Gracious answers having been returned by her Majesty, the various deputations retired, and luncheon was served in a tent on the lawn, after which the deputations returned to London.

CRICKET.—INDIA-OFFICE V. COOPER'S-HILL.—Sixteen or seventeen years ago the Office used to play an annual match v. Hornsey, when Mr. J. D. Dickinson, the Secretary to the East India Company, was living there, and where he used to entertain the team most hospitably. Messrs. J. L. and A. Oliphant, F. and C. Morgan, Trevor, Craufurd, Shepherd, Townsend, McInnes, &c., used then to play. Eight years back the Office beat the Admiralty, and six years ago they vanquished Clapham, Messrs. W. H. Benthall, F. Wright, and others playing. On Tuesday, July 18, they had a most enjoyable outing at Cooper's-hill, thoroughly appreciating the holiday, pleasant game, capital luncheon, and dinner, and splendid bathe in the Thames. The match was a close one, the Office winning by five runs only; score—India-office, 148; Cooper's-hill, 143. Mr. Fulwell made 54 in excellent style for Cooper's-hill, and Mr. W. Lindsay's 75, and Mr. R. F. Christie's 42 pretty nearly composed the visitors' total. The Office had but ten batsmen, as Mr. Grey's duties detained him till their innings was over. The eleven were—Captain, Mr. W. Lindsay (Mariborough and Surrey), Messra R. F. Christie, F. C. Thompson, A. H. Savage, — Sharpe, W. J. Maitland, C. Grey, J. R. Aitchison, R. Shortrede, A. F. Brereton, and C. E. D. Black.

MILITARY. -- Brevet-Major-Hallows, 15th Regiment, is about to proceed out to India to relieve Captain R. N. Gream, 62nd Regiment, whose period of staff service has expired, as Director of Garrison Instruction in that country.

Bills on India.—Tenders for £700,000 (70 lacs of rupees) in bills on India were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday, the 19th inst. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £360,000, and to Bombay £310,000. Tenders on Calcutta at 1s. 6\frac{3}{2}d. receive in full; on Bombay at 1s. 6\frac{9}{2}-16d., in full; no allotments being made below that price. The effect of this allotment, which, it will be seen, was not to the full extent of the bills offered, has been as yet imperceptible on the price of silver; 48d. to 48\frac{1}{4}d. per oz. was mentioned in some quarters, but as there is scarcely any here the quotation was really nominal. The minimums at which tenders were accepted to-day 1-16d. to \frac{1}{6}d. higher than a fortnight ago.

The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts offers for competition in the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge an exhibition of the value of £80 a year, tenable for a student who shall be approved as a candidate for missionary work amongst the heathen in India and the East. The exhibition is open to members of the University who have completed at least one academical year of residence. The examination will be held in November next, and the subjects will be Scriptural knowledge, Greek and Latin translation, prose composition, and elementary mathematics. The examiners appointed are—For Oxford, the Rev. E. C. Woolcombe, of Balliol, and Professor Burrows, of All Souls; for Cambridge, the Rev. E. Hills, of St. John's and Mr. E. J. Crosse, of Caibs.

THE EAST INDIA ASSOCIATION.—The annual meeting of this Association, which has been instituted for the independent and disinterested advocacy and promotion by all legitimate means of the public interests and welfare of the inhabitants of India generally, was held at the Rooms of the Society on Wednesday, July 19. The report of the Council of the Association reviewed the work of the past year, and congratulated the members on the success of their efforts to obtain an important reduction of postage to India; and recounted the representations which have been made to the Marquis of Salisbury with reference to the maintenance of the Indian import duties on raw cotton, with various other matters of general importance to the people of India. With a view of keeping alive and extending an intelligent interest among the people at home in the progress of affairs in India, the Association have from time to time held many public meetings and conferences for the discussion of various topics of political and social importance to the Indian populations, and these have been successful in their objects, large numbers of officers and gentlemen of long official experience in the administration of the affairs of the British Empire in the East having taken part in the discussions which have occurred. The report having been adopted, the various retiring members of the governing council were re-elected.

THE LOSS OF THE "STRATHCLYDE."-Mr. H. C. Rothery, registrar of the Admiralty, has made an inquiry into the conduct of those in charge of the tug Palmerston, on the occasion of the loss of the Strathelyde, Bombay steamer, and has prepared a report, in which he calls to mind the circumstances connected with the memorable collision of the 17th February last, and reviews the evidence given by the sixteen witnesses he examined. Mr. Rothery sums up by saying-"We fail to see that the harbourmaster did anything but what it was his duty to have done. Not knowing that there were any persons on the floating wreck, if indeed there were any at that time, we think that he would not have been justified in leaving the Franconia in the state in which she then was, with the night coming on and a mist upon the water, to go to the wreck, and that he exercised a wise discretion in going a head of her to pilot her to a safe anchorage. Had he abandoned her and gone to the floating wreck, and the Franconia with all on board been lost that night, the harbourmaster would have incurred a very heavy responsibility, and would have been justly open to the gravest censure. It is not for us to pronounce any opinion upon the conduct of those on board and in charge of the Franconia, but if it is true, as was stated before us, that they left the wretched people belonging to the Strathelyde to drown without making any effort to save them, and not only never informed the Palmerston that she had done so, but actually called off that vessel from rendering them assistance when she was herself in no immediate danger of foundering; if all this be true, much of the loss of life which occurred on this occasion would be attributable to their misconduct. We refrain, however, from expressing any opinion on this point, as the question was not directly referred to us, and there was no one present to represent the Franconia on the inquiry. All that we need say is that no blame, in our opinion, rests upon those who had the charge of the

SIR SALAR JUNG.—On July 15, at Dunrobin Castle, Sir Salar Jung received addresses presented by deputations from the Town Councils of Inverness, Dingwall, Tain and Wick. The deputations were introduced by the Duke of Sutherland, and the addresses generally referred with satisfaction to the visit to this country of Sir Salar Jung, to whom a hearty welcome was given, as the guest of an honoured and patriotic nobleman. They then referred to the friendly relations which have been maintained between this country and the Nizam of Hyderabad, and specially to the services which Sir Salar Jung had rendered this country during the Indian Mutiny, and the reception which he gave the Prince of Wales on his recent visit to India, concluding by hoping that his Excellency would return to India with restored health, and continue to maintain the same friendly feelings towards this country which he had always maintained, and to devote himself to promoting the prosperity of the people entrusted to his care. Sir Salar gave a somewhat lengthened reply to the deputation from Inverness, whose address was first presented, and briefly acknowledged the others, expressing his pleasure at his visit to this country and the North, his warm appreciation of the hospitality of the Duke of Sutherland, and his surprise at the agricultural and other improvements he had witprise at the agricultural and other improvements he had witnessed. With regard to the compliment paid him as to his conduct at the time of the Mutiny, he said he only did his duty towards a faithful ally. The deputations were then entertained at luncheon, where the Duke, in proposing the health of his guest, referred to the talents and character of Sir Salar, his loyalty to this country, and his public spirit in furthering Indian improvements. The toast was drunk with loud applause, and replied to by Sir Salar Jung, who proposed the Duke's health, and that of Lord Tarbat and his affianced bride. Sir Salar Jung and his suite on leaving the Sheldonian Theatre, Oxford, yesterday, where the degree of D.C.L. had been conferred on his Excellency, proceeded to New College, where he was entertained at luncheon.

Imperial Parliament.

House of Lords, Monday, July 17.—The Indian Civil Service.—The Marquis of Salisbury, replying to Lord Stanley of ALDERLEY, said he was not prepared to recommend any change with regard to the examinations for Indian appointments. object of competitive examinations was not to relect people ready to go out to India, but to choose the most promising raw material. The competitive examinations were suited to our present position. He confessed, for his own part, that from what he had seen of official life, the position of the head of a department would be intolerable if it were not for the system of competitive examinations, though he was far from saying that that system was without disadvantages. He had been asked to introduce the principle of nominating for the Indian Civil Service a small number of men who had taken honours at the universities; but that course would not in any way counteract these disadvantages, and it should be recollected that the highest Indian authorities had given it as their opinion that such drawbacks as existed did not detract from the efficiency of the service.—Earl Granville suggested that in any arrangements to be made upon the subject the Oxford and Cambridge universities should not be placed in a better position than that of London, especially as there was much to be said in favour of candidates for the Indian Civil Service studying in London.- The Marquis of Salisbury said what was desired was to secure that as many of the candidates as possible should be brought under university discipline. and if the University of London made the necessary arrangements it would share in the advantages referred to.-The matter then dropped.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, July 20.—Lord HARTINGTON having inquired when the motion as to Tuesday and Wednesday sittings would be made, Mr. DISRAELI, in the course of his statements in reply, referred to one or two subjects connected with Indian Legislature. He said that after the Education Bill had passed through Committee and two or three other Bills, he proposed to take the Appellate Jurisdiction Bill, and at this point the Government would endeavour to fix a day for the Indian Budget. On the 31st July it was proposed to go into Committee on the Suez Canal Vote, when Mr. Cave's mission might be discussed.

KTHE QUEEN AND THE ARMY.—Sir A. GORDON asked the Sccretary for War why the name of the Queen has been inserted in the list of the officers of the army published in the Mouthly Army List on the 8th of July; whether such insertion indicates any change in the relations hitherto maintained by the Sovereign with respect to the army; and whether it is consistent with the preamble of the Mutiny Act that the Sovereign should be included in the list of the officers of the army, for whose control that Act is annually passed by her Majesty and Parliament.—Mr. Hardy: The Queen's name is not inserted in the list of the officers of the army. The Queen's name is not inserted in the list of the officers of the army List," followed by those of her Aides-de-Camp. This appeared to me suitable to the position which her Majesty holds in relation to the army. Such insertion indicates no change in that relation, but, on the contrary, is confirmatory of it. Her Majesty is not in any sense included in the preamble or enactments of the Mutiny Act, as I am not aware that her Majesty is in her Majesty's military service.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, July 24.—SLAVE TRADE IN THE RED SEA.—Mr. BOURKE, being interrogated by Sir H. WOLFF as to the development of the slave trade in the Red Sea, said the matter had been under the consideration of the Government, and negotiations were going on with the Khedive, with a view to the establishment of consular agencies.—Mr. W. HUNT, in reply to the same gentleman, said some of the smaller ships of war had been instructed to call at the slave ports, but no reports had yet been received from them.

COUNTY OF CHESTER.

COUNTY OF CHESTER.

COUNTY BRIDGEMASTER, SURVEYOR, and ARCHITECT.

The MAGISTRATES for the COUNTY of CHESTER will, at the General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, to be held at NETHER KNUTSFORD, in and for the said County, on MONDAY, the 16th day of OCTOBER next, proceed to ELECT a SUCCESSOR to the late Mr. Nignoces, the County Bridgemaster and Surveyor.

The person elected will be appointed to fill the offices of County Bridgemaster, Surveyor, and Architect, and will be required to devote the whole of his time to his duties. A Military or Civil Engineer, or Professional Architect, will be considered eligible for the appointment. The officer appointed will not be obliged to reside actually in the county, provided that his residence is in some place convenient to his duties. Detailed particulars of his duties, which will comprise the supervision and charge of the County and Hundred Bridges, Roads, Gaols, Court-houses, Asylums, Lockups, and all County Buildings of every description, and the furnishing, when specially required, of Plans, Specifications, and Estimates for New Buildings, and the Alterations of Old Buildings, may be obtained on application to the undersigned.

The salary will be £500 per annum, and actual trations, and Estimates for New Buildings, and the Alterations of Old Buildings, may be obtained on application to the undersigned.

The salary will be £500 per annum, and actual travelling expenses within the county, such sum to include the services of such clerk or assistant as the officer to be appointed may find it necessary to employ in the inspection and superintendence of county lengths of roads, and such roads as may hereafter be required under the provisions of any Act of Parliament, to be inspected on behalt of the county. If specially engaged to furnish Plans, Specifications, or Estimates of New Buildings, or for Alterations of Old Buildings, other than Bridges, Lockups, and Magistrates' rooms, he will, when the cost shall exceed £500, be allowed a commission thereon according to a fixed scale.

Full particulars of all the duties to be performed, and of the allowances to be made, together with any further information Candidates may require, may be obtained on application at my Office, Northgate-street, Chester.

Applications for the appointment and Testimonials must be delivered at my Office, as above, on or before the 29th day of September next.

CHARLES WILLIAM POTTS,

Clerk of the Peace for the County of Chester.

Summary and Revielo.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are-from Bombay, July 7; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, July 5; Calcutta, July 4.

THE event of the week in Bombay was the arrival and installation of the new Bishop, Dr. Louis George Mylne, of Keble College, Oxford. The latter incident took place on July 6. On that occasion the new Bishop, whose first appearance was awaited with some curiosity on account of the ritualistic leanings ascribed to him by popular report, was "very ceremonious, but not extravagantly so. He intoned slightly the Ten Commandments without reading from the Prayer-book, and when he came to the Nicene Creed he led off the choir in a rich voice, the whole creed being sung to very fine and effective music."

THE Viceroy's Council met at Simla on July 6, when Sir W. Muir presented the report of the Select Committee on the Opium Bill, which is to supersede and consolidate all opium laws throughout India, excepting Bengal regulations regarding the monopoly in that province. After some personal explanations between Sir W. Muir and Mr. Cockerell, exchanged with becoming courtesy, the Council adjourned for three weeks.

An unfortunate mistake, which led to the death of three harmless travellers, is reported in a Bombay paper. It appears that a mail from Major Sandeman's camp was attacked one day. by robbers, who carried off all the letters. As soon as the news reached the nearest post stage a small force went out to look for the robbers. On nearing the scene of the attack they found three men who looked as if they might be some of the culprits, These were straightway fired upon and killed. Unfortunately it afterwards came out that the men who were thus shot were unoffending travellers belonging to the Marri tribe. though not to Marris actually living in the Marri Pass. Of course compensation will have to be given to their families; but it seems that people in that part of the world are always easily consoled for the loss of their nearest and dearest relatives by the offer of a sum averaging from Rs. 20 to Rs. 50, according to the status of the deceased. As dead men tell no tales, we shall never know whether those who fell on this occasion agree in the value put on them by their surviving kinsfolk.

But, as the gipsy said to Borrow, "life is precious, brother," even to a roving Pathan; and our native police should be taught to think twice before turning their weapons against innocent men.

It was generally deemed probable that the Commander-in-Chief would visit Khelat in the cold season, though what the escort will do in that case is a mystery, as forage for horses and supplies for men are not procurable to any great extent during that time of year. It was expected that Major Sandeman's Mission will return to Karachi about August, but this of course would depend upon circumstances. By the last mail accounts the heat in Mastang was very severe, and Major Sandeman had already suffered from its effects. He had been laid up with fever, but was reported better when the mail left.

A TELEGRAM from Allahabad to the Bombay Gazette announces the death on July 3 of Mr. Charles Grant, District and Sessions Judge of Banda, N. W. P., at Hamirpur, where he was holding the June Sessions. The deceased officer was a Bengal Civilian of 1850.

THE heat had been most severely felt for weeks past all through Central India, and at several stations heat apoplexy has claimed its victims. No fewer than fourteen men in the 33rd Regiment were attacked in one day at Kampti, of whom four died at once, while several of the others lay in a critical state. Faizabad and Cawapore have also suffered. Cholera too had broken out in a bad form in the military prison at Lucknow, and the whole of the inmates were to be at once moved into camp. The battery from the "Muchee Bawan" had been moved into camp some days before from a like cause, but has since shaken off the disease, and hoped to return shortly to cantonments.

THE new Commander in-Chief of India has just issued a stringent circular to the effect that no staff officer shall be allowed to go on leave till he has been at least ten months performing the duties of his appointment; except, of course, in cases of sickness or very urgent private affairs.

WE learn that Captain Wilson left Simla on June 28, for Bangalor, to take over charge of the young Maharajah.

WE learn from a Calcutta paper that silver bullion to the extent of about forty three lakhs of rupees had arrived in Bengal, and been made over to the Calcutta Mint during the last six or seven weeks before the latest mail dates. This sum, together with the balance of the previous months, would amount to about sixty lakhs of rupees now in Government store.

MR. BRADFORD LESLIE, the Agent to the E. I. Railway, Mr. C. H. Denham, who has been acting as Chief Engineer, and Captain W. Wallace, Deputy Consulting Engineer to Government, started on the morning of July 4 to make a minute and detailed inspection of the whole of the East Indian lines of railway from Calcutta to Jabalpur and Dehli. They would probably be absent from Calcutta about three weeks.

A NEW Spinning and Weaving Mill was opened on Wednesday at Kurla, nine miles from Bombay, capable of working 50,000 spindles and 500 looms. Work will begin with 25,000 spindles and 340 looms.

The rate of conversion of Indian into sterling money for Overland Money Orders has been changed to 1s.  $7\frac{1}{2}d$ . per rupee.

THE Deputy Commissioner of Peshawar is said to have endeavoured to induce the Afridis to submit, and informed them that Government had decided upon sending an expedition against them should they continue obdurate. They show no inclination to comply, and the people of Terrah are likely to join the Afridis in resisting Government.

THE Chief Commissioner of Oudh, Sir G. Couper, has recorded his opinion that the prisoners in the Lucknow Central Prison who took part in the outbreak at that Jail had a substantial grievance, for the men, he held, should not have been deprived of their lotas or washing pots. Mr. McReddie, the governor of the jail, is therefore censured for his rash interference with native usages.

BEYOND the semi-official intimation of the Pioneer that Colonel Malleson has not been dismissed, nothing has transpired to account for his sudden and unexpected retirement and the appointment of Captain Wilson, who has lately left Simla to succeed him. The Bangalor report is that Colonel Malleson one evening at Bangalor, where the Maharajah had gone, indulged in some practical jokes with the young Maharajah, which involved the breaking of caste, and which were, it is said, carried so far that one of the young Maharajah's near relatives, who was present at the time, was obliged to leave Bangalor in great alarm in a common country bullock-cart. The Ranis were shocked when they learnt what had been done, and the family affairs of the palace were disorganised. Colonel Malleson soon after gave up his appointment and went to Simla, either on his own account, or in answer to a call from superior authority.

THE official account of the cholera outbreak at Golwhad does not by any means tally with the statements first published in the Bombay Gazette. The discrepancy between them reminds us of the opposite accounts of Turkish and Servian victories during the present war. The acting collector of Tanna in a letter to the Bombay paper declares that the population of the main village of Golwhad, to which the outbreak was confined, is 850, not 200, as stated in the Bombay Gazette. The deaths on the 4th, 5th, and 6th June were respectively 7, 8, and 10 (total 25), not 57, 23, and 20 (total 100), as stated in the same article. It was not the case, more-over, according to the same officer, that "the few survivors, and every poor wretch that could move, have fled to the adjacent hills. Except some Machis and Mangellas, who ran away on the 5th, and returned on the 7th, and the Dhers, who ran away on the 9th and returned on the 11th, no one left the village on account of the cholera. The account (he adds) given in your article of the 9th instant of the panic, and of people leaving dead bodies in the houses and in the open, is denied by the villagers, and is not borne out by the inquiry on the spot into this and other information imparted to you." He admits however that 50 deaths had occurred in Golwhad during the fortnight; and even this number out of a total of 850 shows what havor the disease had made in so short a time. The editor of the Gazette in reply expresses his pleasure at the milder version now given, and is willing to accept the results of the collector's inquiries. At the same time he asserts that "we received our information from people who were on the spot at the actual time of the outbreak! It is no breach of confidence to say that the heads of the B. B. and C. I. Railway received by telegraph almost precisely the same information as we did!"

THE two companies of the 67th Foot, who formed the Bhamo escort sent to meet the Grosvenor Mission, seem to have had their share of hardships on the march beyond Burmah to Manwain. "After leaving Tsee-Kan"—writes one of them to a Bombay paper—"we had to traverse the wildest country imaginable. Nothing but hills and rocks, without the semblance of a road or even pathway; nothing but the beds of nullahs, along which the escort slowly wended, now ankle deep in sand or water, then climbing huge boulders of rock, to get over any one of which would be regarded as a feat in every-day life, anon taking leaps across deep and treacherous-looking chasms, &c., every inch of the road being up hills of which each one as it appeared was welcomed as the last, only to find a still worse and more difficult-looking one in front. In fact, but for the courses of the mountain streams up whose channels we proceeded, it would have taken weeks to make the same headway that we accomplished in a few days." On the return journey the marching was equally arduous, and "to make matters worse, provisions ran short, the two last days' march of twenty-three miles (over such ground, too!) being compressed into one, and performed on a biscuit or a half and a dram of rum per man. In justice it must be said that the escort faced their trying task and bore their difficulties and hardships without a murmur, as men and British soldiers alone know how to do." Another correspondent declares that the commissariat arrangements "were as bad as they could possibly have been. The food was of the very worst kind, and badly cooked, and while one day breakfast was served at seven and dinner at eight, the following day breakfast would be at one, no dinner that day, and the next meal would not be served up until eight and sometimes twelve o'clock the next day.'

WITH regard to the sickly state of the 25th Foot at Faizabad, owing mainly to the number of mere boys who landed with the regiment last November, the Pioneer tells a suggestive story:—"A fine old Sikh was standing by an officer watching a certain British regiment marching into Rawal Pindi. He first commented on the youth of the men, then on the loose and straggling way they marched, and on seeing a string of some seventy doolies, each with its occupant bringing up the rear, he turned round and exclaimed, "Sahib, these were not the men who beat us at Guzerat and Chillianwallah."

WE hear that Major-General Lord Mark Kerr, C.B., will continue in command of a Bombay division until next year, on promotion.

THE Police Report for the Central Provinces describes a "coining" case, which shows how little native Indian swindlers have to learn in that respect from Western teachers. An old man had for three years been living at Warora a lonely life, and seemed wrapped up in his trade, which was that of a silversmith. He was said to work hard, and was always ready to purchase Nagpur rupees from any one who wanted to change them. But he always seemed to have a store of them by him, and to be himself ready to put them in circulation. At last a neighbour got hold of one of his rupees, intending to make an ornament of it. On beating it out he found the coin to be a mere shell, out of which lead dropped, leaving the hollow case of silver. The police were told of this, and suspicion fell on the old man, for others of his Nagpur rupees had been found to have lead inside. A detective, sent to make friends with him, went in and out of the old man's house at all times, and at last caught him at his work. The detective went back and told the chief constable, who had sent him. The latter resolved to bide his time, and make no arrest without ample evidence. For six months he waited and waited, and never got a chance of catching the old man at his work. At last, however, his opportunity came. He pounced one day upon the coiner, and arrested him before the villagers in the act of filling his rupees with lead. His method of debasing the coin was very simple. He drilled a small hole in the rim of the rupee, and hollowed it out with a sharpcutting steel drill until it was about half the original weight. He then filled it with a composition of lead and tin, making it up to its original weight, and blocking up the hole so that it was scarcely perceptible. The filings which came out of the hollow rupee he then melted up and made into ornaments, "so that his income was cent. per cent on every rupee on which he operated, as he made a rupee on every rupee, gaining eight annas on the exchange of the rupee, and eight annas' worth of silver into the bargain. He was thus on the way to make a handsome fortune, when cruel circumstances cut short his career.

It appears from a Bombay paper that the Indian Foreign-Office is loth to part with the control of the native States of Tehri, Dhattiah, Khangadanu, and one or two more now attached to the Political Agency for Bundelkand, which the North-West Government would like to have transferred to it as part of the Jhansi Commissionership. These small native States are far removed from Naugong, Dr. Stratton's headquarters, while they lie within the natural circle of the Jhansi division, and could be better supervised from that station. "Their transfer would tend to the smoother administration of our own districts of Jalaun and Jhansi by securing a ready exchange in the surrender of dacoits, attendance of witnesses, and many other matters always occurring between conterminous territories under different rule."

ACCORDING to a Times telegram of July 30 from Calcutta, the latest Khelat news reports the complete success of Colonel Sandeman's Mission. The Khan and Chief's have been reconciled, and the confiscated estates are to be restored. The ancient privileges are confirmed, and a general peace is proclaimed. The assembly at Mastang is broken up and the Chiefs have gone home. Colonel Sandeman accompanied the Khan to Khelat. Meanwhile the Bolan Pass remains open for traders, and the Sind frontier is free from aggression.

THE Afridis (says the same informant) are again active. They attacked a watering party escorted by two troopers and Sepoys. One Sepoy was killed, and another wounded. The troopers and water-carriers fled. Hearing firing, the troops in the front turned out, but the Afridis effected their retreat to the hills.

WE learn by telegram that the Yarkand Envoy reached Sanju, north of the Karakoram Pass, on June 5. Captain Molloy, British Commissioner at Ladakh, accompanies him to

THE Times correspondent also telegraphs the following items: -The Simla Sanitation scheme is again suspended, and it is reported that Lord Lytton is seriously considering the propriety of removing the Government summer quarters to Raneekhet, in Kumaon. Sir J. Strachey has strongly advised the establishment at Raneekhet of a purely European colony without native labourers. Sir G. Couper has assumed charge of the North-West Provinces and Mr. Inglis assumes that of Oudh to-morrow, Sir J. Strachey leaves Bombay to-morrow. rate of exchange continued to rise last week, and there are good grounds now for hoping that the worst is past, and that matters will steadily improve. The Hill Stations seem likely to lose the character of sanitaria. Last year cholera raged at Simla, and some weeks ago it appeared dangerously near Darjiling. Now it has broken out at Marri apparently, in a violent form, and the troops stationed there have been moved into camp. The special medical establishment for Bardwan fever has been broken up. This marks the close of the terrible epidemic which for some years back ravaged Bardwan and the adjoining districts, often depopulating whole villages. The relief measures during the last five years cost £53,000. It is reported that the Indian High Courts intend to protest against the Viceroy's censure of the Allahabad High Court for the opinion it expressed on the Agra servant-beating case mentioned last week.

RUMOURS have been lately rife in India regarding the Viceroy's bad health, and it was even whispered that his Lordship would have to resign before the next hot season. The Pioneer now authoritatively contradicts these reports, and says that Lord Lytton only suffers from indigestion, which does not interfere with his work.

"A READER of Allen's Indian Mail" might well feel astonished at a paragraph inserted in our last number by a too zealous assistant, sitting for the moment in the editorial chair. In the hurry of the moment and the excess of his zeal he confounded the late Lieut. Colonel Tudor Boddam, who died at the age of 72, with his son, who entered the Army in 1841, and became full Colonel in 1872. The mistake is the more surprising, as the deceased officer was thus made out to have obtained his first commission when he was 87 or 88 years old! And that commission, moreover, was an ensign's, whereas the deceased officer, as having belonged to the Madras Cavalry, would have begun the world as a cornet.

THE Colonel E. T. Boddam, whose services were quoted by mistake for his father's, retired from the Madras Staff Corps in agricultural officer of the Mysor Commission. As honorary secretary of the Mysor Agri-Horticultural Society, he introduced numberless new varieties of plants and seeds. to a Bangalor paper, "the Lal Bagh owes much of its present improvements to his advice and suggestions to successive superintendents of the garden, and he had also the looking after of the Government House grounds, Cubbon Park, and the Rajah's palace grounds, all of which testify to his taste and skill."

The dates of departure may be considered definite; but those of arrival will of course depend on the circumstances of each voyage.

In a letter to the Times "Anglo-Indian" asks in what sense Sir Salar Jung, the Minister of an independent native prince in alliance with the Queen, can be styled a loyal subject of her Majesty. We should have thought that no Anglo-Indian who had read Indian history, or even the newspapers of his own time, would have asked a question which assumes the independence of a sovereign who, but for his youth and delicate health, would have had to present himself at the Bombay Darbar, and whose Chief Minister has just presented his nazar to the Queen "in token of allegiance." The Sanad which Lord Canning forwarded to the last Nizam assured him and his heirs, lineal or adopted, the succession to the throne of Haidarabad, so long as they remained "loyal to their engagements" with the Government of India. These engagements bind him to maintain a subsidiary force ready at any time to co-operate with our troops, to make no treaties and have nothing whatever to do with any foreign Power, and to admit no Europeans into his service without the consent of the British Government. The Nizam, in short, is a mere feudatory of the British Empire; the position to which he was finally reduced by Lord Wellesley in the first years of this century; and the mere right to govern his own subjects counts for nothing against his political vassalage.

WE understand that Professor Monier Williams is likely to visit the South of India next October. In his tour last winter he was not able to reach Madras.

WE regret to see that the Indian exchange is again lower, and silver, which was 51d. two or three days ago, cannot now be sold at 501d.

WE give elsewhere the first part of a full and interesting memoir of Lord Napier of Magdala, reprinted from the Times of India.

THE services of the Rev. George Small, M.A., who for ten years was an Agent of the Baptist Missionary Society at Benares and Calcutta, and is conversant with Sanskrit, Hindi, June last. For some years past he had served with credit as Bengali, and Hindustani, have been accepted by the Directors of the Asiatic Strangers' Home; and he has entered on his duties as Scripture Reader and Missionary to the Asiatics in England.

THE BANDORA INFANTICIDE CASE.—Writing on this case, the Indian Spectator says:—"Mr. Coghlan, the presiding Judge, acquitted Manekbai of all participation in the murder, and adjudged the other prisoners guilty, to whom he awarded the extreme penalty of the law, subject, however, to the confirmation of the Bombay High Court. It is probable that the capital punishment will be commuted, at least in the case of Dinbai, to transportation for life, when the Tanna Judge's finding comes to be revised by the High when the Tanna Judge's finding comes to be revised by the High Court. But the whole case is, therefore, not the less painful. Dinbai has nine children. Her husband being dead these two years, they have no one to look after them. They are now placed beyond the pale of society, and are so many pariahs. The world offers no sympathy in their great bereavement; it will, of course, heap its virtuous indignation on the guilty as well as the innocent. And so the poor young people will enter the world without a friend or a protector—the objects of scorn and loathing of an unfeeling world. And what if they should go astray and take to vice. entreat our Parsee friends to extend a helping hand to the forlorn family, and not to visit the sins of the parent on the unoffending children."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, August 1, 1876.

THE LATE SIR JOHN WILLIAM KAYE.

THOUGH it was generally known that the illness which necessitated the retirement of Sir John Kaye from the India Office in the autumn of 1874, had left him so worn and emaciated as to preclude the hope of ultimate recovery, yet it was with feelings of no common regret that his numerous friends received the announcement of his decease, as they called to mind the tall spare gentleman of dignified mien, dressed with a negligence which, while in no way void of refinement, betokened a perfect disregard of the conventionalism of society, who for so many years with a peculiar gait toiled up to his room in Downing-street, amidst the many friendly greetings with which the arrival of the genial chief of the Political and Secret Department was invariably welcomed.

Born on June 3, 1814, of wealthy parents, his father, as well as his grandfather before him, having held the lucrative post of solicitor to the Bank of England, Kaye was originally intended for a political career, and was accordingly sent to Eton as a preparatory step. He had been there, however, but a short time, when his father met with reverses which necessitated a change of plan as regarded his son, who was thereupon sent to a large private school at Salisbury, kept by Dr. Radcliffe. Even at this early period he manifested a taste for literature, and contributed frequent articles on every variety of subject to a periodical entitled, " Hora Sarisburienses," conducted by members of the school. As young Kaye had to seek his own fortune, a military career was determined upon, and in January, 1831, he went to Addiscombe as a Cadet. After remaining the usual time he passed out in the Artillery, and arrived in India in 1833. He had not been long in the country ere he became a regular contributor to the Calcutta Literary Gazette; but during the rains of 1834 he had no less than three attacks of fever, which rendered necessary a return to England. Arriving in London towards the end of that year he turned his attention to works of fiction, and produced some novels, which met with a most brilliant reception, and caused their youthful author, himself barely of age, to become for a season the lion of the literary On his return to India, finding the profession of arms not altogether to his taste, he resigned the service, and devoting himself entirely to literature, produced in rapid succession, "Jerningham, or the Inconsistent Man;" "Doveton, or the Man of Many Impulses; "Peregrine Pulteney," "Long Engagements; a tale of the Afghan War," &c., &c. During his stay in India, in addition to being editor of the Bengal Hurkaru, he founded and conducted for a long while almost single-handed the Calcutta Review, which continues to the present day the leading magazine in the East. Ill-health now drove him to England, where he devoted himself to the "History of the War in Afghanistan," published in 1851, a work which at once established his reputation as a historian. It was followed by a "History of the Administration of the East India Company;" a "Selection, with Notes, from the Papers of the late Mr. St. George Tucker;" a "Life of the late Lord Metcalfe;" a "Life of Sir John Malcolm;" "History of Christianity in India," &c., &c.

At this period an important change occurred in Mr. Kayes career. Struck by the ability displayed in his account of the Afghan War, the Court of Directors of the East India Company offered him an appointment in their Home Service, which he accepted, and in 1856 we find him enrolled as an Assistant in the Examiner's office, under the late John Stuart Mill. But a few months had elapsed when the terrible Mutiny of 1857-58 broke out, followed by the transfer of the possessions in India from the administration of the East India Company to the direct control of the Crown. This involved a change in the internal régime of the East India House, and Mr. Mill having elected to retire, Mr. Kaye was appointed to succeed him, under the new title of Secretary in the Political and Secret Department. Stirring times were those during the early part of his incumbency; the throes of rebellion had left the country disorganised and unsettled, allies had to be rewarded, foes to be punished, confidence to be restored, and the majesty of the law vindicated. Right nobly did Kaye set himself to the task allotted to him. Intimately acquainted with the feelings of the Natives, for whom he had the deepest sympathy, and possessing a wide acquaintance amongst the officers of Government, he was, as it were, a connecting link between the governing classes and the governed, while his readiness of pen and command of language enabled him to place matters before the authorities in such a way as to arrest attention to his views. During this time he was not unmindful of the claims of literature, and in addition to being editor of the Homeward Mail, contributed many articles to the Cornhill Magazine and Good Words, some of which were reprinted, under the title of "Essays of an Optimist" and "Lives of Indian Officers," both of which are most enjoyable no less than instructive works; but all this was, as it were, literary relaxation on his part, while he was devoting all his energies to the "History of the Sepoy War," of which the third volume was produced shortly before his death. The labour bestowed on this valuable work was enormous, and it is much to be regretted that one so peculiarly qualified should not have been spared to complete his task. In 1871 he was created a Knight Commander of the Star of India. Much as he appreciated this recognition of his services, he was, perhaps, more proud of his election, without application on his part, and without the usual ballot, to be a Fellow of the Royal Society. A similar compliment, too, was paid him by the Athenæum, in consideration of his eminent literary services. His death occurred on July 24, 1876.

Generous and high minded, ever ready to assist with his advice and his purse, but never sacrificing his conscience at the altar of friendship; possessing a power of endearing himself to all around him which disarmed even those opposed to him dignified, genial, hospitable, brilliant in conversation, and possessing an inexhaustible fund of anecdote, he will long be remembered as the beau ideal of a fine old English gentleman.

Sir John leaves a widow (the daughter of Thomas Puckle, Esq., Chairman of Quarter Sessions for the County of Surrey) and a family of two sons and two daughters, one of whom is married to F. Whitmore Smith, Esq., of the India-office.

EXPORT OF COTTON.—During the week ending 10th June, 2,140 bales of cotton were despatched to Bombay from the Central Provinces and Berar. The total for the season now amounts to 234,239 bales, which is 77,060 bales less than last year, and is 9,939 bales less than in 1872-73, and 11,858 bales less than in 1870-71.—Indian Stateman.

HAZARISTÁN.—II.

The operations of Lord Napier in Abyssinia show what can be done in surmounting physical difficulties—but then Lord Napier was ab-solutely unopposed. Had Theodore been the unopposed master of the comutry, and also an enterprising leader, the result might have been otherwise. At any rate the routes being such as described, and the country such as will be hereafter seen, it may be accepted as a certainty that no European army could penetrate into Afghanistan by any route east of Herat—if the Hazaristan were occupied by a contingent of troops officered by Linglishmen.

Thus one object of a lease such as is advocated would be attained in the absolute security of the whole frontier of Afghanistan east of Herat. It would be in safe hands, and no treachery, cowardice, or supineness would peril the less of this magnificent, and impregnable line of mountain barrier. Thus the line of operations against Herat would be limited to those through Persia and Merv and the possession of the line of the Oxus above Charjoe, and of Afghan Turbestan would be evidently of no account to Russia as no line of Turkestan, would be evidently of no account to Russia, as no line of communications could be maintained across the front of the Hazaristan. iBut occupation of the Hazaristan would equally render unavailable to an enemy the line of the Moorjhat river and its feeder, the Khushk, which is the usual route from Merv to Herat. No such line could be used in the face of such a force as is supposed to be holding the Hazaristan, because the last six marches up the Khuskh valley through the district of Badkhez traverse the very difficult country of the Jemokidis, on the left flank of Hazaristan, and cross the continuation of the Safed Koh-(the central branch, as before mentioned, of the three into which the Koh Baba divides between longitude 66° and 67°) called at that point the Koh Kytoo.

Thus an army moving against Afghanistan would be compelled to limit itself to that one route which follows the Heri river, and all converging lines of operations—whether from the Oxus by Merv or from the Caspian by the Etrek river or from Astrabad through Khorassan—would have eventually to fall into that one road.

It will be no small gain thus to limit our anxieties to one single line of operations, that by Herat and Candahar (for the occupation of Hazaristan with a contingent, equally renders impracticable to an enemy any attempt to cross that tract direct between Herat and Cabul); while a contingent such as we contemplate will render the reccupation of Herat and the possession of that line a much more arduous affair for a hostile army, than if there were only the ordinary Afghan troops to reckon with. It is probable that, however well organised such a movement, in whatever strength, and with whatever celerity made, such a contingent co-operating with the Afghan troops could, at any rate, hamper the enemy's movements so as to prevent the occupation of Herat till succour arrived from Hindostan. Such a contingent would render most improbable the success of any sudden move made by Persia against Herat, or by Abdul Ruhman, or any other pretender to the throne of Afghanistan, against Herat or Cabul, because, as before, it would render such movement only possible by one route, that of the Heri river, and it would be at hand to prevent the surrender of Herat by treachery or its capture by force.

So much for the Hindu Kush and the routes crossing it. It only remains to notice Afghan Turkestan in front of Hazaristan, and Herat on the left flank of that tract, and then we can proceed with the description of the Hazaristan itself.

The Afghan Government of Turkestan comprises a strip of country about 350 miles in length, and of an average breadth of from 50 to 75 miles—contained between the Oxus and the Tirbund branch of the range of Hindu Kush. It is bounded on the north by Bokhara the Oxus, between the ferries of Hazrat Imam and Khoja Saleh, serving as the boundary line. On the east the river Kokcha, a -feeder of the Oxus, separates it from Badakhshan. On the west and north-west it is bounded by the river Moorghab and the Turkoman desert, and on the south by the Hazaristan.

This tract comprises Balkb, the actual seat of Government, which, with Khulm Muzar and Akcheh, is held and administered by Afghan officials, and the dependent Uzbeg Khanates or governments of Kunduz on the east, and Andkho Shibberghan Sirpool and Maimunna on the west. Badakhshan has been excluded as, though a feudatory of the Ameer of Cabul, the relations of the Meer of Badakhshan with the Governor of Turkestan are of a very different nature to those of the Uzbeg Chiefs before mentioned—who are entirely subordinate to that Governor.

The revenue of Afghan Turkestan amounts to about £400,000, and the population to nearly a million souls, of whom the greater portion are Tajiks, being the cultivators of the soil—and the rest are Uzbegs, who are the superior class owning the land and rendering military service for their holdings. The whole country, with the exception of Sirpool and Maimunna is plain, and for the most part well irrigated by streams from the Hazaristan, and consequently well cultivated and very productive. The two States excepted, though cultivated and very productive. The two States excepted, though mountainous, abound in pleasant and fertile valleys. It was only between 1850 and 1860 that the Afghans acquired this province, on which, however, their grasp is now pretty firm. The Uzbeg Chief of Maimunna was recently in rebellion, but has just been subdued, and with him have fallen the last hopes of resistance by the Uzbegs to the Afghan domination. The tract, however, is one which affords no strength to the Afghan Kingdom in case of invasion from mithout.

It would, on the contrary, fall at once into the hands of the enemy, and the population would favour his designs. It would then be a very formidable base for operations against Cabul direct through the Hazaristan were such operations uninterrupted, save by the desertory efforts of the Afghans themselves. If, however, the Hazaristan were in safe hands, the strategical points strengthened and secured, the internal communications developed and improved, and the lines of operation held by Afghan troops, backed by a well-organised contingent under British officers—then such a plan of campaign would have to be given up by the strongest enemy, and Afghan Turkestan being strategically useless would probably in such case not be occupied.

Herat is a valley, thirty miles long, and of about half that breadth, traversed by the Heri river, from which it is throughout irrigated by means of canals. The town is north of the river, and near the northern side of the valley. It contains about 50,000 inhabitants, and is surrounded with fortifications of sufficient strength to s and a long siege by an eastern army. It staud just in the mountain gap where the Safed Koh branch of the Hiudu Kush trends away north, and the Siah Koh branch turns abruptly south and dies away, while the Persian Caucasus to the west does not immediately spring up from the plain, so the route ascending the valley of the Heri river from the west can turn south to Candahar by a perfectly easy and good military road. Herat has therefore become the necessary key to Afghanistan and India, without possessing which invaders must traverse either the deserts to the south-west or the mountain chains to the north-east of that town. Hence, it is that Herat has had to stand more sieges than any other city in Central Asia. It has oftener been destroyed than any other (no less than seven times.) and has risen again from its ruins every time with an unparalleled energy, the risen again from its runs every time with an unparalleled energy, the consequence of its pre-eminently favourable position. The valley is of extraordinary fertility. It has supported during the numerous sieges very large bodies of men for many months together and is indeed the granary of that part of Ceutral Asia. The present revenues are about £70,000 per annum; but will rise, as well as the population of the town, much higher after some years' peace. The ten months' siege and the storming of 1863 were hardly over when the domestic struggles in Afghanistan began, which lasted up to 1868, and, though Herat was not again actually besieged, this 1868, and, though Herat was not again actually besieged, this state of war must have greatly retarded her recovery after the events of 1863.

Evidently, then, Herat is of the last importance in the event of struggle in Central Asia. Evidently it is the point of which an European Power must possess itself as a place of concentration, and as its main magazine and depot. To the plan of garrisoning the town of Herat ourselves or even of leasing and occupying the district there are many grave objections—one of which is that it could never be done with the good will of the Afghans. These objections do not apply in the case of the Hazaristan. We could probably lease and administer the Hazaristan with the very good will of the Afghansthe population being an alien one, which they cannot manage—and with the good will of the population, who will be relieved of the tyranay of their present masters. The Ameer would be satisfied, because for the first time he would get an assured revenue from the country, because subjects who are now a source of weakness through their hostility would thus become a source of strength, and because 6,000 first-rate troops, equal to at least 30,000 men of the class of his present forces, would be added to his army free of expense, thus rendering him perfectly secure against rebellion, treachery, and open attack by any Asiatic foe whatever. He now admits himself our feudatory, and the Afghans understand that they are in our power, so the more evident demonstration of this would not arouse any one's suspicious-Oriental pride would be gratified in the fact that the British held the Hazaristan, like any other tenant of a feoff, for military service, and rendered the military service while at the same time surrendering the revenues of the feoff. Finally, our object would be served in the great security thus afforded to Herat and the Afghan frontier, and in thus obviating all the domestic risks and political disadvantages entailed by the bare possibility of Russian domination in or even collision with Afghanistan; and this method of obtaining our object would be free from the military and financial strain which are the gravest of the objections above referred to as attaching to a military occupation.

The tract of country known as the Hazaristan may be described as extending east and west from the Koushan pass over the Hindu-Kush range (one of those on the Ghorbund route before mentioned) to Marchah on the Turkoman frontier, and north and south from Sispool, one of the Uzbeg Khanates before described as subordinate to the Afghan Government of Turkestan, to the neighbourhood of Girrishk, between Candahar and Herat. It is divided between two kindred races, descendants of military settlers left by the Tartar hordes that swept over Central Asia under Chenghiz Khan and his descendants. These are the Hazarehs, inhabiting the eastern portion of the Hazaristan, and the Eimaks located in the west. The latter are generally of the Sunni persuasion, but include a section of Shiahs; the former are Shiah Mohammedans, though comprising a Sunni tribe. The two branches separated in the time of Nadir Shah, or early in the eighteenth century. The country occupied by the Hazarchs waries from 5,000 to 12,000 feet in height; it is cold, rugged and barren, but supports innumerable flocks and berds, and abounds in mineral wealth.

Digitized by GOGIC

The Eimaka inhabit a more hospitable ragion, interspersed it is true, with lofty ranges, but abounding in pleasant valleys and pastures. Both Eimaks and Hazarehs have lost their original language and adopted that of the aborigines of the hills in which they are settled

(the Pajiks) -an aucient dialect of the Persian.

The original divisions of the Eimâks (who are known as the Four Eimâks?) are as follows; Taimunnees, Hazarehs, Soorees, Taimurees. Of these the two last may be excluded from consideration in an account of the Hazaristan. The Taimurees, who can muster some 4,000 horsemen, are now entirely in Persia, inhabiting settlements on both sides of the Herat-Meshid road. They were carried off bodily about 1835 by the Persian Governor of Khorassan, and located there to hold in clock the Turkomans. To them have been subsequently added, in 1857 some thousand also of the Hazareh Eimâks, who now inhabit Kareez and Shahr-Nao, and the debatable ground between these and the Herat border. The existence of the Soorees as tribe has been destroyed by the Taimunnees, who have occupied their territories, and among whom they now live in scattered families to the number of some 5,000, or about 25,000 souls in all.

The four Eimaks there are now reckoned as follows: (1). Paimuns; (2), Hazareh Ferozekohi; (3), Hazareh Zeidnab; (4). Hazareh Jamsheii Nos. 2 and 4 being originally sections of No. 3—adopted thereinto from amongst its Persian neighbours. The Ferozekohis are the descendants of a number of broken Persian tribes transported into these mountains by Timoor Lang, after a desperate re sistance, from the neighbourhood of Ferozekoh in Magendran. The Jamshedis are descendants of a tribe from Seistan, and it is not known how they came into the Hazaristan. The total Eimâk population in the Hazaristan amounts to between 350,000 and 600,000 souls, inhabiting a country 150 miles in length by an average breadth of nearly the rame. They are all nominally subject to Herat, but pay little revenue (and that in kind), and render only occasional military service. Their country contains the upper courses of the Murghab. Farah, Harut, and Khash rivers, and of a great feeder of the Helmand, and is traversed also by the Heri river. It is thus amply supplied with water, and only requires settled government and the construction of roads and canals, to develop enormously in population and production. The administration of British officers would certainly produce a large influx of the neighbouring industrial population. The Tajik cultivators would flock into the Hazaristan from all the districts around. The extent of arable s il is large, and great facilities exist for irrigation. In the sheltered valleys orchards of all kinds of fruit trees abound. The mineral riches of the country are stated to be great, and there is no doubt that copper, lead, iron, and su'phur, are plentiful in many localities. The Eimaks are essentially nound and pastoral. The chief places mentioned are merely camps. They live principally in tents, encamping in winter in the valleys and in summer on the table lands of the mountain ranges. They are ignorant, hospitable, and brave, and ardent followers of the chase. Their principal trade is with Herat, and consists in woollen and camel-hair fabrics and clarified butter, which are bartered for necessaries. They are, as are the Hazarehs, intensely hostile to the Afghans, but disunion, as in the case of those kindred tribes, prevents their being able to resist them.

The following notices give all the information that at present exists regarding the kin ak tribes.

The Taimum sinhabit the Siahbund, which is the district comprised between the Sam Koh range upon the north, the upper course of the Farah river on the west, the chain of hills stretching from Farah towards Gurishk on the south, and, on the east, a great feeder of the Helmund, calle tim the official map the river of Killa Mossa. This is a tract comparatively level and fairly fertile. It is watered by feeders of the Farah Kash and Killa Mossa rivers. The extensive plains, interspersed among the hills which intersect the tracts, afford asture to vast herds of cattle, horses and camels, and might easily be cultivated with the aid of irrigation from the rivers. The principal districts are: - ()n the north, Jevej, chief place Shehrek; on the cast, Doria Dura, chief place Zamau and Sungan; on the west, Paideb, chief place Paideh and Chardeh; on the south, Paivereh, chief place Paivereh, Sakhir, and Zerni (the ancient Ghor). The Sorees, before mentioned as a broken Eimâk tribe, are principally located in and west of the districts of Paideh, about the head waters of the Farah river. Some of them also reside in Zerni. The total populatio of these districts, including Soorees, is from 120,000 to 150,000 couls, and they can turn out, by a levée en masse, some 4 000 horsenen and 10,000 footmen. The Taimunnee country is traversed by two rouges from Herat to Candahar, the northern by Taideh and Zerni, the southern by Sakhir and Paivereh. On both routes there is ample water forage and fuel, and the country can supply camels and horses in large numbers for carriage, and horned cattle and sheep for the commissauat. Other supplies are not procurable, as the production of grain is only sufficient for the consumption of the natives. These routes are little used, both as being insecure and as crossing a more rugged country than the regular route by Farrah and Gurrishk, which is easy, though circuitous. The teste pays a small tribute in kind to the Government of Herat, and mariers military service in case of War.

North of the Taimunnees, in the upper portion of the valley of the Heri river, between the Siah Koh and Sufed Koh ranges, and among the valleys which are traversed by the feeders of the Moorghal, live the Ferozhobi section of Mazireh Eimaks. Their southern boundary is the Siahkeh, on the north-the Tirbund range, on the east the country of the Mongol and Deb Jangi Hazarehs, on the west the district of Herat and that of the Seiduab Hazareh Eimaks.

The principal districts are:—On the north, Kucheh, chief places, Derzi, Ghusneh; east, Gurjistan, chief place, Kohat; west, Kadis; chief place, Mozar; south, Chekcheran, chief place, Badgah Dowlutyoo. This tribe has also settlements in valleys of the northern water-shed of the Tirbund range, Khoja Kundoo, Shakh and others.

This tribe is smaller than that of the Taimunnees, the population being under 100,000 souls, but they are renowned for their courage, and can turn out on an emergency some 4,000 horsemen and as many foot. In 1814 the Firozkohis inflicted a signal reverse upon a Persian army that advanced against the districts of Marchah and Punjdeh, on the Morgbab river. (Those districts were then occupied by this tribe, but were subsequently wrested from them by the Zeidnat, and from them again by the Turkomans.) They have also held their own against successive Governors of Herat, to which Government they still render but a nominal allegiance.

THE CAREER OF LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.—I. (From the Times of India, 10th April, 1876.)

The 10th of April, 1876, witnessed an event of historical interest— the final departure of Lord Napier of Magdala from the country which he has so faithfully and zealously served, and his retirement from active connection with the armies of India, of which he has been so brilliant an ornament. His biography, mixed up as it is with the history of India for the past half century, cannot here be attempted, but the occasion tempts us to recall the outlines of a glorious and successful career, which has been equally distinguished by professional engineering skill, by personal gallantry, by successful strategy, as well as by high and wise statesmanship, and by private personal virtues which have gained as universally the love, as his public qualities have gained the esteem of his fellowmen of all races, classes, and professions. It is now nearly forty-eight years since Robert Napier joined his corps at Delhi in 1828. Gifted with great natural abilities, a keen love of literature, and with a vivid appreciation of all that is beautiful or picturesque, Napier found much in the still surviving splendour of the Moghul capital to awake his interest and excite his imagina-tion. As he himself, moreover, recently said, from his boyhood he made it the rule of his life, as much from public duty as from personal sympathy, to strive that every native, of whatever class, he met, should leave him with a friendly impression. From his earliest youth, therefore, he entered with great sympathy into the feelings of the natives around him, and sought and enjoyed all that was worthy and interesting in their society. To the knowledge of native history and of native life, and the insight into native character which the subaltern thus gained, and which he maintained by sedulously cultivated intercourse with natives of rank and position and worth wherever he met them in later life, the soldier and the statesman of after years owed much of his success. Many, too; are the warm friends whom he leaves in all classes of the native community, some of whom date their acquaintance with him even from that early period. Here, too, as a subaltern of Engineers he began many of the professional friendships of his life. The memories of many of the professional friendships of his life. his early introduction to native society, and of the pleasant days of early regimental employment, have always had a special charm for Lord Napier. Of his corps he was especially proud, and he always gloried in being a Bengal Sapper; and still cherishes, and always will cherish, the reputation of his corps with the soldierly love which every Engineer, Royal or Indian, young or old, feels for it. Indefatigable, too, at work, he was soon conspicuous for the devo-tion to his duty which has been the characteristic of his life; and this early brought him to notice, and led to his being selected for the then comparatively new field of Indian irrigation. Placed on the Great Eastern Jumna Canal, he became the pupil and the friend of Proby Cautley, who was soon to develop a new and brilliant school of engineering. While serving his apprenticeship here, he was brought closely in contact with the agricultural community, and learned still more fully to sympathise with and love the people of India, and conceived the carnest desire which never left him, of aiding in the material improvement of their condition. After some years had passed in this congenial work, Robert Napier returned to Europe, re-visited Belgium and many other localities on the Continent where much of his education had been carried on, and renewed the associations of home. On returning to India he was selected to visit Darjeeling, with a view of opening out a sanitarium. Here he was introduced to the greatest beauties of nature, and some of the gravest difficulties of practical engineering. Lying close beneath the shadow of "cloud-capped" Kunchunjunga, the steep and rugged slopes of the Eastern Himalaya, cut into gorges by rapid mountain streams, are clothed with the densest vegetation. Primaval forests, containing an undergrowth of all but impenetrable cane-jungle, within which the rays of the sun barely made their way, covered what is now the site of one of our most favourite sanitaria and of the most successful tea-plantations, and rendered difficult the progress of Napier through the country and, much more, the carrying on of engineering operations. Nevertheless, all difficulties gave way rapidly before the energy of the now experienced and skilful engineer; and though beset with many obstacles, by desertion among his labourers, who were terrified at the gloomy darkness of the jungle and the sickness amongst their comrades, important results were soon secured. Roads were opened, sites cleared, and a foundation laid for the settlement, which the fostering care of his first Superintendent, Dr. A. Campbell, soon made successful. It early became the resort of invalids from Calcutta and its neighbourhood, and is still daily increasing in importance and in prosperity.

Towards the close of 1840 affairs on our North-West frontier called for the presence of all available officers; and the drain on the exchequer caused by the Afghan War necessitated immediate retrenchment in all non-military works. Notwithstanding the unanimous petition of the Darjeeling committee, earnestly entreating that Lieutenant Napier might be permitted to remain to complete the works in hand, he was sent to Kurnal, the great frontier station of the day. In 1843 the services of Captain Napier were brought prominently before Government. He had been indefatigable in his exertions, and successful beyond hope under the difficulties which beset him in the construction of the Umballa cantonment; his arrangements showed deep thought and consideration of the subject in all its bearings; and, as stated by Abbott, "the 9th Foot suffered less from exposure, and had a less proportion of sick at Umballa in the new shelter than any one of the regiments had in the hills." The great question which then filled the minds of all military men in India was, whether the Sikhs, mustering in thousands on the right bank, would venture to cross the Sutlej. Everywhere troops were in motion, the head-quarters of the army passed through Umballa, and the Adjutant-General of the day warned the engineer that at any moment his services might be required on the frontier. There were no wires in those days; but sowars gallopped from post to post, and the words, "The Sikhs have crossed," passed from soldier to soldier, and everywhere there was mustering in hot haste, and batteries, regiments, detachments, and individuals all hastened on to the rendezvous. An artist would have delighted to depict on canvas the scenes presented on many of those fields—such, for example, as that which met the eye of Napier on his first arrival at Moodkee and his initiation to service, when he found himself sitting on his saddle, his tired horse tied under a tree, close by the groups of generals, staff, and politicians, conspicuous amongst whom stood Broadfoot, the principal character of the scene, reading out the Sikh correspondence of the day, in which they spoke with contempt of the army which had returned from Afghanistan, declared their equality man for man with the British across the river, and breathed defiance to the hated Firinghee. At Moodkee and Ferozeshah Napier, as chief engineer, was himself wounded, and had two horses killed under him. Sobraon, however, found him again in the saddle as brigade major of engineers, in which capacity he remained until after the capture of Lahore. In May, 1846, Major Napier, as chief engineer, directed the progress through the mountains of the siege train which accompanied Sir H. Wheeler's expedition for the reduction of the hill fort of Kote Kangra; on its arrival before that stronghold the garrison surrendered. This was no small achievement—the crossing of the rapid Beas with but little means, the transporting of the material over hills and torrents, one of which in one march alone had to be crossed twenty-four times; and when one march aione had to be crossed twenty-four times; and when time was precious, each rock and boulder was an impediment. Then the rise of the Gaj river (as natives call it, the "murderous" Gaj), which necessitated the halt of a day, till, on the ninth day, Kangra (the maiden fortress of the Punjab), commanded from adjacent heights, surrendered at discretion. Wheeler himself claimed but little share in the achievement, but expressed his gratitude to Napier and those officers and men of the Sappers to whose unremitting labours he owed the success of the undertaking. It was from this period that his intimacy with Henry Lawrence first commenced. The two were kindred spirits, actuated by the fear of God, and aspiring to like ends—the good of their fellow creatures and the discharge of their duty to the State. This period also marked the commencement of his independent engineering career under the Lahore Resident. His works in the Punjab as an engineer will go down to posterity, testifying to that comprehensiveness of design which grasped the requirements of a great province, and sketched out schemes of irrigation and communication proportionate to the vastness of the conception. There, as throughout his career, minds of smaller capacity than those of Dalhousie and Lawrence shrank from the very consideration of ideas which embraced the grandest project ever undertaken in the Punjab—the construction of a canal 250 miles long, which, starting from the debouchement of the Ravee into the plain, should carry its waters to preserve from famine and drought distant tracts in the Baree Doab, the home of the flower of the nation. This project also included another noble enterprise—the reopening of the Imperial Huslee Canal, originally constructed by Shah Jehan, and those innumerable canals and water cuts common in the land of the five rivers, on which the harvest of wide districts was dependent.

Within the scope of Colonel Napier's design was also embraced the Grand Trunk Road connecting Peshawur with the rest of the empire, and a network of internal communication leading from every valley and every town, from the Suleimani range to the banks of the Sutlej. To the chief engineer also was allotted the erection of the fortified posts along the whole border, the creation of police posts, caravanserais for travellers with accommodation for Europeans, the jails, and all other civil buildings throughout the province. By means of a staff imbued with a kindred energy—Dyas, Crofton, Taylor, Robertson, Henderson, Oliphant, and others of like stamp, following the example of their chief—these gigantic conceptions were one after the other severally completed; and the pen of Dalhousie recorded that the report of the Punjab Government of October 1854 showed "not only the eminent success of Lieutenant-Colonel Napier in one branch of the great department with whose conduct he is charged, but that it has been equally conspicuous in all. . . Whatever may be the credit due to those whose efforts have been directed to the physical improvement of the Punjab a proposal share of to the physical improvement of the Punjab, a principal share of that credit is justly due to Lieutenant-Colonel Napier, whose pro-fessional abilities, unwearied industry, and judicious guidance have contributed so largely to the material result which has happily been attained." But war was for a time to interrupt the carrying out of these schemes of material improvement. The insurrection of Moolraj led to the Punjab campaign of 1848, and Napier found himself at a very early period the Commanding Engineer with Edwardee's force. For the records of the spirit-stirring exploits of that period we must refer to the account of Sir Herbert Edwardes himself, who delighted to speak of the energetic bearing and counsel of Napier; and the Chief of the Derajat, the Towannah of the Salt Range, and the men of the frontier in the newly-raised corps of Guides, to this day detail the exciting incidents which associated them with the engineer ever foremost in reconnaissance and danger, and ever ready for any enterprise. They speak of that night when Christopher of the navy was killed, when the enemy's more powerful artillery having overpowered and knocked over two of the Sikh (Vau ('ortland's) guns attached to our force, Napier, to encourage the gunners, helped to work, and laid them himself, and remained with the battery until the proper time arrived for its withdrawal. On the arrival of Sir J. Cheape, Napier was appointed to the Bengal Division, with which he served to the end of the siege of Mooltan, and was wounded before that place after the capture of the city. Napier pushed forward to join Lord Gough's army on the right bank of the Chenab, where again he was present at the battle of Coozerat, and was favourably mentioned in the despatches; and he commanded the engineers in Sir Walter Gilbert's force in pursuit of the Sikh and Afghan army. In 1852-53 Lieutenant-Colonel Napier commanded the right column which stormed the Black Mountain in the Hussunzai country in Hazara. That expedition was a very different affair from the promenade of the numerous and well-equipped force which proceeded to the north of Hazara in 1868. At the close of 1852, Mackeson, with a weak force of Guides, the 1st Sikh Infantry and a Kashmir contingent, determined to re-build the outpost of Shoonglee, and dislodge the Hussunzai and Akazai tribes from the crest of the Black Mountain. To Colonel Napier was given the leadership of a column which had to ascend and turn a scarped, jagged, and wooded mountain, nine thousand feet above the sea-snow was falling fast during the operation, and not the least of apprehended dangers was the possibility of the troops being snowed up. The mountaineers were fighting on their own soil, for their own homes, and had cut down trees and thrown up breastworks to oppose the progress of the force. "We watched up breastworks to oppose the progress of the force. "We watched the column," wrote Mackeson, "carrying one height after another withintense interest. The Guides, skirmishing, occupied all the heights with intense interest. The Guides, skirmisning, occupied an energiase covered by the fire of mountain-guns. The last height was gained, but not without a severe struggle. My obligations to Colonel Napier are greater than I can express, for the steady and skilful manner in which he brought his column through many difficulties of ground and determined opposition by the enemy." The close of manner in which he brought his column through many difficulties of ground and determined opposition by the enemy." The close of 1853 presented another opportunity for distinction, on the border this time, in the Borse Valley adjoining the Kohat Pass, where a force under Colonel Boileau, of the 22nd Foot, had proceeded to punish the Jowakie Affridies. As stated by the Punjab Government, "the exertions and ability of Lieutenant-Colonel Napier mainly contributed to the success of the expedition, the brunt of which fell on the Guide Corps, who if possible on this occasion surpassed their former exploits. passed their former exploits.

THE BHAUNAGAR CASE.

The Indian Daily News holds that the decision of the Privy The Indian Daily News holds that the decision of the Privy Council in the famous Bhaunagar cession case, as it has been styled, entirely supports the position taken up by the Judges of the Bombay High Court, but it places the reported cession in an entirely novel light before the public. The estates of the Bhaunagar Thakoor in the province of Kattywar may be divided broadly into two classes, in one of which the Thakoor reigns as an independent chief, while in the other he is a mere British subject under the operation of the ordinary British laws. Irritated at the distinction between two portions of his property—and the more so that the portion in which he ordinarily resides falls within what may be described as British territory—the Thakoor has long been negotiating for the transfer to his own jurisdiction of that portion of his estates which is now out of it. The Government of India, of his estates which is now out of it. The Government of India, believing itself competent to cede British territory to a native prince, and thus proving, as we have often pointed out, that Mr. F. Stephen's legal opinions were sometimes not worth the paper on which they were written, at once made over some hundred and sixteen villages to the Thakoor. Fortunately the transfer was made under an agreement which reserved to the Government power to recall these villages into its own jurisdiction in the event of "gross misconduct" on the part of the Thakoor, the Bombay Government being the sole judge of such misconduct. The Privy Council decision is threefold. In the first place, it lays down that such a transfer as the Government contemplated making was not a cession of territory at all but merely a change from the ordinary cession of territory at all, but merely a change from the ordinary British to a special and local jurisdiction. In the next place, it decided that a mere notice in any Gazette was not sufficient to effect such a change, which required a Legislative Act; and that the attempted transfer on this occasion was not valid, because no such Act had been passed. This leaves it open to the Government to bring in an Act for the purpose; and as it is, on the whole, under rather better legal advice, its next effort may be more successful, or less unsuccessful than the last. In the third place, the Privy Council has decided that the Government of India could not, without Parliamentary sanction, legislate in any way about the sovereignty or dominion of the Queen, or about any cession of territory; thus showing that though the Government of India had no idea of what it was really doing in the Bhaunagar cession case, it had no authority to do what it thought it was actually doing. Lastly, the Privy Council indulges in a rather sober laugh at the curious trick of anctioning wholesale cession of territory by means of a clause in an Evidence Act. On the whole, the Government of India has rarely been made to look so supremely ridiculous; and the credit of the performance belongs entirely to Mr. F. Stephen.

INDIAN SALARIES.

The Englishman remarks that a contemporary lately inquired-"Why pay the District English Judge Rs. 2,500 a month if he is prepared to be honest on Rs. 400?" The reply is that the rate of wages is not generally calculated on the basis of the single quality of honesty. Honesty being, of course, a sine qual non, it is the value, or quality, of the work done that determines the rate. The much abused tax-gatherer may be quite as honest as the Chancellor of the Exchequer; but, whereas the former has only to perform the mechanical duty of extracting money from the pockets of taxpayers, the latter is much more highly paid in consideration of the delicate task of making any million tax delicate task of making unwilling tax-payers grin and bear the burdens he imposes on them. A right reverend Lord Bishop does not, we presume, receive a hundred times more than a reverend curate, merely because he is a hundred times more liable to go astray. Because a Treasury clerk is as honest as a Prime Minister, it does not necessarily follow either that the clerk ought to be made First Lord. or that the First Lord should receive no more pay than the clerk. The sign-painter may be as liberally conscientions in the matter of paint as the Academician, and may delineate with praiseworthy idelity every hair in the tail of the "Spotted Dog," but his work will not fetch the price of a "Land-In all the markets of the world the best article of its kind will always command a higher price than inferior produce; and, although the Greeks of the Lower Empire were once to be had cheaper than material of a better class, they were not, on that account, found best fitted for positions of great trust and responsibility. Where two competing races are equal as regards intellectual attainments the race that is superior in honesty, truthfulness, and attainments, the race that is superior in honesty, truthfulness, and moral and physical courage must be of greater market value than the other, and is therefore entitled to the first place. National, as well as individual, character is generally hereditary—the outcome of centuries of training, and of subtle influences, whether for good or evil. It is vain and chimerical to expect that the influence of ages of moral and physical degradation can suddenly be swept away at the schoolmaster's bidding. The greatest moral system the world ever saw has, after nineteen centuries of strife, yet to van-quish the principle of evil. So long as life is poisoned at its source by degrading home influences, so long will it be impossible for secular State Colleges to work miracles of adult regeneration. The greatest drawback, in our opinion, to the regeneration of India by greatest drawback, in our opinion, to the regeneration of India by native agency lies in the unfortunate fact that those who are intellectually in the van of native progress are morally and physically far in the rear. If this very serious difficulty could be satisfactorily disposed of, there would be more hope for the future of our Indian fellow-subjects. But, in the meanwhile, it is necessary, in the true interests of the people, that caution should mark the guarded way of our high judicial and administrative appointments.

RAIN has fallen generally throughout Bengal, but more is wanted in the Patna Division. Cholera still continues bad in many parts of Orissa.

THE WEATHER.—The weather at Sealkote, we hear, has been something wonderful of late. In the evening the Maharana came out in State to the 'Bara Duree,' a building in front of the Residency, and after seeing the elephant fight, retired to the Palace. His Highness completed his eighteenth year."

THE CENTRAL ASIAN TRADING COMPANY.—(LAHOR, June 29.)—The Central Asian Trading Company's prospects are more favourable. Three hundred horse-loads of return produce, principally churras, pushm carpets, and silk are coming from Yarkand. Gold-dust is scarce and dear, owing to restrictions on its exportation from Khoten. It is stated that a leading mercantile firm in Bombay will promote the formation of a joint-stock company as proposed by Mr. Russell, the present manager of the Central Asian Trading Company.—Bombay Gazette.

MILITARY.—We regret to hear of the very sickly state of the 1st Battalion 25th K. O. B. at Faizabad. This regiment landed from England last November, and ever since its arrival at Faizabad, usually regarded as a most healthy place, it has suffered severely. First, there were several cases of cholera. Then typhoid fever showed itself, and deaths from heat apoplexy were not uncommon. Now, it is stated by the Pioneer, there are nearly a hundred men in hospital, most of them suffering from fever. It was remarked on the regiment landing what a number of boys were to be seen in the ranks, and this is no doubt the cause of much of the sickness.

FOUND DEAD.—The corpse of a European private belonging to the 2-12th Regiment was, between the hours of three and four P.M. last Sunday, found floating in one of the trenches. seven or eight feet deep, within the Fort. The name of the unfortunate man is Thomas Fleet. He was seen late in the forenoon apparently in good spirits, but how he came to be where he was found is a mystery which is left to the coroner to find out. The corpse was viewed at the dead-house of the General Hospital last evening, preliminary to the inquest, which will be held on Thursday next.—Calcutta Stateman, June 28.

FATAL ACCIDENT AT SIMLA.—About ten o'clock on the night of the 25th instant the roof of a stable below Messrs. Symes and Co.'s premises fell in. There were just previous to the time of the accident eight men in the stable, but by some fortunate premonitory signs of the coming event some of these men were able to rush out of the place; those who could not escape were buried in the ruins. Information was at once conveyed to the Kotwalee, and through the active agency and the strenuous exertions of the Deputy Inspector of Police, Ameer Ally and his assistants, all but one of the men were dug out of the ruins alive. Great praise is due to this police officer for the manner in which he executed his mission, as the night was very dark, and it was so difficult to find the spot where the bodies were likely to be discovered.—Civil and Miliary Gazette, June 28.

The Drath of Mr. Thomas Newman.—We regret to hear of the death of Mr. Thomas Newman, of the firm of Messrs. T. E. Thomson and Co. It is scarcely two months since we had to notice the death of Mr. B. Newman, of the same firm, and we little thought that in so short a period the elder member of the firm would also be carried away. Mr. Newman came out to this country about twenty years ago, and has ever since been well known in Calcutta as a thoroughly upright and honourable, though very unostentatious man, and his untimely decease will be widely regretted. He was about to leave India for the benefit of his health, and in fact his baggage had already been conveyed on board the P. and O. steamer when he was taken worse, and eventually succumbed on Tuesday night. He was buried on Wednesday evening.—Englishman, June 30.

THE HEAT AT CALCUTTA .- Desperation has been the prevailing tone of the public mind during the past seven days; the monsoon is a failure, and the heat such as the "oldest inhabitant" hardly When I say such, I do not, of course, refer to mere degrees of temperature, as reckoned by our thermometors, but to the combination of heat and moisture which is rendering our lives a burden. Everywhere, except in North-East Bengal, it appears to be the same; little or no rain, and, instead of the stiff breeze proper to the season, a comparative calm—the mugginess of September and the heat of May together. In fact, it is almost too hot to think of the exchange, which by-the-bye, has fallen still further, and must soon, unless Government steps in with a remedy, result in consequences, social and political, too terrible to contemplate.-Englishman, July 3.

THE NATIVE ARMY.—The average good conduction men in the rative army is no less remarkable than the readiness with which recruits flow in to fill up vacancies in the ranks. All through the Bengal army, in the course of five years ending at some recent date, up to which the return has been compiled, the tetal number of se-poys tried by court-martial was only 1,313, less than four per regiment per annum. No one familiar in even the loosest way with the statistics of courts-martial in the European army will require to be told that this is an infinitesimally small number of trials as compared with a British average. True, the great majority of the British offences are of a trifling nature, connected in some wey with drunk-enness, but even supposing such cases were eliminated from the comparison, it would still remain extraordinary in favour of the native troops .- Pioneer.

THE LATE COLONEL THOMPSON.—In a recent issue we briefly alluded to the death of Colonel Thompson, First Assistant to the Governor General's Agent for Central India, and now give the fol-1 owing additional particulars:—Colonel Thompson entered the serice in December 1839, so would have succeeded to the off-reckonings in about eighteen months had he lived. He belonged originally to the 8th N.I., and was in the Sind campaign of 1843, including the battle of Hyderabad. In 1857 he took part in the Persian campaign, was at the bombardment of Mohumra and pursuit of the Persian Army. He was also employed in the pursuit of Tantia Topee in Guzerat in 1858. In 1859 he served as Staff Officer against the Naikra Bheels, since when he has not been on active service. As a political officer, he had the great advantage of serving under men ike General Meade and Sir Henry Daly .- Times of India, July 7.

New Viceregal Residence.—According to the Delhi Gazete, "It is stated that negotiations are nearly completed for Rothney Castle, at Simla, the princely residence of Mr. A. O. Hume, becoming the Viceregal abode in the next season. Peterhoff has been found too small for Lord Lytton. Though the situation of Rothney Castle is not so suitable, the house is far superior to Peterhoff in accommodation. There is an extensive and brilliantly ornamented reception room, splendid dancing and dining rooms, and the hadminton grounds near the house could not be better. It and the badminton grounds near the house could not be better. It is said that Lord Lytton will make Rothney Captle his residence till the new Government House is erected on Observatory Hill. Judging from the usual dilatory style of Public Works departmental work, the stay of Lord Lytton will be a prolonged one, not less than the whole duration of his Viceroyalty."

A FRAUDULENT POSTAL OFFICIAL.—The Deputy Postmaster of Tuni, in the Godavery District, has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 100, by the Assistant Magistrate, for cheating, by forcing the Post-office peons to sign the acquittance rolls, and withholding their salaries.—Madras Mail, July 1.

A CAUSE CELEBRE.—A Judicial trial which threatens to become a cause celebre has been, it seems, for some time going on in the Law Courts of Trevandrum, between a French gentleman, a planter from Pondicherry, and the representative of the London Missionary Society. It is all about a cooly squabble in the jungle. It appears charges of perjury, anonymous letter writing, &c., are springing up from it, and already the amenities of a certain phase of social life have been rudely disturbed thereby.—Madras Times, July 2.

Mysor.—Mr. Saunders, the new Chief Commissioner of Mysor, seems to have entered upon his new duties with a right good will. He has already paid a visit to Mysor, and has had a long interview with the Ranees of the palace, who took the opportunity of laying before him their grievances, which are said to be numerous. Mr. Saunders, after giving them a patient hearing, is said to have promised redress, but we are afraid he will not find this an easy task. Mr. Saunders was welcomed in the city in a manner that left no doubt of the high esteem in which he is held there, and altogether he seems to have become very popular. There has also been a change in the guardianship of the young Maharajah; Colonel Wilson, formerly tutor to the Nawab of Jowra, has succeeded Colonel Malleson in charge of the Rajah. The rumour is that Colonel Malleson's gaussian have been discovered with but that Colonel Malleson's services have been dispensed with, but such is said not to be really the case; but the new arrangement has been carried out on his own recommendation. The Colonel has b en on a visit to the Viceroy at Simla. - Madras Times.

THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS.—We are glad to learn that the Duke of Buckingham has been created a Knight Grand Commander of the Star of India as a mark of the Queen's recognition of the successful manuer in which on behalf of this Presidency his Grace entertained the Prince of Wales last December. The Star has not hitherto been conferred upon a Duke not of Royal blood, and the Order will gain in social importance from the connection with it of so illustrious a name as that of our Governor. The honour is perhaps not a very eminent one to offer to a Duke, whose father, grandfather, and one other of his ancestors were Knights of the Garter; but it is an appropriate compliment that will assist in commemorating a pleasant episode in the history of Madras.—

MEDICAL.—It is not known yet who will succeed Dr. Balfour in the Surgeon-Generalship of the Indian Medical Department of the Madras Presidency on his retirement, and the subject has provoked some discussion. Some think that the choice of Government is restricted to a Deputy Surgeon-General who has served three years in that grade, and that consequently there is but one officer eligible for the appointment; but others think that it is competent for the Government to shorten the period of qualifying service in the grade of Deputy, so that the local Government have practically the power of selecting any one on the list of Deputies for the Surgeon-Generalship in which case it will be for the ground of the service that the ralship, in which case it will be for the good of the service that the selection should be made thus, as it is necessary that the field of selection should be as wide as possible. The solution of this interesting question is looked forward to with much interest by the Medical Department in this Presidency.—Madras Times.

COLONEL E. M. LAWFORD, MADRAS CAVALRY.—The appointment of Colonel Lawford—a gentleman who has lived many years in Bangalore—to be second in command of the 4th (Prince of Walso's Own) Madras Light Cavalry at Bellary, has been received with much regret by his numerous friends. Colonel Lawford has not failed during his residence here to interest himself in all good works, but he will be chiefly remembered for the warm interest he has taken in the well being of the Bishop Cotton College and Schools, and the least the masters and children can do is to express their gratitude to him for the same. Colonel Lawford, we believe, holds the opinion that there should be greater facilities for young European and Eurasian youngsters of the middle classes, born and domiciled in India to study for the Civil Service and the professions, and he has, if we are correctly informed, set on foot a fund to enable deserving youngsters to go to England to prosecute their studies as opportunity offers. We should be glad to be furnished with Colonel Lawford's views on the subject before he leaves Bangalere, and we wish him all prosperity in his new sphere of duty at Bellary.—Bangalore Examiner, June 30.

CHOLERA AT PANCHGUNNY.—Cholera is still raging in Panchgunny and the surrounding villages. The two boys who were so seriously ill have both died, Bedford on Friday and Rowell on Saturday. Those boys who have not already left Panchgunny have gone to the travellers' bungalow, which is situated on a healthy and commanding spot.—Times of India, July 7.

THE SUPERINTENDENT OF MAHABLESHWUR.-Dr. Mackenzie, Superintendent of Mahableshwur, who has been at this station from the commencement of the week, proceeds this morning to Panchgunny to inquire into the cause of that dire disease, cholera, having made its appearance there, and from thence Dr. Mackenzie will proceed to Sattara, and will remain there until the opening of the Mahableshwur season in October next.—Poona Observer, July 1.

A DISABLED STEAMER.—The steamship State of Alabama, 1,511 tons, Captain J. Hamlin, from London bound to China, put in Bombay harbour on Friday on account of her engines being disabled. She has on board the following passengers for China:—Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin and child, Mr. Edgar, Mr. Joaquin, Mr. Young, Mr. Longridge, Mr. Curry, Mr. Robson, Mr. Ord, Mr. R. and J. Kilburn, Mr. Boizle, Mr. Beaton, and Mr. McFee.—Times of India July 7

SUICIDE OF MR. J. H. WAIT.—We regret to hear of the death, by his own hand, of Mr. J. H. Wait, Civil Engineer in the Bhowninggur State. The sad event took place about eleven o'clock on the morning of the 27th. The deceased had suffered for some months. past from great depression of spirits. Mr. Wait was highly respected and much beloved by all classes of society at Bhownuggur, both European and native, and his death has cast the greatest gloom over all. The funeral took place the same evening, and was very largely attended.

Arrival of the New Bishop of Bombay.—Dr. Mylne, the new Bishop of Bombay, arrived by the Overland Mail steamer on Tuesday, and landed at Mazagon. He was met on board the steamer by the Ven. the Archdeacon and the Rev. W. Maule. The Bishop went to Mr. Maule's house at Mazagon, known as "The Parsonage," and is staying there with the Rev. Mr. Maule. The installation of the Bishop took place at the Cathedral on Thursday morning at 7.30. On Friday a Confirmation will be held at the Cathedral at 5.30 p.m. On Saturday the Consecration at Sewree will take place at 7 a.m. We understand that the Bishop will on Sunday next preach in the morning at St. John's Church, Colaba, and at the Cathedral in the evening.—Bombay Gazette, July 7.

INDUS VALLEY RAILWAY.—The Lahor paper tells us that there is every prospect of the Indus Valley Railway being open for traffic from Multan to Kotri by the end of 1877. The only work which will not be completed by that time will be the Indus bridge at Sakkar; but arrangements will be made for ferrying passengers across the Sakkar pass. The progress made upon this line during the past year has been most satisfactory, and great credit is due to the engineering staff in charge of its construction. The work done the engineering staff in charge of its construction. The work done at the Satlej bridge during the past season has been most surprisingly rapid, and reflects great credit on Mr. Galway, to whose exertion the great progress which has been made is due.

RAILWAY Accidents.-On our two lines of railway, the Great Indian Peninsula Railway and the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway, the former 622 miles in length, the latter 450, there were last year 29 accidents on the long line and 41 accidents on the shorter; 31 persons were killed on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, and 50 were injured; on the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway 14 were killed and 14 injured. No further details are given of these accidents, but as no actions for damages have been instituted the accidents. been instituted the accidents may, probably, be attributed to the chances of injury inseparable from all railways alike. On four occasions on each line attempts were deliberately made, by placing obstructions on the line, to upset a train, in two of these instances the culprits were punished.—Bombay Gazette.

THE LATE LIEUT. BLAIR. -(AHMADABAD, June 24.)-The sudden death of Lieut. Blair from apoplexy occurred to-day under very sad circumstances. Feeling rather unwell last night, he told his sad circumstances. sad circumstances. Feeling rather unwell last night, he told his servant not to leave him, as he might need his assistance. The boy, however, no sooner found that his master was asleep than he decamped. Poor Lieut. Blair seems to have got up during the night, for he was found early this morning by the postal poon, lying insensible on the floor of his room, with his head cut and bleeding from the effects of the fall. The man gave the alarm at once, and assistance was rendered, but he was too far gone, and died at one choice to day. He was in charge of the Argenel and only took up. o'clock to-day. He was in charge of the Arsenal, and only took up his appointment last December, on his return from England, where he had left his wife and a family of eight children.—Bombay. Guzette Correspondent.

BOMBAY HARBOUR.—For some time a discussion has been maintained, especially at the meetings of the Port Trustees, on the quastion whether the north-west portion of Bombay harbour is silting up or not. The opinion of several experienced persons has been confidently expressed that this portion of the harbour is silting up at a rapid rate, but data are wanting from which to make a correct gauge of the depth of water in this part of the harbour for any length of time. Under these circumstances the Port Trustees, at a recent meeting, recorded a resolution of the Bombay Government, dated 12th June, "intimating with reference to the report by the Chief Engineer regarding the alleged silting up of the north-west portion of the harbour, that further discussion on the subject is not likely to lead to any useful result; that the Dock in the Elphinstone Reclamation having been commenced, a channel or approach to it will have to be formed and maintained, and when this is done something approaching to accurate information as to the extent to which that portion of the foreshore is liable to silt up will be obtained. In the meantime, Government observe it is gratifying to know that, according to the latest received report on the condition of the harbour and foreshore, there are no grounds for assuming that any material injury is sustained by either, through the process of silting.

SIR SALAR JUNG, G.C.S.I., IN THE CITY.

On Tuesday a Court of Common Council was held in the Guildhall, presided over by the Lord Mayor, the principal business of which was the presentation of the freedom of the City to Sir Salar Jung, Prime Minister to his Highness the Nawab Nizam of Hyderabad. The Lord Mayor arrived punctually at one o'clock, and shortly afterwards his Excellency Sir Salar Jung, who is still suffering from his recent accident in Paris, was assisted into the Council Chamber by his servants. He was able to walk a little on crutches, and when he ascended the dais an easy chair was provided for him close to that of the Lord Mayor. After the usual formalities, signing the freemen's roll, &c., Mr. Scott, the City Chamberlain, addressed his Excellency in a speech in which reference was made to Sir Salar Jung's services to this country and to his own.

Sir Salar Jung, who spoke in English, and with a good accent, said that, in accepting the honorary freedom of the City of London, he was deeply conscious of the very high distinction which they had conferred upon him, and he begged to offer his most sincere expressions of gratitude. It was a matter of peculiar satisfaction to him to learn the high value they attached to the loyalty of his master the Nizam, as one of the independent princes of India, and a closer intimacy with whom the citizens of London expressed a desire to cultivate. While appreciating their special recognition of the staunch alliance of his Highness the Nizam at a time of trial, he might say that, from his position at the time, he became the instrument for exhibiting the qualities of a faithful ally. To become the recipient of such a high mark of esteem could not fail to encourage his contemporaries in India, whose efforts, like his own, were directed to the performance of loyal and honourable duties. He was gratified to have the opportunity of assuring them that since the time when the connection between the British Government and that of the Nizam was first established the one desire on the part of the ruler of the State and all his Ministers had been to maintain the alliance in every way in their power, and he had full confidence that this alliance, which had subsisted for more than a century, would not only be maintained in the future as hitherto, but that, as had been rightly observed, the bond of amicable relationship between the peoples of England and India would be strengthened. The communication now existing between the two countries, the ever-increasing interest in India and its people which he found here on all sides must infallibly give rise to fresh and more intimate sympathy, and as this increased so must their alliance be mutually strengthened. He was fully conscious that while the faithful performance of their engagements by the princes of India had brought good results to themselves and to the British power, yet that the visit of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales to India, and his unfailing courtesy towards all those with whom his Royal Highness was brought into contact, had contributed in an eminent degree to strengthen and attract the loyalty and attachment of his (Sir Salar Jung's) countrymen to the British Throne (Hear, hear.) He thanked them for the kind mention of the small part performed at Bombay by a deputation representing the Nizam, and at Calcutta by himself, in the general endeavour to do honour to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Sir Salar further referred to the hearty co-operation he received from his administrative colleagues, and to the increasing share which the young nobility and the statement of the territory. (His Freeless) lity were taking in the government of the territory. (His Excellency was loudly cheered at the close of his observations.)

An adjournment afterwards took place to the Mansion House, where a party had assembled, at the invitation of the Lord Mayor, to meet Sir Salar Jung at luncheon. Amongst those present were Lord and Lady Hawarden, Lord and Lady Stanley of Alderley, the native gentlemen who accompanied his excellency, Sir Charles Reed, Aldermen Sidney, Nottage, Dakin, Sir Robert Carden, a large contingent of the Common Council, and several other ladies and gentlemen. After luncheon the Lord Mayor gave "The Health of her Majesty the Queen, Empress of India," that of "The Prince of Wales and the other Members of the Royal Family," and finally that of Sir Salar Jung. Sir Salar responded, and the company adjourned to the drawing-room.

The Corporation entrusted Mr. J. W. Benson, of Old Bond-street and Ludgate-hill, with the design and manufacture of the casket which contained the address presented to Sir Salar Jung. The casket is oblong in form, about seven inches in length and five in height, and is of 18-carat gold, richly chased. In the centre panel on the obverse side is the coat of arms of his Excellency, emblazoned in the finest enamel. On the two smaller panels on either side are shown the monogram of his Excellency and the Star of India. On the reverse side in the centre panel is the inscription, while on the two smaller panels are finely painted miniatures of the Queen and the Prince of Wales. The casket is surmounted by the coat of arms of the City of London, in enamel, and the whole is extremely rich and effective in appearance.

Sir Salar Jung, G.C.S.I., was admitted to the honorary degree of D.C.L. in the Sheldonian Theatre, Oxford, on Monday, July 24. He came by special train, and was received at the Great Western Station by Professor Monier Williams, who conducted him to the Vice-Chancellor's house at New College. The theatre was well filled, and the appearance of Sir Salar Jung to receive his degree was the signal for general applause. After the proceedings he drove rapidly through the city, and visited the principal objects of interest in the University, accompanied by the Vice-Chancellor and Professor Monier Williams.

Addresses of welcome to Sir Salar Jung, and regretting his inability to visit Manchester, were on Wednesday presented from the Corporation and Chamber of Commerce of that city. In reply, his Excellency expressed the great interest which he felt in the properity of the cotton industry, with which Manchester was so closely associated, and his desire to encourage it as much as possible in the dominions of the Nizam of Hyderabad.

On Thursday his Excellency gave a farewell banquet to a large parts at the Star and Garter, Richmond.

On Saturday his Excellency, accompanied by Gerald Fitzgerald, Esq. (Political Aide-de-Camp to the Secretary of State for India), and Captain John Clerk, visited Osborne, and took leave of her Majesty on his return to India.

Sir Salar Jung and his suite, consisting of some sixty persons, left Charing-cross Station by special train, at one P.M. yesterday, in route for Brindisi. The Duke of Sutherland witnessed the departure of his Excellency, and the Hon. James Byng, deputy-chairman of the South-Eastern Railway Company, was in the station to receive him. Mr. John Shaw, manager and secretary, and Mr. Wm. Cockburn, superintendent of the line, accompanied the train. His Excellency was heartily cheered as the train left. From Folkestone Sir Salar Jung proceeded by the company's special steamer Alexandra at 3.40 for Boulogne, where he arrived at six P.M. He was carried ashore, and was conveyed in a carriage to the Buffet, and after his luggage had been transferred to a special train he left for Paris at 6.45 P.M.

Miscellaneous.

MR. JAMES ASHBURY, M.P. for Brighton, sailed from Liverpool on July 27 for New York, en route for Japan, China, and the Straits Settlements, vià Philadelphia and San Francisco. The hon. member paired on the 25th with Mr. Samuel Laing, M.P., for the rest of the Session.

Collision At Sea.—Two British ships, one the barque Dinorah, coal-laden, from Shields for Brindisi, the other the steamer Dorunda, bound from London to Calcutta, are reported to have been in collision, and the former vessel to have sunk with the loss of ten of her crew, the remainder landing at Gibraltar on Friday.

CONSULAR.—The Queen has been pleased to approve of Mr. Minami Tamots as Consul in London for his Imperial Majesty the Mikado. The Queen has been pleased to appoint William Henry Macleod Read and William Adamson, Esquires, to be Members of the Legislative Council of the Straits Settlements.

DEATH OF PROFESSOR CHILDERS.— We regret to announce the death of Professor Childers, at his residence, 38, Clanricarde-gardens, on the 25th inst. Professor Childers was one of the most eminent Pali scholars of his time, and his "Pali Dictionary," published only a few months ago, was universally recognised as a masterpiece of scholarly research and brilliant erudition. He was a few years ago appointed Professor of Pali in University College, London, and assistant librarian to the India-office. Professor Childers was in his thirty-eighth year at the time of his death.

BRITISH INDIAN TEA COMPANY.—At a meeting of the British Indian Tea Company on July 27, the report, which was adopted, showed a profit on the year's working of £1,304, and the debenture interest absorbed £1,184. To enable a return to be made to the shareholders, the directors have spread over four years the cost of executing certain extensions which will in time become productive; consequently the sum of £1,306 is placed to the credit of profit and loss for last year's portion, and a dividend of 2s. 6d. per share is to be paid.

The India Museum.—A deputation of delegates from the working men's clubs of London on Wednesday waited on the Lord Mayor, at the Mansion House, to ask his lordship's advocacy and support in regard to a proposal for the establishment of a Museum for India and the Colonies on the Thames Embankment. Acknowledging the importance of the subject, the Lord Mayor expressed his willingness to head a deputation to Mr. Disraeli, and promised to do his best to obtain the support of the Government. A memorial drawn up by a committee appointed at a large meeting of the working classes in Finsbury has been forwarded to the Prime Minister, calling his attention to the fact that the location of the proposed museum of South Kensington would deprive the working men of the East-end of London of the benefits to be derived from it, and strongly advocating the Victoria Embankment as the most desirable site.

PAY OF INDIAN OFFICERS ON FURLOUGH.—The Whitehall Review Correspondent (Aristarchus) writes:—"I hear that a number of Indian officers now at home on leave are preparing to return to the East at once. The depreciation in silver has by degrees lowered the rates of Indian exchange so much that instead of receiving, as they used to do, 2s. in England for every rupee due to them in the East, they now only get 1s. 6d. In other words, the direct loss on their pay and allowances is 25 per cent. Surely this is most unfair. From time immemorial the pay of officers serving in India has been calculated at 2s. the rupee."

The Norrolk and Shrewsbury Families,—(Whitehall, July 19.)—The Queen has been pleased to grant unto Edmund Bernard Fitzalan-Howard, a Lieutenant in H.M.'s 11th (Prince Albert's Own) Regiment of Hussars, now stationed at Umballa, in the Empire of India, youngest of the two-unviving sons of the Most Noble Henry Granville, Duke of Norf lk &c., &c., deceased, her Royal Licence and authority that he may, in compliance with a provise contained in the last will and testament of Bertram Arthur, Earl of Shrewsbury and Earl of Waterford, deceased, take the surname of Talbot only, and take, use, and hear the arms of Talbot only, and to command that the said Royal concession and declaration be recorded in her Majesty's College of Arms—Gazette.

WILL OF THE LATE LORD SANDHURST.—The will and codicil, dated Dec. 22, 1873, and Jan. 28, 1875, of General the Right Hon. William Rose, Baron Sandhurst, P.C., G.C.B., G.C.S.I., late of No. 18, Grosvenor-gardens, who died on the 23rd ult., were proved on the 8th inst. by his widow, Lady Sandhurst, and his brothers, Samuel Mansfield and Horatio Mansfield, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £60,000. The testator bequeaths to his wife £5,500, and certain furniture and effects absolutely, and the income of his houses, No. 18, Grosvenor-gardens, and No. 60, Eaton-square, for life; upon trust for his eldest son, William, for life, and after his death for the person who succeeds to the title, £15,000; on the death of Lady Sandhurst the said two houses are to be held upon similar trusts; upon trust for his daughter, Margaret Louisa, £10,000; to each of his younger sons, £4,000; to the Rev. Edward Dowell, £300; and to his brothers, Samuel and Horatio, £500 each. The rest of his preperty he gives to his son William.

The European Assurance Society.—The Court of Appeal on Friday heard two appeals from decisions of Mr. F. S. Reilly, the arbitrator appointed under the European Assurance Society's Arbitration Act, and affirmed both the decisions. The first case was Dowse's, in which the question was whether Miss Frances Dowse, to whom an annuity of £10 for her life had been granted by the Royal Naval and Military Society, which afterwards transferred its assets and liabilities to the European, was entitled now to prove for the value of her annuity against the Royal Naval Society, or against the European only. Their lordships concurred with the arbitrator in holding that she could only prove against the European.—The second case was Ramsay's. The question was, whether a shareholder in the European, who had transferred his shares within a year before the commencement of the winding-up, was liable to be placed on the list of contributories as a past member. The Court affirmed the decision of the arbitrator, that the shareholder must be placed on the list.

Naval.—The Spartan, which had only just left England for a commission on the East India Station, is now on her way home again on the mournful erraud of bringing back to England the body of her captain, who had held his new command barely a month. It was only on June 16 that Captain Hawksworth Fawkes hoisted the pendant on board the Spartan, not having served for many years, if we except the short term of duty on board the Junna, which he was compelled to resign on account of ill health. But he was anxious to remain on the Active List, and therefore again desired a command, the term of which has been brought to an untimely end by death. If another frigate or other suitable ship can be found to take the place of the present flagship on the East India Station it would not perhaps be amiss to order the Undaunted to England to be docked and thoroughly examined. As it is, we hear that she has lately shown signs of becoming hogbacked, her stern having dropped considerably, so much so that it is not considered advisable to work her engines at full power. In this there is of course nothing to alarm the friends of those on board, there being no danger of her snapping in two, but it detracts from her efficiency at this moment, and if allowed to continue may subject the ship to such an amount of straining as may considerably shorten her days of service affoat. The Bucchante, though not a frigate, would be a very passable flagship if properly fitted out for that service SUICIDE OF A GENTLEMAN FROM HUNGERFORD BRIDGE.—Mr. G. Hull, the Deputy Surrey Coroner, on Wednesday evening held an inquiry into the circumstances connected with the death of Mr. George Todd, aged sixty-eight, an independent gentleman, formerly in the Bengal Civil Service, residing at the Hanover-chambers, 23, Hanover-square, W. Alfred Bathurst, the porter at the chambers, said he had known the deceased gentleman since 1854 as living there. He had been in an extremely weak state of health, and under the care of Sir Wm. Gull a long while, suffering internally, and had been exceedingly strange in manner. He used to say he was never free from pain, but got worse and worse. He was missing on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. He was much affected by the death of Sir Thomas Henry, who had died in witness's arms. Deceased said how nice it must be to die so painlessly as that, and that he wished his own life were ended.—Sir Wm. Güll'was sworn, and deposed he had known Mr. Todd since July 15, 1875, when he came to witness to consult him, being in a dreadfully low state of nervous depression, and suffering from internal disorders. He used to bring strange written reports of his several maladies, and was most eccentric. Witness fully expected the suicide. George Bobgent, 12 L, deposed that at two o'clock on the morning of Friday, July 21, he was in Belvedere-road, and the toll-keeper said a person just come off the bridge had told him of some things lying on the footway, and witness found a coat and umbrella lying on the path in the middle of the bridge. These were identified as the deceased's, as his name was written on them. The body was discovered on Monday at Blackfriars. The jury ultimately recorded a verdict of suicide while of unsound mind.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, Ju'y 25.—ROMAN CATHOLIC PLACES OF WORSHIP IN INDIA.—Lord G. Hamilton, in answer to Mr. Whalley, said his impression was that it was true that a sum of Rs. 12,000 had been granted by the Lieutenaut-Governor of the North-West Provinces towards the construction of a Roman Catholic cathedral, and the Government had always entertained applications for funds for the construction and maintenance of places of worship which were largely frequented by the two services.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, July 27.—THE SLAVE CIRCULAR.—Mr. W. HUNT, being interrogated by Mr. W. HOLMS as to the course the Government proposed taking in regard to the Slave Circular question, said it was intended to issue fresh instructions, and he hoped they would be laid on the table before the prorogation.

The Indian Budget.—Mr. Goschen: I should like to ask the Prime Minister a question on a subject with regard to which some interest has begun to be felt, and that is with regard to a discussion of the Indian Budget. The matter is particularly important, owing to the discussion on the depreciation of silver. I have been reluctant to ask the Government, seeing how pressed they are with various kinds of business, to fix a day; but in consideration of no day having been asked for a discussion of the report of the committee on the depreciation of silver, I trust the right hon. gentleman will be able to assure the House that the Indian Budget will not be postponed too long.—Mr. DISRAELI hoped they would be able to discuss the Indian Budget under circumstances which would allow a tolerable attendance of members; but it was impossible for him to form an opinion as to the progress of business until the committee on the Education Bill was closed. When that happened he would make a statement to the House as to the probable course of public business.

The Roberts Court-Martial.—Mr. C. Bentinck, as Judge Advocate-General, informed Captain Stacroole that the officer officiating as his deputy at the trial of Captain Roberts, of the 94th Regiment, had pointed out to the members of the court-martial that the acquittal of the prisoner would involve the character and standing of his commanding officer. He did not think any exception could be taken to his observations in this respect.—Captain Stacroole gave notice that he would take the earliest possible opportunity of moving that a report of the proceedings be laid on the table.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, July 28.—INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.— Lord G. HAMILTON explained, in reply to Colonel Jervis, that no alteration had been made in the furlough regulations of medical officers of the Indian Army in regard to pensions.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, July 31.—THE YUNNAN MISSION.
—Mr. BOURKE, in reply to Mr. M. Stewart, said the report of Mr. Grosvenor's mission to Yunnan had not yet been received, and he could not therefore say when it would be laid upon the table.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.—Mr. DISRAELI, replying to Mr. FAWCET, said it is impossible to bring forward the Indian Budget this week, but nobody excepting the hon. member for Hackney could suppose that we could advise the prorogation of Parliament without dealing with the financial statement of India.

THE Afridis of the Kohat Pass lately made a raid on the cattle of the villagers of Bazid Kheyl, but retreated when the villagers and troops from Fort Mackeson turned out, without taking any.

MR. SCHWENDLER has arranged for a supply of animals for the Calcutta Zoological Gardens from Aden and Zanzibar, and the Khedive has promised a valuable contribution. Some animals are also coming from Australia.

COUNTY OF CHESTER.

OUNTY BRIDGEMASTER, SUR-VEYOR, and ARCHITECT.

OUNTY BRIDGEMASTER, SURVEYOR, and ARCHITECT.

The MAGISTRATES for the COUNTY of CHESTER will, at the General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, to be held at NETHER KNUTSFORD, in and for the said County, on MONDAY, the 16th day of OCTOBER next, proceed to ELECT a SUCCESSOR to the late Mr. Nr.
CROCS, the County Bridgemaster and Surveyor.

The person elected will be appointed to fill the offices of County Bridgemaster Surveyor, and Architect, and will be required to devote the whole of his time to his duties. A Military or Civil Engineer, or Professional Architect, will be considered eligible for the appointment. The officer appointed will not be obliged to reside actually in the county, provided that his residence is in some place convenient to his duties. Detailed particulars of his duties, which will comprise the supervision and charge of the County and Hundred Bridges, Roads, Gaols, Court-houses, Asylums, Lockups, and all County-Buildings of every description, and the furnishing, when specially required, of Plans, Specifications, and Estimates for New Buildings, and the Alterations of Old Buildings, may be obtained on application to the undersigned.

The salary will be 2500 per annum, and actual travelling expenses within the county, such sum to include the services of such clerk or assistant as the officer to be appointed may find it necessary to employ in the inspection and superintendence of county lengths of roads, and such roads as may hereafter be required under the provisions of any Act of Parliament, to be inspected on behalf of the county. If specially engaged to furnish Plans, Specifications, or Estimates of New Buildings, or for Alterations of Old Buildings, other than Bridges, Lockups, and Magistrates'-rooms, he will, when the cost shall exceed £500, be allowed a commission thereon according to a fixed scale.

Full particulars of all the duties to be performed, and of the allowances to be made, together with any further information Candidates may require, may be obtained on applica

The Text of Kanva Lachhman Sinh. Critically Edited with Grammatical, Idiomatical, and Exegetical Notes. FREDERIC PINCOTT, M.R.A.S.

CHART OΕ INDIA.

ARTHUR ALLEN DURTNALL, of the High Court of Chancery.

Price, fully Tinted, mounted on Roller, or in Case, 20s. Size, about 40 in. by 50 in.

Showing, at one view, all the principal nations, governments, and empires which have existed in that country from the earliest times to the suppression of the Great Mutiny, a.D. 1858; with the date of each historical event according to the rarious eras used in India. By this Chart, any person, however ignorant of the subject, may, by an hour's attention, obtain a clear view of the broad lines of Indian History, and of the evolutions which have resulted in the dominion of her Majesty as EMPRESS OF INDIA. It will be found invaluable for EDUCATIONIL PURPOSES, especially in Colleges and Schools, where an Indian cureer is in contemplation. It will also be found of permanent utility in all Libraries and Ollices as a work of ready reference for the connection of events and dates. Besides the History of India, it includes the contemporaneous histories of Afghanistan, Central Asia, and Russian.

RELIEVO MAP

In Frame, 21s.

In Frame, 21s.

"A map of this kind brings before us such a picture of the surface of a given country as no ordinary map could ever do. To the mind's eye of the average Englishman, India consists of 'the plains' and 'the hills,' chiefy of the former, the hills being limited to the Himalayas and the Nilgiris. The new map will at least enable him to correct his notions of Indiangeography. It combines the usual features of a good plain map of the country on a scale of 150 miles to the inch, with a faithful representation of all the uneven surfaces, modelled on a scale thirty-two times the horizontal one; thus bringing out into clear relief the comparative heights and outlines of all the hill-ranges, and showing broad tracts of uneven ground, of intermingled hill and valley, which a common map of the same size would hardly indicate, except to a very practised eye. The plains of Upper India are reduced to their true proportions; the Central Provinces, Malwa, and Western Bengal reveal their actual ruggedness at a glance; and Southern India, from the Vindhyas to Cape Comorin, proclaims its real height above the sea-level. To the historical as well as the geographical student such a map is an obvious and important aid in tracing the course of past campaigns, in realising the conditions under which successive races carried their arms or settlements through the Peninsula, and in comprehending the difference of race, climate, and physical surroundings which make up our Indian Empire. Set in a next frame of maplewood, the map seems to attract the eye like a prettily-coloured picture, and its price, a guinea, should place it within the reach of all who care to combine the useful with the ornamental."—Home News.

ORIGINAL GENUINE. THE AND ONLY

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronehitis, Asthma.

OHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.

OHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoss, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

OHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatiam, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was OHLORODYNE.—See Lasers, lat Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies seed bottle.

Summary and Revielv.

Our latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, July 14; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, July 12; Calcutta, July 11.

An on dit appears in the Madras as well as Bombay journals, to the effect that the Viceroy and Governor-General will visit Bangalore and the Mysore Province next cold weather, when certain questions of importance now pending will be settled on the spot, one of which, it is mentioned, will be the partial reorganisation of the Mysore Commission recommended in a late Administration Report.

THE Hyderabad (Sind) correspondent of the Times of India reports (July 13) great excitement amongst the Khoja community. Busrio, one of his Highness Aga Khan's disciples, was sentenced to five years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 5,000, for attempting to murder one Lallun. Goolmali, another delinquent, was sentenced to seven years' transportation.

DB. BROWN had been suspended from the post of Political Agent with the Rajah of Munipore, the cause of the suspension not being, however, stated.

SINCE the setting in of the monsoons, cholera had broken out at Jubbulpore, in the Sudder Bazaar Mission compound, and the city with virulence. The authorities were taking active measures to check the spread of the disease, but latest accounts (July 13) reported no abatement of the epidemic. Cholera still prevailed at Murree. Up to the 5th inst. (says a telegram) fifteen European cases are reported, of which nine were fatal.

It is reported from Lahor, July 13, that much damage had been done in the district by heavy rains. "Four deaths have occurred and several persons have been injured in Lahor city during the late heavy rains. The State Railway was flooded, but only temporary damage has been done; the trains are running again. The breaks on the line near the Beas are believed to be more serious."

THE death of Colonel Keyes is announced from Vizagapatam. The death of Major Lloyd, of the British Burmah Commission, is also announced.

MADRAS news is, as usual, scanty. The Madras Athenæum hears that the Government has purchased the house at Ooty known as "Upper Norwood" at a cost of £2,000. This with "Lower Norwood," already State property, will provide accommodation for the Secretariat during the period the Government remains annually on the hills.

REGARDING the appointment of Dr. Smith to the Surgeon-Generalship the various local papers have had their say. There is little doubt however, says the Mail, that the East-Indian community loses in Dr. Balfour a friend not easily replaced. His manner towards this class was always marked by extreme courtesy and friendly disposition.

THE Athenœum states that Mr. Cameron, of Bangalore, has been selected to fill the appointment of Superintendent of the Government Chinchona Plantations, rendered vacant by the death of the late Mr. McIvor.

THE new Bishop of Bombay (Dr. Mylne) left Bombay for Poons on the 8th ult., after consecrating an additional piece of ground in the cemetery at Sewree.

MAJOR FLETCHER, G Battery 4th Brigade R.A., is under arrest at Nusseerabad, pending an inquiry into some matters connected with the interior economy of the battery.

On the 12th ult., before the Senior Magistrate of Bombay, in Chambers, a criminal charge was preferred against a gentleman occupying a high official position in Bombay. The magistrate granted a summons, and it was expected that the matter will come on for private hearing in a few days.

THE trial of Mr. Cary, an accountant in the Telegraph Department, in Hyderabad, Sind, for misappropriating public moneys, was occupying some attention.

THE Banks of Bombay and Bengal had declared dividends at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum. The Madras Bank declares a dividend for the past half-year at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum.

A TERRIBLE accident, accompanied by the loss of seven native lives, the serious injury of three other persons, and great destruction of property, had occurred in the native part of the town of Oomercary (Bombay Presidency) by the fall of the upper portion and stone wall of a godown or granary. The particulars of this disastrous casualty will be found in our Bombay intelligence.

The latest Aden news contains one or two important items:

—It is reported that three steamers with troops and war material arrived at Mussowah from Egypt during the last month, to be followed by others. The Banya merchants at Mussowah have warned their agents here not to send any further merchandise for the present. The claimants for losses inflicted by H.M.S. Thetis have arrived in Aden, and their claims are receiving attention. The sum awarded these men was, it will be recollected, one lac of rupees.

At Cherra Punji, in the Khásia Hills of Assam, as much as 600 inches of rain have been known to fall in one rainy season. That this is no extravagant reckoning may be inferred from the fact that during the week ended the 15th of June 121.09 inches of rain fell at Cherra Punji, and 81 inches at Jawai, a station about thirty miles off.

WE are not surprised to hear of the great dissatisfaction expressed among the troops who were employed at Perak in consequence of the commissariat sending in bills to the different corps for the daily dram of rum issued to the men. It was thought that Government had given the rum free, seeing that it had been recommended as a prophylactic by the medical authorities. No question of payment was raised at the time, but now several months after the close of the expedition the bill is presented to the various corps, and we believe amounts to some Rs. 12 per head. The men naturally feel rather annoyed, as it is not a nice idea that the Government is not above trying to over-reach its servants. Compensation for injury to equipment and clothing was given at the rate of Rs. 26 per head, little enough, considering that in many cases most of a man's uniform was destroyed by damp, thorns, white ants, &c., &c., and it would have been a graceful act to have issued the rum free, as was done during the Ashantee war.

WE learn from a Bombay paper that the Indian Government have revived an old but very useful order prescribing the proper form for the beginning of official letters. All official letters in future are to begin with the words "From — (giving the name of the sender) To —, Dated — (giving the place, day of month,&c.)." The reason for ordering that the sender's name should be written by the clerk at the top of the letter is, of course, that the sender's own signature is in many cases utterly illegible. It would be a boon to others besides the receivers of official letters if some law could be devised compelling every one to write his own name legibly. Unless you happen to know the person who has written to you, the chances are that you have to guess at his signature, which may be excellently adapted to prevent forgery, but may also cause a good deal of needless perplexity and inconvenience to people who have no idea of using the writer's name for any unlawful purpose. In the case of business letters illegible signatures are often a greater nuisance than in official correspondence, where the name may be of less importance than the writer's rank and

THE editor of the Darjiling News has seen the plans and specification of a tea-drying apparatus, patented by Mr. Ansell, of the Duteriah estate. If this machine does in practice what its inventor claims for it on theoretical grounds, it will prove an inestimable boon to planters, as well as a source of considerable profit to its inventor. The main novelty in Mr. Ansell's machine appears to be that he proposes to use steam for drying the tea, and that the apparatus is self-acting. In other words, the steam not required for rolling the leaf by machinery is available for drying it, and the leaf goes in at the top of the machine and comes out at the bottom manufactured tea. Mr. Ansell claims for his machine that it will turn out 150 lbs. of dry tea per hour, or in the working day of ten hours, 18 mds. 60 lbs., with an expenditure of 112 lbs. of wood per hour, or 14 maunds per day; being at the rate of about three quarter maunds of wood per maund of pure tea. By Mr. Ansell's plan the heat to which the leaf is subjected can be regulated to a nicety, according to the wish of the manufacturer, and the possibility of burning is altogether obviated. Besides the saving of fuel it would appear that Mr. Ansell's machine will economise labour to a large extent. If he can only do in practice what he claims to be able to achieve on paper—dry a maund of tea with three-quarters of a maund of wood—he has solved one of the problems which all planters have so long been desirous to achieve—economy of fuel in the manufacture of tea.

On the occasion of the visit of the Prince of Wales to Bankipur, near Patna, in January last, the Native Chiefs and gentry of Bahar sought to commemorate that event by a scheme for promoting instruction in practical science. For this purpose subscriptions were promised in a manner most creditable to the public spirit of the upper classes in that part of Bengal. Whether the proposed institution should take the form of an agricultural college at Pusa in Tirhut, or of a mechanical school at Dehri in Shahabad, near the head works of the Son Canal, or of an industrial institution at Bankipur itself, has since been the subject of much discussion. Both Pusa and Dehri possess peculiar advantages for such a purpose, but the wishes of the native subscribers pointed clearly to Bankipur as the place where the institution should be established. Such being the case, the co-operation of the Government has now been granted by Sir R. Temple, who finds in Bankipur "one particular advantage in the constant presence of the civil authorities and the educational officers who would naturally afford assistance." The promised subscriptions already amount to two lakhs of rupees (£20,000), of which half a lakh might be laid out on the necessary buildings, and the rest on endowments. Richard has therefore agreed "to allot Rs. 6,000 annually from Government funds as a grant-in-aid, on condition that the subscriptions invested in Government securities shall yield at least an equal sum." As to the course of studies to be pursued, he would leave it as much as possible to the subscribers, subject to the supervision of the Principal of the Patna College, and to the inspection of the Director of Public Instruction, or of the Inspector of Schools on his behalf. He also hopes that "a competent committee will be formed for the governance of the institution; that the technical training in useful arts and trades, smith's work, carpentry, and the like, will in the first instance be placed under the guidance of a European mechanical engineer; and that the passing of at least the primary scholarship standard will be prescribed as a test for the admission of scholars." It appears that the Committee would like to have a site close to the Patna College. As this site belongs to the Opium Department, Sir Richard will try to secure it for the institution, on condition that the plans for the building be submitted for the approval of Government.

FROM a recent Trade Return of the Turkish Arabia Agency, published in the Gazette of India, we learn that in April, 1875, an epidemic broke out in the marshes of the Euphrates, and Dr. Colvill, of that Agency, was deputed to inquire into the matter. He visited Hillah and travelled from thence down the Euphrates to Basrah, examining the sick on his way. The epidemic he pronounced to be veritable plague. This year it has been very rife at Hillah, and will doubtless acquire strength every year until it culminates in a great disaster. The disease, a malignant infectious typhoid fever, is bred and fostered in the marshes of Mesopotamia; indeed that country in the course of a few years will for the most part become one vast marsh, unless something be done to guide the waters of the Euphrates into its old channel. The fact is, the whole of the vast engineering scheme of the ancients for irrigating Mesopotamia has been so neglected that it will require the science of a decade to control the Euphrates, which now yearly discharges a great quantity of its surplus waters into the Tigris about three miles below the city of Baghdad. The level of the bed of the river Tigris is much lower than that of the Euphrates, and its waters were made use of to irrigate Mesopotamia formerly. One point is quite apparent, that as regards this disease, until some scheme is set on foot for draining the marshes, we shall have a yearly increasing mortality, and the danger of the disease spreading to India staring us in the face."

Mr. Nixon, the writer of the above remarks, declares that the Turkish embargo on the export of horses from Arabia has " greatly inconvenienced our stud arrangements in India, and is yearly losing the Turkish Government a large sum of money, as they lose the export tax. The trade is of course not stopped, as the exportation goes on from the Persian port of Mohamrah, to which place they are smuggled. This mischievous restriction, however, discourages the breeding of horses, and I think would be removed if a proper representation were made to the Porte on the subject, as it involves a regular loss of revenue, which Turkey can ill afford."

WE understand the new system of teaching infantry to fire at objects placed at unknown distances, in accordance with what would happen on active service, is to be extensively tried during the next cold season in India. The inspectors of musketry in the different divisions have been instructed to survey the country near all the European stations, for the purpose of selecting suitable ground, as free as possible from danger to the natives and cattle of the surrounding villages. The idea is to place rows of dummies on some particular line, then to march the troops up within firing range, and let them fire away, after judging the distance for themselves. Under right conditions, this system of instruction will be an invaluable aid to the trained marksman; but untaught or badly trained men should not be compelled to go through such a test.

ON Sunday the Times' Calcutta correspondent telegraphed the following summary of a Government Resolution published the day before in the Gazette of India:—

The Budget announced that the Secretary of State would borrow £2,640,000 in England. This now appears the estimate of cost in rupees of supplying the sum still remaining to be raised by the Council Bills on India, but he expects the entire loss by exchange to be largely in excess of the Budget estimate. The adverse rate of exchange has made this insufficient, and the home loan will be £4,000,000. The sum to be supplied to the Home Treasury from India will thus be reduced to £12,300,000, of which £3,344,134 has been already obtained. The Government cannot form an approximate estimate of the unfavourable effect on the Customs revenue. The unprecedentedly large opium crop in Bengal will probably cause the expenditure under the head of "opium" to exceed the estimate by £500,000. The increased amount borrowed will increase the charge for interest.

The resolution goes on to say that the financial prospects give cause for grave anxiety. The Local Governments and Heads of Departments have been instructed to stop all outlay which is not absolutely necessary or to which the Government is not committed, or a discontinuance of which would not cause a disproportionate loss. The expenditure on Extraordinary Public Works will be largely reduced. Municipal Corporations, Native States, and private persons are warned not to apply for loans except for purposes which cannot be postponed. Now expenditure will not be sanctioned unless it is really indispensable. The Viceroy invites the earnest co-operation of Local Governments and Heads of Departments in reducing the threatened deficit by every possible means, and the resolution concludes by stating that the present financial disorder is entirely due to the recent rapid fall in the value of silver in relation to gold.

According to the same authority the Viceroy has gone for a week to Narkanda, a place about four marches beyond Simla. Rumours of his bad health continue prevalent, but it is believed he will leave Simla finally about the 15th of October, and after visiting Kashmir will make a tour of the Punjab and Sind frontiers. Yákub Khan, the Envoy from Yarkand, is expected at Simla in about three weeks. It is reported that the only object of his mission is to bring a signed copy of the Treaty made with the Amír, Yákub Beg, last year.

THE Pioneer of last Saturday gives further details concerning Major Sandeman's Khelat Mission. A grand Darbar was held at Mastang on the 13th of July. All the Jalawans of the north and the Sarawan or southern Sirdars were present; also the Khan and Jam Ali, the present ruler of Las-Béla. The Khan acknowledged the Chiefs of the Jalawans and Sarawans, and gave killats to them and to Jam Ali. He promised to intercede with the Indian Government for the release of the imprisoned Jam of Las-Béla. Both sides profess themselves tired of fighting, and grateful to the British Government for interfering. Arrangements for permanently opening the Bolan Pass are proceeding favourably, and the autumn caravans will go by that route.

ACCORDING to latest telegrams there are some signs of the Afridis giving in. Many tribes have sent to ask for terms, but the remaining tribes are still hostile. They lately killed two British subjects, and are said to be fortifying the Kohat Pass. It is stated that they have a large force ready to bring into the field. Cholera still prevails at Marri. Fifteen European cases are reported, of which nine were fatal.

It appears from a recent telegram that the plague has broken out in Persia and Kurdistan, and it is stated that much alarm has been excited.

A SINGAPORE telegram of July 30 states that through the Maharajah of Johore's influence the Maharajah Lela, Pandut Indut, and others charged with complicity in the murder of the late Mr. Birch, have surrendered to the Governor of the Straits Settlements.

SIR SALAR JUNG left Paris on August 3 for Brindisi, whence he would embark for Bombay, so as to re-enter Haidarabad on the 27th. We trust that, in spite of the misfortune which befel him on his way hither, his Excellency has enjoyed his brief stay in England, and made good use of those powers of observation which few Eastern statesmen possess to a like degree. According to the Times correspondent, Sir Salar Jung's two days in Paris were busily employed in sight-seeing and the taking of mental notes. On his visit to Notre Dame he was "much struck by one of the persons charged with exhibiting what is called the 'treasure' showing him the coronation robe of the first Emperor, and adding 'This is the robe Napoleon I. wore at his coronation, and which the Emperor Napoleon IV. at present in England, will wear when he comes over to his coronation.' 'One must never say this or that will occur, nor call any one King who cannot dwell in his own country,' replied Sir Salar, philosophically." He seems to have taken great interest in the performance of La Juive at the National Opera House. We are told that "the justice of his observations during his excursions struck everybody with him." His impressions of Paris do not seem to have convinced him of the truth of Victor Hugo's saying that Paris is "the brain of the world." The comparison which he drew between the French and English capitals was by all accounts in favour of the latter. "He had been much struck with the severe aspect and the incessant activity of London, which has left in his mind the recollection of the capital of a people with a steady destiny, while Paris seemed to him to have been created for pleasure rather than for enduring and serious enterprises." Our French neighbours appear to have anything but clear notions about the identity of the great Indian Vizier. "For instance, behind Sir Salar Jung some one said he was an Oriental prince who had revolted, escaped from Turkish captivity and been wounded in doing so. Many other such solutions of more or less ingenious absurdity were

By the death of Professor Childers, on the 27th July, Oriental scholarship has lost one of its brightest ornaments. Dying at the early age of thirty-seven, Mr. Childers had already gained a European celebrity as perhaps the foremost Páli scholar of his day. To the language of the sacred writings of Buddhism in Ceylon and Burmah he had devoted himself with a success which some years ago obtained for him the Professorship of Páli at University College, London, and the post of assistant librarian at the India-oflice. For years past he had been engaged on a Páli dictionary, the first work of the kind which has ever been carried out. It was only the other day that the Saturday Review congratulated Professor Childers on "having completed a great and useful work," which has "laid a broad and useful foundation for the extension of Páli learning." Unfortunately, the labour bestowed on this masterpiece of scholarly research overtaxed his strength; his health gave way some months ago; and his death, as the Home News remarks, "adds another name to the list of those martyrs to the cause of science, whose services the world at large can never appreciate at their full value."

There is hope for the afflicted in the latest movements of the silver market, and the improved rate at which the Government tenders for bills on India have just been accepted would almost seem to warrant the belief that the silver panic of which Lord Salisbury lately spoke is beginning to abate. On Wednesday last Mexican dollars were selling at 50d. per oz., and the general demand for silver appears still to exceed the supply. In the course of this week we shall probably hear what Lord G. Hamilton and Messrs. Goschen and Fawcett have to say on this subject, when the Indian Budget comes up for discussion. Meanwhile we are glad to hear that M. Cernuschi's proposal of a double standard of value, at the normal ratio of  $15\frac{1}{2}$  of silver to one of gold, is finding favour in many quarters where resistance was to be feared. It is something to know that the soundness of his theory is not disputed by most of those who still shake their heads over its practical drawbacks. The results of a European conference assembled in London would at least tend to show whether the alleged drawbacks had any real existence outside the brains of believers in financial use and want. To ensure the full success of the double standard system, it ought to be adopted not in one or two countries only, but in Europe at large. Hence M. Cernuschi's demand for a general conference; a demand which, we are glad to learn, has already been supported by the powerful interests represented in the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce.

WE understand that the Committee of the Hope Grant Memorial have handed to the funds of the Soldiers' Daughters' Home, five hundred guineas for the purchase of a perpetual presentation in memoriam of the late General Sir James Hope Grant, G.C.B., President of the Home, the right of presentation to be exercised by Lady Grant during her lifetime, and at her decease by the officer in actual command of the 9th Queen's Royal Lancers for the time being. There are always a very large number of candidates for participation in the benefits of this excellent institution; therefore, contributions 7) the funds are urgently invited. An annual subscription of one guinea, or in the case of a clergyman, of half a guinea, entitles to one vote for the year of payment.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

TUESDAY, August 8, 1876.

INDIAN SURVEYS-II.

Ā

DURING 1873-74 fifteen parties were at work on the Revenue Survey of India; eight in the Punjab and North-West Provinces, and the remainder in the Central Provinces, Bombay, Bengal, and Assam. Among them they surveyed and mapped 19,901 square miles, besides preliminary work over 9,422 square miles for the next season. Four cadastral surveys were resumed in the North-West Provinces, and the work done there covered 1,501,398 fields, averaging 1:16 of an acre each. With the help afforded by the Mathra survey the superintending engineer of the Light Provincial Railway was enabled to dispense with any other method of determining the best point for the proposed railway across the Jumna and through Mathra. The survey party in the Lakhimpur district of Assam met with a good deal of sickness and hardship. One detachment was wrecked on its way down the Dihing, and Mr. Swyny died of fever through remaining too long at his post. In the lower ranges of the Naga Hills the india-rubber tree and the teaplant abound, a kind of brick-tea being made from the latter, while the former yields a handsome revenue to the Nagas, who tap the trees and collect the revenue in the cold season. Many of the trees, however, are killed through overtapping, or cut Coal of good down to save the trouble of climbing them. quality is found at the foot of the hills, but owing to high prices and scanty labour it has not yet been worked at a profit. Across the Patkoi Range numbers of Burmese and Singphos go to and fro every year; but as the traders want guns, powder, and opium in exchange for their gongs, dhaos, and amber earrings, and the Indian Government forbids the sale of such wares, there is little business done on the British side.

The progress of the Geological Survey was somewhat hindered by the weakness of the working staff, Dr. Oldham and several of his officers being absent on special duty or sick leave, while the death of Dr. Stoliczka on his way home from Kashghar deprived the service of one of its ablest and most zealous members. One great monument of his varied powers, the "Palæontologia Indica," is to be carried on by his trusty helpmate, Dr. Waagen. Besides acting for Dr. Oldham, Mr. Medlicott paid a special visit to the Garo Hills, and discovered a strong seam of fair coal in the secondary rocks. In examining the Sewalikh range east of the Jumna, Mr. Theobald convinced himself that the rocks composing it belong to the older Nahan group. Mr. Wynne's researches in the Trans-Indus saltcountry showed it to embrace 1,000 square miles between the Indus and the Punjab Frontier, with Kohat for its northern and Bannu for its southern boundary. Beds of salt more than 1,230 feet thick in some places are known to exist, and nowhere has the bottom of the salt been yet seen, though the mines have been worked since 1650. Much of the salt is remarkably pure, though less saline in taste than the Cis-Indus salt. It appears that this rock-salt dates from the old tertiary periods. Under Mr. King's supervision progress was made in exploring the Beddanadol coal field; but no good coal had yet been discovered. The search for gold was prosecuted by Mr. King in Wynád and by Mr. Foote in the Dambal hills of Dhárwar, but to no very promising result. Mr. Hughes's renewed examination of the iron-beds in Kamaon proved that there is abundance of ore and flux and fuel for operations on a limited scale. The borings made at his recommendation in a part of the Warora coal-field showed the existence of beds many feet thick in convenient neighbourhood to the iron ores. Nothing came of the borings for coal in the Narbada district, though the depth attained was nearly 500 feet.

Some work was also done in Bundelkhand and Rajputána, the greater part of which latter region still forms a blank in the geological map of India. Mr. Mallet finished his inspection of the coal deposits in British Sikhim and the Western Duars. Dr. Oldham in his Report regrets that his department has not yet succeeded in completing a general sketch map of Indian geology; owing chiefly to the call made on his officers for special work, not always of a strictly geological kind, as well as to sickness and absence. Many isolated areas have been examined, but the gaps still left render it impossible to correlate the rocks in one part with those elsewhere. The Records, issued quarterly, contained a number of papers on the iron ores of Kamaon, on raw materials for iron smelting, on the building and ornamental stones of India, on potash salts, and manganese ores; besides descriptions of northern Hazáribágh, the neighbourhood of Marri, the Garo Hills, the Luni Pathán country west of Sind, and the Southern Godávari country. Some valuable collections of fossils from the Sewalikh Range, the Rawal Pindi and Jhilam districts, the Milam Pass to the north of Kamaon, and other places, were forwarded to the Museum by officers of the Survey.

The meteorology of 1874 offers some curious contrasts to that of its predecessor. The south-west monsoon was unusually stormy both in its beginning and its close. At first the rainfall was very scanty in southern and western Bengal, in the north of Orissa, and on the Arakan coast, while elsewhere it was unusually heavy. In September and October rain fell heavily all over Bengal. On the whole the rainy season for that year resembled in many points those of 1870 and 1872. By means of the results obtained for those years Mr. Blanford was enabled to forecast with success the character of the later rains in 1874. The preparations made at Camorta in the Nicobars for observing the solar eclipse of April 6, 1875, were entirely frustrated by the thick clouds which obscured the sun during the whole period of total eclipse. In the early part of 1875 Mr. Blanford made a tour of inspection throughout Bombay, Berar, the Central and North-Western Provinces, the Punjab, Oudh, and Madras; thus gaining full information about the different systems used in each province, their working and respective cost.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I observe that you have more than once called the attention of those Indian officers who have received their bonus compensation without subscribing to the Phillips Testimonial to the claims which Colonel Phillips has on their gratitude. As no one has worked more strenuously in the cause than Colonel Phillips, I regret with you that there should be any remissness on the part of the Indian officers concerned in acknowledging the signal services rendered by Colonel Phillips in their behalf. But while I say this, I know there are many others besides myself who must feel, in consequence of the scant justice awarded them, that Colonel Phillips and those working with him appear to have stopped short just as his long-continued efforts were about to meet with the success they merited. After all the agitation of the question for the last twelve years or so, it was clear when once the assembly of the Committee of the House of Commons was allowed last spring, that a fair and reasonable adjustment of the case would be to the interest of both the Government and the claimants of Bonus Compensation. Of these claimants there were two classes. There were the seniors, who had received annuities from the Government on the amalgamation of the armies, and there were the juniors, who had received no such annuities. If I am rightly informed, Colonel Phillips and the officers whose opinions were asked by the committee as to what would be the fairest adjustment of the claims presented were all officers in receipt of the special annuities. say "special," because had the amalgamation not taken place, these annuities would have had no existence. Although there could have been but one reply to the question asked by the committee, some of whose members, by the way, knew absolutely nothing of the matter, and which reply was probably given by Colonel Phillips and the senior officers acting with them, viz., that of payment by fixed scale according to the rank held, it was reported that failing such adjustment of the claims, Colonel Phillips and the officers acting with him said that the claimants for Bonus would be satisfied with the repayment of such sums, without deduction, as they had paid up to February 18, 1861, for the purpose of purchasing out their seniors. When it is remembered that purchase in the English army was illegal, and that it was legal in the Indian army, having been expressly sanctioned by the Court of Directors, it is at once apparent what a "screaming farce" is this so-called act of justice to some of those Indian officers who have been pressing their claims for a dozen years and more, as compared with the liberal adjustment by the country of the purchase claims of the officers of the English army. To the junior officers who were claimants the decision arrived at was neither fair nor reasonable. It is clear that they were in a totally different position to those who had received annuities, but this in the adjustment of their claims was never considered.

In regard to my own remissness in not having as yet remitted my percentage to the Testimonial, I can only say that I only last week received the decision of the committee in my case forwarded to them immediately on the publication of the last Government order on the subject. This decision contains no order for the payment of the sum now due to me by reason of the concession lately made to the claimants, a sum which I may as well say at once is under £5, and the munificence of which as a concession after years of waiting is quite overwhelming. It would be interesting to know what the annuities if funded were worth to those who voluntarily accepted them. If added to the sum now paid in full for the purchase of seniors, it is quite within the bounds of probability that the officers who received annuities are better, if not as well off, as if the amalgamation had not taken place. It is far otherwise with those who received no annuities.

What I should be glad to learn is—1. When my award of under £5 will be paid me, whether by application in person or by letter to the India Office. 2. Whether the percentage of one and half for the Testimonial is to be paid on the sum awarded by the recent concession, or on the whole sum awarded previously and now.

As I should be very sorry to be a defaulter in the matter, considering Colonel Phillips's long sustained efforts in the cause, I should feel greatly obliged to you or any of your correspondents for any information in the matter.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, X.

[The percentage of one and a half is asked for only on the sums awarded under the last concession. The case of "X.," and many other officers is hard, but the committee plainly implied that no further concession could be made, and Colonel Phillips had to choose between what was offered and nothing at all. "X." is wrong, moreover, in supposing that all the officers consulted by the Committee had received special annuities.—Ed. A.I.M.]

THE actual loss on the Secretary of State's Bills on India to the end of June has been Rs. 41,18,310, being Rs. 2,34,201 above the estimated loss.

HAZARISTAN.—III.

The Firozkohi country is traversed by two routes between Herat and Cabul, the northern one proceeding by Muzara Derzi to Ghiganuk, Bamean, and Cabul, and the southern by the valley of the Heri river to Dowlutgar, whence routes branch to Bamean and Cabul, Cabul direct, and Ghuzni.

This is the poorest and most mountainous part of the Eimâk country; nevertheless water, forage and fuel are abundant, numerous horses are available for carriage—for the mountain glens afford pasture to great herds of hardy mountain galloways, sheep innumerable graze on all the hills, and one of these roads, bad as they are, had been traversed very recently by an Afghan force accompanied by light guns. Both roads are used by merchants, though unfrequently, owing to the predatory habits of the tribes through which they pass.

West of the Firozkohi live the Hazareh Zaidnat, in the mountainous tract between the Moorghab river and the Valley of Herat. These are their northern and southern boundaries respectively, and to the east and west lie the districts of the Firozkohi and Jamshedis. The principal districts are:—On the north-west, Ushareh —chief places, Ushareh and Poursheikh; east, Gulistan—chief place Gulistan; south, Killa Nao—chief place, Killa Nao. This tribe also occupied till lately the districts of Pungdeh and Marchah on the Moorghab river, from which they have now been ousted by the Turkomans. They have also scattered settlements as far east as Karchu, between Sirpul and Kurane. This was once the most important of the Eimak tribes, both as regards numbers, wealth, and reputation for hardihood and rapine. Successive blows, however, at the hands of the Afghan Governor of Herat in 1847, and of the Persian Governor of Khorassan in 1857, followed by the encroachments of the Turkomans, have greatly weakened the tribe. still, however, muster about 100,000 souls, and can turn out five thousand formidable horsemen, and as many footmen. They possess in the numerous valleys of the southern feeders of the Moorghab river admirable and extensive pastures, supporting vast herds of horses and horned cattle. These valleys are susceptible of extensive cultivation by utilising the irrigation of the streams. Their country is traversed by the important route from Herat to Maimunna, which was before referred to, with the alternative route through the Jamshedis, as one of the three main routes crossing the Hazaristan. This route, though more difficult than the alternative one to the west in the Jamshedi country, is more generally used by traffic on account of its being further removed from the dreaded Turkomans. It passes by Killa Nao and Gulistan, and continues, after crossing the Pirbund unge at Kara Jungle, by the Firozkohi Valley of Khoja Kundoo. The remarks made regarding the routes passing through the Firozkohi country apply also to this route. This tribe pays a small tribute in kind to the Government of Herat, and renders military service in case of war.

The Jamshedis inhabit west of the Zeidnat, and are, like that tribe, contained between the Herat district on the south, and the Moorghab river on the north. To the west they have the Salor Turkomans. The principal districts are :- On the north-west, Khushk—chief place Khushk; on the east, Moorghab—chief place Bala Moorghab; on the south, Sirchudhma—chief place Karukh. They have also settlements in the northern valleys of the Pirbund range, Kirta, Takht Khatun, and others.

The Jamshedis are the smaller of the Eimak tribes, numbering only some 60,000 souls; but they can turn out 6,000 horse, who are the dread of the whole eastern border of the Persian Government of Khorassau. They extend their raids as far south as Scistan, and, with the connivance of the Zeidnat and Taimuree Eimäks located on the Persian borders they penetrate as far into Khorassan as Poor-

The Jamshedi country is open and fertile as that of the Taimunuis, but they are unable to cultivate their best lands, in the valley of the Khushk river, by reason of the Turkoman incursions. For the same reason the Badshahi (royal) route from Herat to Maimunna, passing by Khushk, Tourshukh (of the Zeidnat) and Bala Moorghab, is almost disused. The route is an easy one, passing through what might be a fertile country; as it is, water, forage and fuel are abundant, and large droves of horses, horned cattle and sheep pasture in the valleys and on the dividing ranges. The Jamshedis pay tribute in kind and render military service to the Government of Herat.

The Hazarehs, occupying a colder and more rugged country than the Eimaks, are naturally a more barbarous and poorer race. For the same reason, valley being cut off from valley by formidable mountain passes, they live more scattered, under petty chiefs, and have less national and tribal unity. For this cause they have always been the prey of their neighbours

The Afghans have ousted them low lying and more fertile tracts in their possession. The Uzbegs, previous to their subjection to the Afghan Government in 1851, used to carry them off by hundreds into slavery, on the plea of being "Shia," infidels and to make continual inroads for this purpose into their hills. Their Eimak cousins, being Imris, or the rival Mohammedan sect, used also to make raids upon them in this view, and they were even sold into slavery by each other in the course of their internecine feuds, and sometimes actually by their own chiefs, when called upon to pay tribute to, or desirous of propitiating some powerful Uzbeg Chief of Turkestan.

Thus, notwithstanding the possession of a country over 200 miles in length, by an average breadth of nearly 100 miles, their population does not probably even now, notwithstanding the suppression of the slave trade for many years past, by the Afghans, much exceed 400,000 souls. As before mentioned, their country is exceedingly rich in minerals, especially lead and sulphur. Their mountains also afford pasture to countless flocks of sheep, and large herds of horses and horned cattle graze in the valleys. In the more sheltered spots considerable quantities of fruit are grown, but not more grain is raised than is required for the consumption of the inhabitants. Water and fodder abound, but fuel is in parts, very deficient; a serious matter, as the cold in the winter months is The country contains the head waters of the Moorghab, Hari, Helmund, Argandab, Logur, Khulun, and Kunduz rivers, but these upper courses are mere mountain torrents, incapable (save the Helmund and Argandab, in the Jakuri country) of affording irrigation. The people are not nomadic, like the Eimaks, but live very much scattered in small hamlets.

The principal divisions of the Hazarehs are as follows, commencing, as in the case of the Eimâks, from the south:—1. Jakuri, Deh Chopan branch, Deh Pollah branch. 2. Deh Kundi. 3. Deh Zangi, Sirjungle branch, Sugdeh branch. 4. Mongols. 5. Deh 6. Foladi. 7. Broken tribes. 8. Shaikh Ah.

The following notices give all the information that at present exists regarding each of the above.

The Jakuri inhabit the district comprised between the Gulkob range upon the east, a feeder of the Helmund called the Khud Rud on the west; the Tereen river (a feeder of the Helmund), and the Candahar district on the south, and Bisut of the Foladis, and the Deb Kundi on the north. Their country, by comparison with that inhabited by the other Hazarehs, is comparatively flat and fertile. It is watered by the Helmund and its feeder the Khud Rud, and by the Argandab, and is susceptible of high cultivation by utilising their waters for irrigation. As it is the Jakuris export a certain quantity of grain to Ghuzni, but their chief staples of trade are clarified butter and woollen fabrics, both the produce of their numerous flocks and herds. Their manufactures of the latter are famous. They also export lead, sulphur, and antimony. Their traffic is entirely by barter for cloth and other necessaries. The principal districts are:—On the north, Argandab—chief places, Utala, Sang Masha; east, Great Nawur—chief places Nani, Karabagh. N.B. Great Nawur is on the east watershed of the Gulkoh range which separates it from Little Nawur in Argandab. Being level and fertile it has been greatly encroached upon by the Afghans, and is reckoned among the districts belonging to the Government of Ghuzni. West, Gujeristan-chief places, Gujerista, Potun. South Malistan—chief place, Chakmak.

The total population of these discrete, west of the Golkoh range, amounts to about 60,000 souls, and can turn out on an emergency some 8,000 ill-armed horse and foot. The tribe has a low military reputation, partly because so broken up into petty septs as to be able to offer but little resistance to the Afghans. The district of Great Nawur pays £10,000 revenue in cash to the Government of Ghuzni, and as a great portion of the population is now Afghan it should be exclude from the proposed lease. The division of Malistan pays £2,000 cash revenue to the Government at Candahar, and Argandab and Gujeristan pay occasional tribute in kind to the Government of Ghuzni. The entire tribe owes military service to one or other of these Governments. The Jakuri country is traversed by the direct route from Candahar to Balkh, before referred to as crossing the Hazaristan by Deh Kunde and Deh Zangi and the valley of the Balkh river. route is very direct, and can be traversed by an unencumbered horse-man in seven days from Candahar to Balkh. The route before mentioned as running from Herat to Dowletgar, and, branching to Ghuzni, also traverses the Jakuri country by Gujeristan and Little

The Deh Kundi inhabit the hills north-west of the Jakun. They are bounded on the north by the Siah Koh range, on the west by the Killa Moossa river (falling into the Helmund), on the north-east by the Deh Zangi, and on the south-east and south by the Jakuri. Thus they border on the Ferozekohi and Taimunnee Eimaks upon the north, north-west and west. They are, however, separated from them by the Siah Koh range and by a great spur which that range throws off to the south. Their districts in the Siah Koh are lofty and barren, but they possess many beautiful valleys nestling in the southern spurs of that range. Shut off from all communication with Afghanistan, neither trader nor tax-gatherer visits them, and they live upon the produce of their flocks and their scanty cultivation, obtaining such trifling articles from the outside world as they absolutely require from the caravans that pass through Bameau, by barter of their felts and carpets. They pay neither revenue nor tribute, and the only allegiance they acknowledge is to the common chief of themselves and the Jakuri, with which tribe they are classed under the general term of Pusht Koh (behind the mountain), as being south of both ranges of the Hindu Kush (Safed Koh and Sah Koh) Their country is traversed by the route from Candahar to Balkh before mentioned, which, however, though easy and direct, has not yet come into general mercantile use, on account of its insecurity. Though their country abounds in mineral wealth, they are unacquainted with its value; and their sole industry is their scanty cultivation, their sole property their heads of horned cattle and sheep, and droves of hardy mountain horses.

The principal districts of the tribe are—on the north, Sangtakht; on the east, Sheikh Meian; on the west, Hasht Ossia; on the south, Meidan (none of the scattered hamlets of these divisions attain to even the dignity of a village)—chief place, Meidan. The total population of the above is under 40,000 souls, and the tribe can turn out some 5,000 horsemen.

North-east of the Deh Kundi, and separated from the Jakuri by the south-western districts of Bisut, lie the Deh Zangi. This tribe occupies the northern watershed of the Siah Koh and both watersheds of the Safed Koh, their settlements being in the valleys of the two great feeders of the Heri river, the Sirjungle and the Lal rivers. They are bounded to the north by the Deh Surkh, to the north-west by the Mongols, to the west by the Firozkohi Eimâks, to the south-west by the Deh Kundi, and to the south and east by Bisut. Their country is the wildest and most mountainous of all the Hazareh districts, they have little or no cultivation, but their mountains are covered with endless flocks of sheep, and the valleys afford sufficient expanse of pasture for droves of horses and horned cattle. The tribe possesses the highest military reputation of all the Hazarehs, and, till checked by the Afghaus, rendered the great Bamean route untraversable by caravans without payment of black mail. They pay an occasional trifling tribute in kind to the Governor of Bamean, but their allegiance to Cabul is of the loosest, and they render no military service. Their country is traversed by the route from Candahar to Balkh, before mentioned, and also by one of the routes mentioned as running from Herat to Cabul, Bamean and Ghuzni, through the districts of the Ferezkohis. This route forks at Dowletyas, one branch follows the valley of the Sir jungle stream, and traverses the Deh Surkh country to Bamean; another follows the valley of the Lal stream through Deh Zangi, and goes on to Cabul by Bisut; the third turns south-east through Gunu-eristan and Little Nawar of the Jakjs, and runs to Ghuzni direct.

The principal districts of the tribe are:—On the north, Sir Kul—chief place, Gurghai; on the east, Tagow—chief place, Bor; in the centre, Lal—chief place, Lal; on the west, Sirjungle—chief place, Sirjungle; on the south, Woras—chief place, Paiab. The total population of the above is about 60,000 souls, and they can turn out some 10,000 men by a levée en masse. Lead mines abound in these districts, and some traffic is carried on with Bamean in cattle and wool.

North-west of the Deh Zangi lies the country of the Mongols, called also Sehrai, or inhabitants of the desert. They occupy the highlands between the Sufedkoh and the Tiround of Turkestan, being bounded to the north by Sirpul, to the east by the Deh Suzkh, and to the south and west by the Firozkohi Eimâks. Their country is traversed by the northern of the routes before mentioned, as running from Herat to Cabul. This route, first traversing the Firozkohi country, then crosses that of the Mongols by Ghanimut to Deb Hissar and Ghiganuk, whence it goes on by the Deh Suzkh districts, and Shehr Berber to Pamean. The Mongol districts, though lofty, are comparatively level and fertile, and abound in rich pastures. The tribe is nominally dependent upon Sirpul, but pays no tribute, and has little communication of any kind with the outer world. Their chief wealth is in horses. The principal districts are:—North-east, Chezras—principal place, Deb Hissar; south-west, Ghanimut—principal place, Ghanimut. The numbers and military strength of this tribe are not even approximately known.

East of the Mong is inhal it the Deh Surkh, a kindred tribe to the Deh Zangi, and known, with them, under the generic name of Berberi. Their semicments are on the head waters of the river of Balkh, at the source of which are situated the ruins of the ancient and famous city of Shehr Berber, the seat of the Berber or Mongol dynasty. The whole of the scattered tribes of Hazareh Eimâks are still known in Persia by the name of Berber. The route just meustill known in Persia by the name of Berber. The route just mentioned as crossing the Mongol country also passes through that of the Deh Sukh by Shehr Berber to Bamean. And the route before noticed as running from Candahar to Balkh, through the country of the Jakuri, Deh Kundi and Deh Zange continues down the river of Balkh by the western districts of the Deh Surkh. The Deh Surkh are bounded on the north by Sirjungle, Deh Zangi, and other scattered Hazarehs dependent on Khulur and Sirpool; on the east by the districts of Bamean; on the west by the Mongols; and on the south by the Deh Zangi. Their principal districts are, from the east:—Hazaret Ali—chief place. Behr Berber: Yak Oling—chief place. Deh grat Ali—chief place Shahr Berber; Yak Oling—chief place, Deh Surkh; Z.valuj—chief place, Zwaluj; Zawnuj—chief place, Zawnuj—these being successive valleys extending along or debouching on to the course of the river of Balkin

The numbers of the Deh Surkh amount to about 50 000 souls. Like the Deh Zangi they pay occasional cribute in kind. They have little cultivation and no trade, though their courtry abounds in minerals. They occasionally barter the produce of their endless flocks and herds for necessaries obtained from the traders passing through Bamean.

East of the Deh Zangi lies the country of Baut, occupied by the various sections of the tribe of Foladi. This decriet is bounded on the north by Bamean, on the east by Cabul, on the west by Deh Zangi, and on the south by the Jakuri. Thou, it meantainous, it is the most thickly inhabited and best cultivated of all those in possession of the Hazarehs. The Foladi, however, like the Jakuri, have been gradually expelled by the Afghans from many of their most fertile low-lying tracts. Bisut pays about £10,000 cash revenue to Cabul, which, however, as is generally the case with the Hazareh and Eimäk revenue, requires to be collected by armed detachments at considerable expense to the Government. The tribe is of low military repute, though strongest in numbers of all the Hazarehs, having suffered less than any other tribe from the slave trade. The principal districts are: - On the north, Karzara and Ferai Khulm-chief place, Karzar; on the east, Khaiza Bad Assian—chief place, Sir-i-ab; in the centre, Sang Nishandeh-chief place, Koh Baran; on the west, Jergai Barjehgai-chief place, Kerrin; on the south, Ghiru Maini-chief place, Ghiru Maini.

Bisut is traversed by the various branches of the great route leading from Cabul to Bamean, and thence by Syghan and Kamard, to Khulur and Balkh. This route, before referred among the three main routes traversing the Hazaristan, leaves Cabul by the valley of the Cabul river, then crosses the Pass of Unai on to the plains of Yurt and Khirgu, from which it descends into the valley of the Helmund at Gindur Dewar, and either leaves it directly by the Siah Beg Pass into the valley, Karzar, or follows it up stream to the junction of the Siah Sung stream, which drains the valley of Karzar. Turning up that valley to the north of the route presently leaves it again by the Hajiguk Pass into the parallel valley of Kalu to the west. From Kalu one route proceeds to Bamean direct, by the valley of Mori, and crosses a mountain spur into that of Popchi by the Shuter Gusdun or by the Huft Peelan Pass. or avoids both Passes by a long detour west. It then follows the Popchi stream down to its junction—at Shinghur, four miles east of Bamean—with the river of Bamean, the southern feeder of the river of Kunduz. Thence it turns up the river to Bamcan. Another route from Kalu follows the Kalustream down to its junction with the river of Bamcan at Zohak, nine miles east of Bamean, traversing the Pimuri defile. A third route follows the Karzar valley up to its head, and crosses the Irak Pass into that of Irak. It then follows the Irak stream to its junction with the Bamean river six miles east of Zohak and thirteen miles east of Bamean. This Irak village also communicates to the east, over a pass, with that of Ghorbund, between the Hindu Kush and Pugman ranges. The Ghorbund route between Cabul and Turkestan was before mentioned in enumerating the passes of the Hindu Kush.

THE CAREER OF LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.—II. (From the Times of India, 10th April, 1876.)

In 1856 Sir Robert Napier was at home. June of 1857 found him in Calcutta, and shortly afterwards on his way up to Cawnpore, as chief of the Adjutant-General's Department and Military Secretary, with Sir J. Outram, in which capacity he served throughout all the operations which led to the first relief of the Lucknow garrison. Indeed, it was to him, till Outram arrived, that Lord Canning had looked as the officer most fitted to command the entered in the capacity has although according terprise. He remained in that garrison, where, although severely wounded, his experience was of the greatest value in the various engineering operations which sustained the defence until the final relief of the beleaguered post by Sir Colin Campbell. Colonel Napier was appointed a Brigadier to command the Engineer Brigade at the siege of Lucknow in March 1858. After the fall of the city, he projected the three posts of Muchee Bhawun, the Residency, and the Iron Bridge, with the three lines of road through the city of Lucknow to enable them to be held, and the city to be overawed, by a minimum garrison, with the consequent relief of other troops for field operations. "These works," said Lord Clyde, "set free and at my disposal some 12,000 men." In June 1858 Sir Robert Napier was appointed a Brigadier-General to succeed Sir Hugh Rose, proceeding on sick leave, in command of the Central India Field Force after the fall of Calpee; but Sir Hugh Rose having recovered sufficiently to retain command, Brigadier-General Sir Robert Napier served under him in command of the 2nd Brigade Central India Field Force at the action of Morar, for which he was specially mentioned. After dark on the 18th June, Sir Robert Napier received orders to start in pursuit of the enemy with Lightfoot's troop of Bombay horse artiflery, and such detachments of native cavalry as were available, viz., some 200 of detachments of native cavalry as were available, wz., some 200 of the 3rd Hydrabad Cavalry, 150 of the Bombay 3rd Cavalry, and a squadron of a newly-raised corps, "Meade's Horse;" but deeming it advisable to have an escort of British cavalry for his guns, on his own responsibility he added to his force a squadron of the 14th Dragoous; and, moving off, marched throughout the 19th, and during some portion of the night bivouacked for a few hours at the village of Samowlee. At 4 A.M. the next morning, passing on to Joura Allapore, intercepted camel sowars revealed the presence of the Gwalion gray, from fifteen to twenty thousand strong drawn the Gwalier army, from fifteen to twenty thousand strong, drawn up for muster. The approach to the enemy's position was covered by rising ground, which prevented the advance of the small handful of British troops being perceived. Looking over the crest of this ridge, the scene presented in the immediate vicinity of the virlage of Joura Allapore was an array of artillery guns in position, accompanied by a well-supplied park, supported on both flanks by lines and masses of infantry, the outer flank being covered by a cloud of cavalry. It was a critical momen, hesitation would have been fatal, the olds were fearful, but the Digitized by this ridge, the scene presented in the immediate vicinity of the vilender knew how to face them. At a gallop, supported by the cavalry, Lightfoot's battery entered into action. The panic of the er der knew how to face them. enemy was instantaneous; he broke, and, before time could be gained for thought or rally, the horse artillery and cavalry, led by their chief, dashed into the enemy's artillery, which was captured to the last gun, and men and horses of that small band continued in pursuit until the horses could go no further. On the morning of the 26th Sir Robert Napier rejoined the force at Gwalior, bringing in his train through the streets of Morar twenty-six pieces of captured ordnance. On the 29th Sir Robert Napier took over command of the Central India Field Force from Sir Hugh Rose. Although no organised body presented itself in the Gwalior territory, Central India was overrun by armed men, the scattered remnants of broken armies. Our troops had suffered from the extreme heat of the hottest of seasons; the casualties from heat apoplexy and the effects of the sun on the unseasoned constitutions of young English boys had been very great. The shelter at Morar had been Every exertion was made to get the regiments under cover, but Napier had to remain in the field, and commanded in person at the capture of the fort of Pource, which was reduced by bombardment in September, 1858. In December the news reached Gwalior that Ferozeshah had broken across the Doab, crossed the Chumbul, and was making for Central India to join Tantia Topee. The Gwalior Durbar with its Political Agent insisted that Gwalior was his ability of that his route would be between that six and Dhele his object, or that his route would be between that city and Dholepore, with the view of gaining Jeypore. Colonel Sir Robert Napier waited patiently, but ready for immediate movement, until positive information could be secured of Ferozeshah's actual route; then, with instinctive impulse, in direct opposition to the views of the Political Agent, he moved off on the night of the 13th with a battery, two squadrons of the 14th Hussars, a newly-raised regiment of Mahratta Horse, and 200 Highlanders of the 71st mounted on camels, towards Duttia, within a few miles of which a dâk-bundle of the 15th decided in the 15th deci galow still blazing indicated the presence of a hostile force. galow still blazing indicated the presence of a hostile force. Stragglers verified the fact of Ferozeshah's having just passed in the direction of Chumdeyree. Then, although suffering from the effects of climate, Sir Robert Napier clung to the enemy without ceasing, and followed him at a rate of over thirty miles a day until the morning of the 17th of December, when opportunity offering he placed himself, by a short cut, with his dragoons and the Mahratta Horse, right across the path of Ferozeshah's force, which was advancing to the attack and plunder of Banode. In ignorance of the presence of any foe, the enemy, covering about a mile of front, confidently advanced, and on first perceiving blue coats under a grove, mistook them for police. But the trumpets of the 14th troopers sounding the charge, and the cheers of the British line as it closed for action, availed to the arguments British force and penis stricken they hade revealed to the enemy the British force, and panic-stricken, they broke and fled, followed by the 14th and Mahratta Horse, which inflicted upon them the utmost loss that could be effected by the few troops engaged, and captured all the elephants that had accompanied the rebels from Oudh. Nor had the enemy rest even then, for the remnants, after accomplishing a forced march of great length through those jungle tracts, were again attacked by another detachment composed of Bombay native infantry under Major Rice. The wanderings of Tantia Topee, and of the different British columns which for months warched and counter-marched in pursuit through Central India, would themselves form a long and interesting subject for a narrative, which, however, we cannot enter upon here. Sir R. Napier himself proceeded to Seronje, and with that thoroughness of execution which always characterised him, never relaxed from the direction of the field operations, which resulted in the surrender of Rajah Maun Singh of Marwar, the capture and death of Tantia Topee, and the dispersion of the remains of his force under the Rao Sahib in the Seronje jungles in 1859.

A new and distant field of operations next opened before Sir Robert Napier. In 1866 the small British and French allied force landed on the coast of China, and penetrated to the capital of the most populous empire in the world. The genius which conceived the master-stroke of the campaign was that of Napier. The responsibility of the campaign, and of the acceptation of the project of his subordinate general, rested with Sir Hope Grant, to whom all honour be given. The equipment of the troops from India was entrusted to Sir R. Napier; the flank march from Pahtong, preceding the battle of Sinho, the assault on the upper Taku fort on the left bank of the Peiho, resulting in its capture, with the immediate fall of all the others, and the erection of batteries at the Anting gate of Pekin, to ensure an entrance in case of peace not being decided on, were conceived by him, and carried out on the part of the British by the 2nd or Napier's Division. The China War over, Napier returned to India, and for five years, from 1860 to 1865, occupied the post of Military Member of the Council of the Governor-General. In the administration of Lords Canning, Elgin, and Lawrence, the records testify to his untiring exertions to improve the condition of the British soldier, but more especially to secure for him in the plains the benefit of two-storied barracks with accommodation for families, an increase of accommodation for the troops in the hills, the opening out of communications, including the extension of railway lines, the improvement of our defences, and the re-modelling of the armament. Sir R. Napier always urged the necessity of improving the position and standing of the native officers, and allotting to them commands equal to the charge of a troop or company. He urged the necessity of retaining regimental officers with regiments, and of making their positions with their corps good enough to induce them to remain, instead of seeking to better their condition in political or civil employ. From the Council Chamber of the Governor-General, Sir Robert Napier in 1866 passed to the Chiefship of the army of this presidency. As Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, he maintained its efficiency and discipline, and cherished its honour. The troops were prepared confidently to follow him on any expedition.

When her Majesty's Government resolved on the despatch of a military force to Abyssinia in 1867, Sir Robert Napier was nominated to the command. From the outset of this very difficult undertaking the hands of the commander were strengthened by the implicit confidence which his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge and the Secretary of State for India were enabled to place in him-a confidence merited by field service of no ordinary distinction, and a career involving a very varied experience. Sir Robert Napier was allowed to seek his materials from the whole army, both in England and India: all troops, however, with the exception of the 10th Company Royal Engineers, were taken from India. The soundness of the general's views on this important question of the selection of ness of the general's views on this important question of the selection of troops is best shown by the following extract from a minute recorded by Sir Robert Napier on the 5th September, 1867, in which he says:—"It is of some consequence in an expedition of the nature of that in contemplation, which may have to encounter hardship, fatigue, and privation of no ordinary kind, that the troops to be employed should know each other and their commander." With this view the general determined to employ Bombay troops alone, no other aid than that of a pioneer regiment being, in the first instance, asked for from Bengal: subsequently a mountain battery, two regiments of native cavalry and two of native infantry were despatched from Bengal, and four companies of sappers and miners from Madras. In the choice of the troops, in all the arrangements made preparatory to the embarkation of the force, and in its safe conduct through many difficulties to a crowning success, the good fortune of the se lection which placed Sir Robert Napier at the head of the Abyssinian Expedition is apparent, while two principal features in the exceptional military service entrusted to him stand prominently forward. In the first place, there was an essentially personal element in a command where each individual serving, not only had knowledge, of the chief, but was certain, at one time or another, to pess under his notice. The spirit and energy which animated the entire force, the patience under difficulty, and the never-failing confidence in the result which were exhibited by those who marched to Magdala, were qualities derived directly from the chivalrous and sympathetic network of the Commander in Chief: and the matured experience of nature of the Commander-in-Chief: and the matured experience of the scientific soldier placed at the head of the expedition, influenced the whole undertaking, the lowest in rank feeling faith in a general who not only had power to order, but capacity to direct, and ability to control, under the novel circumstances of a march into the interior of Africa. It is not possible here to review the different events of the four months occupied in conveying a force of sufficient strength to Magdala to carry out with certainty the instructions of the Government: it suffices to indicate where and when the master-hand of the chief was specially needed and happily applied. Successful diplomacy secured Kassa, Prince of Tigre, as our friend, and a care-The done of the following March the bulk of the force had reached Antalo, 200 miles from the sea-coast and about the same distance from Theodore's stronghol. On the 13th April March 1889 was in our prospection. April Magdala was in our possession. Theodore died by his own hand, and everyone of the prisoners, whose release was the object of the expedition, was safe in the British camp. There can be no question but that the happy ending to the long march was attributable to the sound judgment and decision of Sir Robert Napier in able to the sound judgment and decision of his robert mapodealing with the savage chief who could not brook surrender. The negotiations with Theodore, and his wily endeavours to turn the British general from the unflinching course which he had marked out, are at this time little remembered; yet, as a matter of fact, the release of the Abyssinian captives was mainly due to the determination of Sir Robert Napier to admit of no conditions with a conquered savage other than that of unconditional surrender. strength of character of the British commander had as much influence on the mind of his enemy as the mysteries of a far-reaching and wonder-working artillery. The savage acknowledged his master, and, if he selected to die himself, he dared attempt no injury to the captive band, who, seemingly at his mercy, were under the protection of an enemy he had learnt to respect as well as fear. It was fortunate indeed that the expedition was in such hands, for seldom has the saying "to be strong is to be merciful" had a clearer illustration. If Theodore died, there are many who owe life and happiness to the calm decision and unfailing determination of Lord Napier of Magdala.

On returning to England Lord Napier was received with every distinction by her Majesty the Queen and by the nation. He was thanked by Parliament, was raised to the Peerage, and, so soon as opportunity offered, was nominated to the supreme command of her Majesty's troops in India. How he has discharged that duty history will tell; and although the full benefit of his exertions may not have been yet realised, men may well say that there is not a single arm or department of the service that does not owe something to his zeal and kindly care. During the unusually pro-tracted period of his command, his wise counsels and statesmanship have made themselves continually felt on the general government of the empire. And yesterday he handed over that command to his successor, and left, without any probability of return to the field of his early labours and of his maturer triumphs and successes, carrying with him, as he does, the gratitude, the love, and the esteem of the whole army. He bears with him the regard of the entire command, native and European. Endowed with the brilliant and heroic attributes of our early commanders, of Clive, of Cooke, of Lake, and of Wellesley, he superadds to them an elevation of character, a depth of thought, a chivalry of bearing, a tenderness both of manner and of feeling, which captivated the affections, as high more heiligant outliers that the state of the state his more brilliant qualities have won the admiration, of all classes. And by many a friend—above all, by many a native friend—his departure is deplored as a personal loss, which overpowers the sense even of public regret. Well, therefore, may we say that the event of the day is one of historical interest, as it closes the Indian career of one of the noblest and best of our famous Anglo-Indian workers.

NATIVES IN THE PUBLIC SERVICE.

The Pioneer holds that the employment of Hindus and Mohammedans in the higher posts of Indian administration is one of those delicate matters that cannot be disposed of in one word. Theoretically there is much to be said in favour of the proposal. It is natural; it might please the people; it could be made a source of economy. If it were to be very generally adopted, the educated natives would perhaps be conciliated; and the pay of such appointments as might be set apart for them would certainly admit of considerable curtailment. In the first place, because the existing scale of salaries—very high in the money of those days—was fixed thirty-five years ago, upon the supposition that to get an equally good class of European employé you must pay him three times what a corresponding post carried in England. And it would be an absurd waste of money to give anything like that rate of emolument to men of whom there is an abundant supply, and who are living in their own country, without any extra expenses, and without any exile to be compensated. And, secondly, the certainty that a vast proportion of the Asiatics so employed would-we will not say take bribes, but-make the service conduce to their own indirect benefit, is a circumstance tha should greatly affect the nature of their remuneration. Doubtless European officers have done this in a few cases; but, apart from any higher sense of scrupulousness that they may have, the danger of exposure has probably acted as a check. With natives of the country this protection would be almost lost. In spite of official phrases it is probable that the higher native officials at present serving are all, more or less, what we should call "corrupt," and generally without much risk of detection. They receive presents upon high-days and holidays from all who are dependent upon them; they employ kinsmen and private servants in subordinate posts; they live at free quarters when travelling; they accept gifts from litigants before them. These are the customs of the country, notorious though not publicly declared. They were the customs of England in the days of Bacon, of France in the time of Beaumarchais. Most European officials, as above said, keep aloof from them now-a-days. Their salaries are all that they have to depend upon; and when superannuation causes them to retire, their honourable poverty proves to their own countrymen, at all events, that they have not made use of their opportunities for personal purposes. If an European ever does such things, he does what he has been taught to consider extremely wrong, and he has lived in fear and trembling lest his misconduct should be detected. The native does not consider such practices culpable, and he runs, probably, but little risk of discovery. These considerations, however, may be less attractive to the statesman than to the financier. It may occur to those responsible for the good government of British India, that it would be but a poor economy to save salaries at the expense of the restoration of misrule. It may be recollected that the Company tried native control at first; and that the system broke down completely. It was only then that the system was substituted which has prevailed ever since the end of the last century. It was because of the failure of nawabs, diwans, faujdars, et hoc genus omne, that native agency was restricted to executive posts, and was again required to be exercised under strict European supervision. It is very unlikely that a merely mechanical education, such as that of the University of Calcutta, has worked a radical change in the conditions of the problem.

THE NATIVE ARMY.

The Englishman observes that some statistics lately published relative to the constitution of the Native army of India affect the question but little. The mere figured statement, showing the numerical strength of each caste, may prove that, so far, we have acted well in not allowing any special element to preponderate. But the main point is, have we the best men of each class—does the pay suffice to tempt men of character and physique to enter the army? As we have frequently stated, the crack regiments of the service are well known, and they are individualised by military men without the least difficulty. There are regiments in the Bengal Army that require to be well weeded; there are men in these regiments who should never have been allowed to receive a month's pay. There are men whom a commanding officer cannot get rid of, cept by the aid of the surgeon, yet who are physically unfit to do a long day's work. There are men who are such bad shots that they could not hit a haystack, and who spend the best part of their time in hospital. There is no difficulty, if we raise the pay of the Sepoy, and give him a free kit on joining, in getting strong, powerful, well-built men, and there should be nothing but that class in our native army. If we turn back to the days before the mutiny, thereare many who may remember the stalwart men who formed the old regular Bengal Cavalry regiments. It is true, they utterly disgraced themselves; but we are speaking of physique alone, and contend that the physique of many of our native regiments is not up to the mark; and, until such is the case, the army throughout is not efficient. There are most important features relative to the constitution of our forces which have been too long neglected. It is only now, nineteen years after the mutiny, that we really are taking up vigorously the question of increasing the pay of the native soldier, and giving him a free kit on joining. Then, there is the question of the native officer promoted from the ranks, where he has all along associated with the private soldier. It is an indisputable fact that commanding officers complain much of their native officers. There must be some reward for the well deserving non-commissioned officer, and we see only one way of meeting the difficulty—give him better pay after so many years' service, or a good pension at fifty years of age and induce him to, or make him, retire. To promote a non-commissioned soldier to the commissioned ranks, if he is not likely to make a good native officer, is simply destroying the well-being of the regiment. But it is a most important question which should be decided, whether we are doing rightly in perpetuating the system of native officers promoted from the ranks? Would our regiments be stronger in the field with more European officers and the entire abolition of the native officer? Should we obtain a more efficient non-commissioned officer, and a better educated man, were we to offer higher pay and pension? Would it be more advisable, if native officers were obtained from the gentry of the land, as is the case with our English officers, and were educated for the position? There can be no doubt that an inefficient, worn out, stupid native officer is a very expensive servant of the State; he is costly whilst he remains, and an incubus, in the way of pension, when he quits. It is said that the non-com-missioned officers of the Guards make the regiments. Are our native non-commissioned officers as good as they might be? If not might it not be feasible, by increasing their pay, to get a more highly educated and efficient soldier? Is the native officer an essential element in the native army; is he worth the money we pay him? It is weakness arguing that the native officer has ever been a portion of our native regiment. Such is the case; but, antecedent to 1857, he was in most instances a useless encumbrance. When, in 1857, the native army revolted, the native officers, as a body, with the exception of Bakht Khan, an officer of a native battery of artillery, who commanded at Delhi, exhibited no qualities of an officer in the

THE PENDING MILITARY QUESTIONS.

The Times of India holds that by far the most important of all military questions now occupying the attention of the India and War Offices is the Short Service Enlistment Act of 1870, and its consequences as to India and its finances. By this Act men were enlisted for twelve years, with the option of serving any portion of this period after three years' service with the colours in the Reserve, or their discharge, will this year and next reach a very large number. Who is to pay for the passage home of these men, and the passage out of those who are to take their places? India, of course. The Imperial eye of the Secretary of War is unable to detect either inconvenience or injustice in this course, which is highly beneficial to the British army in general, as it makes experienced and efficient soldiers of those who are to form the material of the extraordinary war forces at the disposal of the Crown. This is only one of the inconveniences of adopting bodily the German system of military organisation without considering the entirely different circumstances of the two Empires. The Empire of Germany is compact and bounded as it were by a ring fence. Its soldiers are not called upon to serve beyond this fence except in time of war. The Empire of Great Britain is world-wide—to encircle it would be to span the globe. Its soldiers have to be carried in ships at enormous cost to garrison portions of the Empire which lie thousands of miles from England. It follows as clearly as possible that a system of service which might suit one Empire would not suit the other Empire at all. It may be very true, according to the view of the War-oflice, that—a short service in India will improve the character of the Reserve; but is good for the Indian Army ? Certainly not. No soldier is an efficient unit of the Indian military machine until he has been thoroughly acclimatised. Further, no British regiment is a first-class fighting regiment until it has seen service in India. This has been proved over and over again, especially in Afghanistan and in the Indian mutiny. Without making invidious comparisons, it may be said that the fighting qualities of the old Company's European regiments have never been surpassed by any regiments of the line. The short service rule then as applied to service in this country means nothing short of the deteriora-tion of the garrison of India. It would be bad enough if India had to submit to the loss of strength for what are called reasons of "Imperial policy." But that India should be asked not only to allow herself to be shorn of her strength, but actually to pay so much towards the expense of the process is simply so monstrous that no Viceroy who was entrusted with the responsibility of administering its affairs could permit it without the stronges possible protest. The fact is that in military legislation at home the interests of India are never considered at all. If a measure is thought good for the British army it is introduced, regardless of the fact that 60,000 men of that army form the garrison of India, and that the new regulation or reform may involve the Goveanment in an increased expenditure of some hundreds of thousands of pounds a year which it has no means of raising except by extraordinary taxation that may cause widespread discontent throughout this country. There is but one remedy for this state of things, as we have pointed out years ago in this journal, and that is that the Government of India recruit and maintain its own European as well as its native standing army, which should be supplemented by a small number of regiments on the British establishment if it be thought desirable or necessary for the home forces to see service in India. This is the only mode in which India can ever afford to maintain an efficient European garrison.

A Shipwreck.—We regret to learn that the American ship Puritan has been totally wrecked off Saugor Sands. All hands have been saved, and part of her crew have arrived in town by the French barque Salazie.—In It of Daily News, July 6.

A HILL SANITARIUM.—The hill colony near Darjiling, proposed by the Rev. Mr. Ayerst, has not, the Darjiling paper tells us, met with the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor, but there is some talk of a sanitarium being established in the hills for the employés of the Northern Bengal State Railway.

DAMAGES FOR MISCARRIAGE.—In the case brought by the Begam of Bhopal against the Great Indian Peninsular Rullway, to recover Rs. 61,655, as damages for the loss of certain jewels and other property entrusted by her to the company for carriage, but which were destroyed through the carriage taking fire, a judgment has been given by Mr. Justice Bayley in favour of the plaintiff, with costs; but the amount of damages still remains to be decided.

DEATH FROM HEAT APOPLENY.—We have received intelligence of the death of Mr. Harry Leslie, which occurred very suddenly at Aligarh on the 3rd instant. The evening's entertainment in which he was taking part was scarcely concluded when Mr. Leslie was seized with heat apoplexy, and expired in a few minutes. Mr. Leslie is well-known as the leader of the troupe which, in conjunction with the Davenport Brothers, has lately been giving a series of performances in Bengal and Northern India.—Pioneer, July 12.

PAYMENT OF THE MAHARAJAH OF PUTTIALA'S DEBTS.—It is reported that the purchases of the late Maharajah of Puttiala during his stay at Calcutta when the Prince of Wales was here amounted to nearly eight lacs of rupees. All these accounts are being now adjusted, and every bill will be punctually paid directly the Government of India decide regarding the future administration of the State. At present seals are affixed to the treasury and the palace. This was done immediately on the demise of the late Maharajah.—Calcutta Statesman, July 7.

ACCIDENT TO COLONEL MACDONALD.—The Calcutta correspondent of the Pioneer writes:—"I have had to record more than one serious accident lately, and have, I am sorry to say, one more to add to their number. Colonel Macdonald, of the Revenue Survey Department, while riding on the Maidan a couple of days ago, fell from his horse and broke his leg above the ankle. The doctors were soon in attendance, but it was some time before means could be obtained for his removal to his own house. The leg has been successfully set, and the patient is doing as well as can be expected, but Colonel Macdonald will, I hear, not be able to move without help for some months."

MR. MARSHALL WOOD'S STATUE OF THE QUEEN.—We have been favoured by Messes. Gillanders, Arbuthnot, and Co. with a sight of Mr. Marshall Wood's statue of the Queen. It is an erect figure, seven feet high, of purest marble; and it is a Queen beyond doubt. The classic drapery falls around the full figure in masterly negligent ease. That calm, unimpassioned, beautiful face may know of "the fierce light that beats about a throne," but it always remembers its queenliness; and every rounded limb, every fold of the clinging white robe seems to remember it too. The right leg is alightly advanced, and gives occasion to Mr. Wood to display a wonderful skill in the manipulation of drapery. The right hand bears a sceptre; the left holds carelessly a garland of oak leaves and acorss; the whole posé is most natural and dignified. The statue ought to be in the Town Hall. Messrs. Gillanders, Arbuthnot and Co. also showed us a photograph taken from a bust of the Prince of Wales by the same artist, which bust is, we believe, now being exhibited in the R yal Academy. The Prince is represented in his robes as Grand Master of the Order of the Star of India, and the photograph would seem to be a most life-like presentment of his Royal Highness.—Englishman.

The Berar Railways.—We hear it is in contemplation to close the two branch railways in Berar from Saturday. There is nothing particular to hinder the closing of the Khangaum line, as there is undoubtedly a heavy loss in working it during the rains, owing to insufficient traffic. But with regard to the Comrawuttee line, if the Government insist on its being closed also, there will be very great discontent among the European and native merchants, who have for the past two years been paying an additional rate of three pies per maund on all goods conveyed over that line, besides an excess fare of 50 per cent. on passenger traffic, and a small increase alsoon the usual parcel rate, in consideration of a distinct promise on the part of Government to keep the line open during the whole year. The traffic receipts of the Comrawuttee line for the year 1875 were Rs. 57,968, and the working expenses, including the usual maintenance charges for the same period, were Rs. 45,040, leaving a clear gain of Rs.12,928 on the year's transactions, and as the capital outlay on the Comrawuttee Branch Railway was Rs. 4,37,278, the profit pays almost 3 per cent. The Government will be simply breaking faith with the merchants by closing this line, and the latter will naturally expect a refund of the overcharges made during the year; in fact, it is not unlikely that they will take legal advice on the matter.—Times of India, July 7.

Cholera in the Nepal Teral.—A correspondent at Baraich gives the following sad description of the people in the Nepal Terai:

"Cholera is raging fearfully, and hundreds die daily, especially in the northern parts. The inhabitants are so superstitious that they will not submit to medical treatment of any kind whatsoever, less the goddess 'Bhawani' might be enraged, and because they have no faith in the efficacy of the medicines administered by the native doctors, a number of whom had been specially sent by the Government into our portion of the Terai. The sick will not even allow themselves to be seen by the doctor, who, nevertheless, leaves medicines for them, which they throw away, and the loss thus is not an inconsiderable one to the Government. The mortality amongst the Nepaulese subjects is less than it is amongst our subjects in the Terai, and the cause is mainly attributable to the thinness of the population and better sanitation of their villages. Our villages are situated in small areas, and they are much crowded and surrounded by large heaps of manure. Close to almost every village there are pools of stagnant water, in which all sorts of filthy matter is allowed to decompose, whereas in Nepaulese villages, the system of land revenue being very different, the inhabitants do not care to gain a trifle by these economic means, which are simply signs of poverty amongst the British subjects."—Times of India.

THE CAWNPORE MEMORIAL CHURCH.—We hear from Cawnpore that the Memorial Church there is anything but a success from a utilitarian point of view. It is no doubta handsome building, well built and striking in design, and may be expected to remain a lasting memorial of the terrible time it is erected to commemorate. The interior is well finished and has a good effect, but as a place of worship it is lamentably deficient. The construction is so bad that it will not accommodate more than a couple of hundred people at all comfortably, the galleries and aisles being quite useless. former nothing can be either seen or heard, and the occupants would have to do without punkahs, while the aisles are so shut out by the heavy stone pillars as to be practically unoccupied. So bad is the accommodation that the morning military service has to be conducted in the old church, which was, we believe, originally a ridingschool, but in which there is room for many more than in the more pretentious edifice close by. During this hot weather the heat is described as quite unbearable, and there being only three doors in the whole body of the church, the want of air makes it almost insupportable. No tatties or thermantidotes are supplied, as we believe there is some hitch between the Public Works and Military Works Departments as to who should pay for them; meanwhile, the church is rendered absolutely a place of danger instead of a place of worship. To crown all, the acoustic properties of the building are of the very worst description, and for the first few Sundays the voice of the officiating clergyman was completely lost in the reverberations from the roof.—Pioneer.

VERY HARD LINES.—The Pioneer says that the last fall in exchange to 1s. 7½d. is a tremendous blow to the hopes of the unfortunates in this country who have to remit largely to England, and the rate is now very little short of 25 per cent. It may not be generally known that while the pay of military officers in India is made up of several items, viz., English pay with various Indian allowances, the English pay is converted at the rate of 2s. 6d. per rupee, consequently an officer is first docked 20 per cent. of what he is entitled to by the rate at which he is paid out here, and the paternal Government remits this home for him at a further loss of 10 per cent. words, for every pound sterling a captain, say, is entitled to in England, he receives 16s. in India, and the Government remits it for him at a further loss of 2s. in the £1, or a total depreciation of 6s. from every sovereign. Even at this rate the amount allowed to be sent home by officers through Government is quite inadequate—£70 a year for a lieutenant, £100 for a captain, £150 for a major, and so on; consequently after the Government allowance is used up, officers must resort to the banks and their exchange rate of 25 per cent. for the rest of their yearly remittances. It surely would not be too much to ask Government to increase the amount allowed to each officer to a reasonable sum sufficient to keep a family at home and educate his children; it might even be required that a declaration on honour should be given to the effect that the required remittance was solely for the use of the officer's family. Matters are bad enough for civilians, who, as a rule, draw higher pay, but for many military men the present rates of exchange mean debt and being tied down to this country for years longer than they intended to remain.

MR. BARCLAY .- The last official Gazette confirms the appointment of Mr. Ernest Barclay as Government Solicitor of Madras.

A PROSPEROUS EMIGRANT .- From the Madras Administration Report for 1874-75 we find that a number of women emigrate from the northern districts to Burmah for the purpose of prostitution in the Burmese scaports. They usually return to their own country after a few years of absence, or when they have saved money. A temple was recently built at Coringa by a woman of this class at a cost of 30,000 rupees, or £3,000.—Madras Times, July 10.

MEDICAL.—Dr. George Smith, Deputy-Inspector-General of Hospitals, has been appointed Surgeon-General of the Indian Medical Department in succession to Surgeon-General Edwin Balfour, who retires from the public service on the 15th proximo. Dr. George Smith was the Principal of the Madras Medical College some few years ago, and we have not the slightest doubt the selection will give general satisfaction.

THE LATE COLONEL KEYS.—The death is announced in Vizagapatam of Colonel T. J. H. Keys, commanding the 7th Regiment N.I., from the effects of dysentery. Colonel Keys entered the late E.I. Company's service on the 11th June, 1842; was promoted to the grade of lieutenant on 24th January, 1842; captain 11th June, 1857; major 11th June, 1862; lieut.-colonel 11th June, 1868; and colonel in 1873. He was appointed commandant of the 11th Regiment N.I. on the 11th December, 1875.

COLONEL PRIESTLEY.—Colonel F. J. B. Priestley, who attained his colone's allowances in March last, was reappointed by Government to his post as Superintendent of the Revenue Survey till the 29th prox. He has, however, requested the Government to permit him to resign his appointment from the 6th inst., to which the Government to permit him to resign his appointment from the 6th inst., to which the Government to permit him to resign his appointment from the 6th inst., to which the Government to permit him to resign his appointment from the 6th inst., to which the Government to permit him to resign his appointment from the 6th inst., to which the Government to permit him to resign his appointment from the 6th inst., to which the Government to permit him to resign his appointment from the 6th inst., to which the Government to permit him to resign his appointment from the 6th inst., to which the Government to permit him to resign his appointment from the 6th inst., to which the Government to permit him to resign his appointment from the 6th inst., to which the Government him to resign him to resign his appointment from the 6th inst. ment have accorded their sanction, and have remarked in their order thereon that "they cannot allow Colonel Priestley to resign the charge of the very important office which he has held so many years, and of which he is the first incumbent, without placing on record their high appreciation of the very valuable services he has rendered as Superintendent of Revenue Survey in this Presidency." -Madras Mail, July 10.

THE WEATHER.—The weather this week has been much the same as in the past. The disagreeable land wind has continued up to about two in the afternoon, driving clouds of dust before it, which sweep along the roads and thoroughfares, making it impossible for one to walk with eyes open. We have been more fortunate as regards the sea breeze this week which has set in regularly between two and three o'clock in the afternoon, when it blows refreshingly till nightfall. Last night we had a copious fall of rain, which has made this morning at any rate bearable. Public health is not as satisfactory as we could wish. Sickness continues in a variety of forms, and during the last few days cases of typhoid have been heard of .- Athenœum, July 12.

THE NEW TUTOR TO MYSOR.—Captain Wilson's former experience as tutor to H. H. of Jowra, his pleasant mich and agreeable address (for we have met him and his late charge in this presidential town), we are sure, will obtain for him the obeisance and respect of all those whom the welfare of the young Maharajah con-cerns. We had wondered where the gallant captain had vanished all these many days until the wise selection of our new Viceroy had nominated that officer as the able successor to Colonel Malleson. We can only say that from our experience Captain Wilson is an officer firm of purpose and quick of perception, and that the defects and intrigues of the Mysor Court so far as he is concerned, and for which that Court is so remarkable, considering the disgraceful exposures in which the much hated Brahmin Comptroller took so prominent a part, will receive, we hope, a permanent check.

JOBBERY IN THE POST-OFFICE.—Promotions come neither from the east nor west, but in the General Post-office they come in a way no one can understand. By some unaccountable reason or other the Postmaster General recently appointed a printer of his office to the post of chief clerk in the Post-office at Masulipatam. This man was not a passed candidate. Again another person was appointed to fill the office of a candidate inspector without the necessary qualifications. The last piece of jobbery was the appointment of another favourite to the post of head clerk in the Postmaster's office. O Tempora! O Mores! None of these gentlemen have qualified themselves for the public service, and we fail to see under what Act or regulation they were selected. For the appointments of apprentices "none but passed candidates are required to apply," but when job-bery is perpetrated, examination rules are ignored. The Government, we think, ought to interfere in the matter.—Athenœum.

FEARFUL ACCIDENT AT OOMERCARY.

This portion of the native town has been thrown into a state of the most painful excitement by a fearful accident which occurred there yesterday. To understand fully the serious nature of the accident it will be necessary to describe the locale somewhat particularly. Opposite the wall of the County Jail on the south side is an extensive range of warehouses belonging to the well-known Kessowjee Naik, built in the form of a parallelogram, and extending over a hundred yards on its longer side, into the native town. The portion immediately facing the Jail was used as a granary. A lane divides the corner of the granary from a crowded chawl, consisting of a ground and upper floor. The latter building is occupied by weavers, and is constructed in the style common to most native chawls, bamboo, mud, and lath being the principal material used. The height of the chawl, although a two-storied building, is only about as lofty as an ordinary cottage without any upper floor would be, while that of the granary was nearly thirty feet, with a stout tiled roof. The weavers were busily engaged in their usual avocations yesterday morning, when about nine or half-past nine o'clock the east wall of the godown opposite was seen to lean forward, and immediately after fell, completely choking up the little lane. The upper part of the wall, which was wholly built of stone and lime, fell upon the end of the chawl facing it, bringing down several sets of rooms. At the same time several hundred bags of linseed poured out, and the roof came in with a tremendous crash. Passers-by fled in all directions, and that part of the chawl still standing was at once abandoned. The people residing at the fatal end, however, had no time to escape, and were nearly all buried in the ruins. Some—more fortunate than the others, or endowed with greater presence of mind and activity—escaped with a few bruises; the older men and helpless women were the principal victims. The cause of the accident was evident. The warehouse is a well-constructed and sound building, but it contained many thousand bags of seed, which had been piled up against the walls of the godown almost to the lofty roof. The east wall, stout as was the material composing it, being no longer able to resist the pressure upon it, gave way, falling, of course, on the outside, followed by an immense outpouring of bags of linseed, the weight of one of which would be alone sufficient to crush a man, if it fell upon him from a moderate height. The shock the whole range of warehouses thus received was so great that the entire east side—extending, as before mentioned, over a hundred yards-has been thrown out of the perpendicular, and in some parts exhibits great cracks underneath the eaves of the roof, while the pipes bits great cracks underneath the eaves of the root, while the pipes for carrying off the water, which are placed at intervals on the face of the wall, have been wrenched from their fastenings and have fallen forward, being merely supported by their lower rivets. In the immediate vicinity everything was in the greatest confusion. The lane alluded to was for dozens of yards piled to the height of fifteen or twenty feet with the débris of doors, windows, tiles, rafters, stones, rubbish, and bags of linseed. A large part of the fellen has the warmbouse haid almost intent woon and supported solely by of the warehouse laid almost intact upon and supported solely by the huge heaps of seed bags, the side walls standing out grim and bare towering above.

The scene was in the highest degree painful. Crowds of every caste had collected. Yelling and vociferating, utterly regardless of order, the people were continually pressing upon the scene, apparently only to gratify their curiosity. With that remarkable apathy common to the race, few volunteered to aid in removing rubbish that they knew buried a number of their countrymen. The neighbours and lodgers of the chawl were to be seen in scattered groups sobbing convulsively and striking their breasts, and often seized, it would appear with temporary energy, they would rush upon the heap of ruins and work frantically at removing the rubbish, digging into compact heaps of mud and dust and stone with hands and nails The outside crowd had to be pressed into service, which they would reluctantly enter upon. The weavers were all Mussulmans, and to the credit of the race, it must be added, that their coreligionists showed little of that indifference exhibited by the others. When the accident became first known, about ten A.M., Inspector Sweeney, of the Oomercary Division, whose police station is close by, hurried to the spot with what aid he could obtain. Information was then sent off to the Mazagon station whence a mounted policeman or sover was despatched to could obtain. Information was then sent off to the Mazagon station, whence a mounted policeman or sowar was despatched to the Municipal Commissioner's office, while Mr. Edginton, the Deputy Commissioner, immediately drove up, attended by some European inspectors and constables, a body of sowars, Mr. Superintendent Moffat, and a number of native policemen. The necessary arrangements were made to keep the ground clear, and the police, the assembled weavers, and some Seedees went to work with a will. Sir Frank Souter came personally to see that the best and quickst means were taken to save life. In an hour's time Mr. McEwen, of the Municipality, arrived, and hearing that people had been buried by the fall of the chawl and godown, collected together a number of men of the Road Department, who rendered most a number of men of the Road Department, who rendered most efficient assistance. Several Europeans also voluntarily did good service, and a large portion of the Jail employés, European and native, were among the workers. For a long time their efforts were unattended with success, but perseverance and energy were rewarded at length, although hardly to the extent those exertions deserved. Between eleven A.M. and twelve noon three bodies were disinterred—one man and two women. The former was fearfully bruised, and died almost immediately afterwards on his way to the J. J. Hospital. The latter are at that excellent institution still, and it is to be hoped will quit it with health. The further details are harrowing. One young married woman was found without mark or bruise, one arm under and her body over her young child, an infant of four months. The child was alive, only very slightly bruised; the mother, in her endeavour to preserve its life by making her was bedy a shield for her offenying was dead. She was suffocated. own body a shield for her offspring, was dead. She was suffocated. A few more powerful efforts in scraping away the debris discovered the body of an old white-headed woman with her skull fractured above the left temple. There was an interval of an hour before the body of an old man was disinterred from under a huge fragment of stone wall literally shattered, a shapeless mass of flesh and bone, crushed out of even the semblance of humanity. A longer interval followed, and the debris, which in the morning had stood to the level of the roof of the standing portion of the chawl, was considerably reduced. But individuals were still missing. Human life was still at stake, and how many lay concealed be-neath that treacherous heap of ruin none could venture to say

At four P.M. the Coroner was sent for-four bodies were lying on stretchers in one of the sound rooms of this ill-fated building. He arrived at five P.M., and the formalites of the inquest were gone through. During that sitting some yet more harrowing sights were witnessed. One poor young woman, Mina by name, acting under the first impulse of terror and the instinct of self-preservation, had ran blindly out of her room on hearing the crash into the street. She then apparently for the first time thought of her infant boy, only four or five months old. She had left it behind, and she ran back for her child. She had the little one safe in her arms, when, a crash, a blow, and all was over. Death must have been instantaneous to both. A great piece of stone had struck her on the face—not one feature from forehead to chin being recognisable. The child's head was crushed. Later on, when almost dusk, the body of a man was taken out crushed also by a mass of that solid wall, the cause of these lamentable disasters. This made a total of seven deaths, but one boy is still reported missing, and at the time the inquest adjourned all the debris had not been cleared away. It is quite impossible that any being with the breath of life in his or her veins will ever now be found. The delay then matters little.

With seven deaths and three dangerous cases in hospital the results of this frightful catastrophe may well be said to be dreadful.

or this rightful catastrophe may well be said to be dreadful.

Every care has been taken for the safetyof the inhabitants in dangerous proximity to the godown. The remainder of the east wall is in a most precarious state, and the Municipality have decided to pull it down. The whole contents of the godown (5,000 bags) are the property of the firm of Messrs. Wallace and Co., whose European representatives visited the scene themselves, as did the Municipal Commissioner and the Scenetter of the Thomas and the Scenetter of cipal Commissioner and the Secretary of the Town Council and one or two other gentlemen.—Times of India, July 14.

Miscellaneous.

COLONEL E. WADDINGTON.—Some time ago we stated that Colonel E. Waddington, of the 23rd N.I., was one of those who had elected to retire this year, under the provisions of the new retirement scheme, and the last Government Gazette gives us his name as going on the 20th ultimo. Colonel E. Waddington, who entered the service on the 9th December, 1842, rose in the 23rd N.I., of which he was second in command at the time of his retirement. That an officer should have served for thirty-four years in his own regiment, and have left the service without being commandant of it, is a fact to the weight of which comment can add little. A case like this is worth a thousand arguments against the seniority system, and we earnestly hope that a system in which such a case is possible may soon become a thing of the past. It is to such officers as these, sick at heart with hope perpetually deferred, that the new plan of retirement is such a boon, since it enables them to retire on an income adequate to their requirements. Colonel Waddington first saw service in the Persian campaign of 1856-57, and was present at the bombardment of Mohumra, receiving the medal with clasp. He was out after Tantia Topee in 1858-59, and finally was with the Oojein Field Force in 1859-60. He receives his pension of £4,565, and the computed value of his annuity, which is £4,646. By Colonel Waddington's retirement the second in command of the 23rd N.I. becomes vacant.—Times of India.

SERIOUS CHARGE.—A very serious charge has been preferred against the Collector of Bombay, Mr. F. F. Arbuthnot, by Mr. Lacey, a veterinary surgeon living at Breach Candy. A summons has been obtained against Mr. Arbuthnot upon application before Mr. Cooper, the senior magistrate, and the case will come on for hearing next week. It appears that Mr. Arbuthnot was on a recent occasion alone with Mrs. Lacey, and that the latter raised an alarm which brought in several persons from other rooms in the house, to whom she declared that Mr. Arbuthnot had comthe house, to whom she declared that Mr. Arbuthnot had committed an assault of an aggravated character. This the accused, we understand, very energetically denied. Mr. Lacey was at the time up-country, and he was telegraphed for by Mrs. Lacey and her friends. Upon his return to Bombay he placed the matter in the hands of Messrs. Chalk and Tunner, under whose advice a summons was applied for. Mr. Arbuthnot's defence is, we understand, in the hands of Messrs. Hearn and Cleveland. The case excites the deepest interest in offii ial circles. It is said to be the intention of the senior magistrate to hear the case in his private room. In a matter of such importance, affecting the character of a high official, such a course would be most improper. It is said that Messrs. Hearn and Cleveland are in possession of certain facts which we cannot distinctly allude to, but which render it highly necessary that judgment should be held in suspense until the whole matter is fully investigated. But if the investigation be not public as well as full, a great injustice may easily be done in ignorance of the real circumstances under which the decision of the Court may be given. -Times of India, July 14.

COLOMBO.—Typhoid fever has again appeared in Colombo in an epidemic form. Several of the pupils of the Normal School have been attacked, and three of them have, as a matter of prevention, been removed to the Borella Hospital for treatment.

JUDICIAL.—It is, we understand, definitely settled that Sir William Hackett will succeed Sir George Anderson on the Supreme Court Bench, the latter taking up the appointment of Chief Justice at Gibraltar .- Ceylon Times.

THE NEW POSTAGE.—It was expected that the reduced rates of This expectation postage would come into operation on July 1st. will not be realised, however, as the arrangements cannot be at once carried out, and the reduction may possibly not take effect until the beginning of next year.

MR. DUNLOP.—The manager of the Wharf and Warehouse Company, Mr. Walter Dunlop, has within the last few days carried out a resolve he has long entertained, of resigning his charge in order to proceed to Europe with his family. Mr. Grinlinton, of the Colombo Gas and Water Company, has been appointed Manager.

It will be seen that the right to precedence next after the Governor is to be waived in favour of the present Commander of the Forces.

A JAIL RISING.—Three Sinhalese convicts belonging to Jaffna jail have succeeded in effectually assaulting two of the guards, one of whom is not expected to survive. Though there were other prisoners on the spot, the valorous three remained masters of the situation, having knocked down one of the guards and broken his bones to splinters, and driven away the other, covered with wounds.

SALARIES OF CIVIL SERVANTS.—Correspondence is going on between Sir W. Gregory and the Secretary of State on a proposal made by the former that the salaries of civil servants in Ceylon should be raised all round to such an extent as will compensate them for the depreciated value in silver. Our London correspondent understands that no definite reply has yet been given, and I gather that any material increase of expenditure on the fixed establishments would be deprecated just now, whilst so many great public works are in progress or in contemplation.—Ceylon Times.

THE ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY.

Lord Napier of Magdala presided at the annual examination of the gentlemen cadets at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, on Tuesday, and Prince Louis Napoleon was also present. Fortytwo out of forty-three cadets who went up for commissions passed. Of these, owing to the great demand for officers in the Royal Artillery, twenty-one had by special arrangement volunteered for examination from the second class, and the Director-General expressed an opinion that the successful effort which had been made to meet the exceptional circumstances reflected most creditably upon the capabilities of the institution. The average age of the commissionclass was nineteen years and ten months, and the general behaviour of the whole establishment had been excellent.—Lord Napier of Magdala, in addressing the cadets, said every one present had before him the making of a great career. Those who were about to enter the Royal Engineers would find a severe competition in the engineers of other nations, and the Artillery also would find that other nations were making rapid strides in this especial branch, requiring all the exertions of which they were capable to maintain the high place which the Royal Artillery held in the estimation of the world. The following were then presented with commis-

Miscellaneous.

Appointment.—(India-office, Aug. 1.)—The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint Mr. James Sewell White, barristerat-law, a Judge of the High Court of Judicature at Calcutta, in the place of Mr. J. B. Phear, who has resigned.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S INDIAN EXPENSES .- We (Whitehall Review) have reason to believe that so good has been the administration of the Parliamentary grant for the Prince of Wales's tour in India that a small balance will be paid back to the Exchequer. This satisfactory result has been obtained although the presents of the Prince have been equal in value to those of the native princes.

BREACH OF PROMISE OF MARRIAGE.—An action was heard on Saturday before the sheriff of the county Cork for damages for breach of promise of marriage. The plaintiff was a young lady named Sophia Williams, and the defendant a gentleman of seventy years of age, who had recently returned from India, of the name of William Baker Good. The jury awarded damages £2,000.

Export of Bullion.—The following were the exports of Specie to the East by steamers of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company on the dates given:—From Southampton, per Bokhara, July 27—Gold, to Aden, £800; to Ceylon, £110; to Madras, £492; Silver, to Bombay, £134,950; to Calcutta, £177,500. Per Khiva, Aug. 3, Silver, to Bombay, £303,200. By the Messageries Maritimes steamer Ava, July 30—Gold, £1,006.

Indian Mutiny Fund.—A petition was presented on Saturday in the Chancery Division for a reference to Chambers to settle a final scheme for the application of the Indian Mutiny Sufferers' Fund, which amounts to £120,000. At present the income is insufficient to meet the annual claim upon it; but as lives fall off there will be a gradually increasing surplus, the administration of which the trustees desire to have determined. The proposed reference was granted by the Master of the Rolls.

LIBELS ON SIR CECIL BEADON AND GENERAL BALFOUR.—An action for libel was on Tuesday brought in the Common Pleas Division by Sir Cecil Beadon against a Mr. Cunningham, at one time a member of the directorate of the Credit Foncier, of which the plaintiff was chairman. The libel complained of was contained in a letter alleged to have been written by the defendant to the City Editor of the Times, and reflecting on certain of the directors of the Credit Foncier. The counsel for the defendant withdrew all imputation in regard to Sir Cecil Beadon, for whom the jury gave a verdict, with £200 damages.—Another action was brought in the same Court on Wednesday by General Sir George Balfour against Mr. Cunningham. All imputations on Sir George's character were withdrawn, and the jury returned a verdict of £50 damages.

Bills on India.—Tenders for £700,000 (70 lacs of rupees) in bills on India were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday, the 2nd inst. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £333,400, to Bombay £300,000; and to Madras, £66,600. Tenders on all presidencies at 1s.  $7\frac{1}{5}$ d. will receive 33 per cent. No allotment is made under that price. This makes a rise of fully 1d. per rupee in the past fortnight, and is the more extraordinary because the Indian exchange had not moved to such a point as warranted the The effect on the silver market was to make it very firm, advance. although no transactions were recorded, and no actual price can be be given. About 51d, was mentioned as a nominal quotation. The India Council invite tenders on the 16th inst. for only £500,000 (50 lacs of rupees), being twenty lacs less than on Wednesday last. They announce, however, that no one tender will be received for more than the total amount offered; and they at the same time permit applicants to tender in the interim for sums not exceeding fifty lacs, at a minimum of 1s. 81d. per rupee. As the last allotment at 1s. 78d. forced the price of silver up to 513d. per oz., and as the present price is 51 d. this minimum appears high.

THE CASE OF THE "STAR OF INDIA."—This action was brought on behalf of Messrs. Kerr and Co., of Glasgow, the owners of the vessel Cheviot, against the Merchant Shipping Company of London, as the owners of the vessel Star of India, to, it appeared, recover certain damages alleged by the plaintiffs to have been sustained by them in consequence of a collision which took place between the Cheviot and the Star of India in Madras Roads on May 1, The defendants admitted their liability for the damage proceeded for, and on December 31, 1875, the matter was referred to the registrar of the Admiralty Division, assisted by merchants, to report the amount due. On March 27, 1876, the Registrar made his report, in which all the items of the plaintiff's claim were allowed, except the loss of a charter-party claimed by them at a sum of £558. 188. 9d. The plaintiffs were to pay the reference fees, but otherwise each party ought to pay his own costs of the reference. The amount allowed by the Registrar was £577. 19s. 10d. Mr. Watkin Williams, Q.C., and Dr. Walter Phillimore appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Clarkson appeared for the defendants. It was contended on behalf of the plaintiffs that before the collision occurred the Cheviot was under a charter party to convey a cargo to England at the rate of 55s. per ton, but that, owing to the delay which arose from the collision, which necessitated extensive repairs to be effected, the season had been lost, and a charter party could then only be effected at the rate of 45s. per ton, which occasioned the loss sued for by the plaintiffs. It was alleged in answer, on behalf of the defendants, that the damage claimed for was too remote, and further, that in case of insurance such claims had been held not to hold good, and that the Cheviot might have sustained similar injuries or damage during the course of the voyage which was contemplated. The learned judge, in delivering a written judgment, dealt with the matter at some length. He considered, as his lordship's predecessor, Dr. Lushington, had held, that the claims for damage in assurance and collision cases were distinct. The claim made by the plaintiffs, on appeal from the Registrar, was for damages which were not too remote, and he would therefore order the case to be again referred to the Registrar and merchants, for compensation to be assessed in respect of the lost charter party.

Imperial Parliament.

House of Commons, Thursday, Aug. 3.—The Case of Captain Roberts.—Mr. C. Bentinck, in replying to Mr. Stacpoole, said it was true that Captain Roberts, of the 94th Regiment, made an application to the Horse-Guards that the court-martial directed to be held on his conduct while stationed at Newry should take place not at Belfast, but in London; but the application was refused because out of sixty witnesses to be examined fifty-seven were resident in the Belfast district, and only three in London. Captain Roberts had no common law right to claim a change of venue, and the charges upon which Captain Roberts was tried were both legally and specifically stated, and he was tried in conformity with the Queen's regulations. It was not in his power to state whether the finding of the court-martial was the unanimous opinion of the officers constituting that tribunal.—Mr. Stacpoole gave notice that next session he should call attention to the conduct of naval and military courts-martial.

ARREARS OF PAY.—In reply to Colonel Jervis, Mr. Hardy stated that no reply had yet been made to the letter from Simla of the 9th of August, 1875, relative to the arrears of pay due to certain officers by the Government of India, inasmuch as no decision had yet been received from the India-office on the subject of the claims put forward.

Moncrieff Gun Carriages.—In reply to Mr. Maitland, Lord E. Cecil stated that the experiments with regard to the Moncrieff gun carriages had not been further proceeded with because such carriages were not at present required for heavy guns. The question of trying these guns for military purposes was still under consideration.

House of Lords, Friday, Aug. 4.—The Indian Tariff Act. Lord Granville having moved, on behalf of Lord Halifax, an address for despatches from the Government of India and copies of dissents to the despatches of the Secretary of State, dated May 31, 1876, recorded by members of the Council of India, Lord North-BROOK expressed his regret that the correspondence on the Indian Tariff Act had not been produced at an earlier period; but he was glad to say that there was no real divergence of opinion between himself and the Government, though there had been a misun-derstanding respecting the Tariff Act. The despatch of the Secretary of State of November 11 recommended the giving up of a source of revenue producing £800,000 a year by the reduction of the customs duty on cotton fabrics; but the Indian Legislature, having regard to the depreciation in the value of silver, felt unable to recommend the abandonment of the duty, and deprecated the idea of imposing fresh taxes to replace the revenue which would thus have been disposed of. The noble earl added that there was no difference of opinion between him and the Secretary of State for India as to the alleged interference with Indian legislation; and he thought the publication of the correspondence would tend to strengthen and consolidate the relations between the Government of India and the Home Government.—Lord Salisbury, in expressing satisfaction at the statement of Lord Northbrook, said there was no objection to the production of the papers; and after a few words from Lord NAPIER of MAGDALA the motion was agreed to.

House of Commons, Saturday, Aug. 5.—The House went into committee on navy and army expenditure (1874-5) when Mr. W. H. Smith reported that the balances unexpended in respect of certain votes for navy services for the year ending March 31, 1875, amounted to £83,574, and that the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury had temporarily authorised the application of that sum to provide in part for the expenditure incurred in excess of certain other votes for navy services for the said year. He moved that the application should be sanctioned.—After some remarks from Sir G. Balfour in opposition to the motion the resolution was agreed to.—A similar resolution was passed with regard to £381,445 unexpended balances of the army appropriation account for the year ending March 31, 1875, of which the Treasury had authorised the application of £281,213.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, Aug. 7.—ABOLITION OF PURCHASE.—Captain HAYTER, on behalf of Sir Henry Havelock, asked the Secretary of State for War whether an officer of one of the old purchase regiments, now exchanging into one of the regiments formerly of the Indian service, thereby forfeits the value which his commission held at the date of the abolition of purchase.—Mr. G. HARDY replied that he did not. He took this occasion to say that he was about to lay upon the table the report of the commission on promotion and retirement.

LEPROSY.—Lord G. Hamilton, in reply to Sir P. O'Brien, said it was not the intention of the Government to give effect to the suggestions of Dr. Henry Vandyke Carter, embodied in his report "relative to leprosy and leper asylums in Norway, with reference to India," presented to the Secretary of State for India in Council in 1873. The Government had, however, directed further inquiries to be made in India with a view to ascertain whether the conclusions of Dr. Carter were correct.

The Indian Civil Service.—Mr. Lowe called attention to the Secretary of State for India's despatch, dated 30th September last, in reference to the allowances granted to successful candidates for the Indian Civil Service, and made several suggestions relating thereto.—Lord George Hamilton thanked the right hon, gentleman for the friendly tone of his suggestions; and, while defending the policy decided on by Lord Salisbury, said he was prepared to admit the scheme might not be perfect. If any suggestions could be made from time to time to really increase the efficiency of the service, the Secretary of State would be well disposed to listen to them.

CALCUTTA was visited by the most severe thunderstorm known for years on Sunday, July 2, but there were few accidents. Nearly six inches of rain fell.

The command of a convalescent depot of 400 men will in future reckon for Field Officers as qualifying service towards the rank of Colonel.

Issue of Snider Rifles.-The Government of India have sanctioned the issue of ten Snider rifles to each of the twenty-three regiments of native infantry in the Bengal Presidency, who have not already been furnished with such, to enable them to compete with the corps armed with Snider rifles at the army and divisional matches, which will take place in December next. Native regiments will receive Sniders immediately as they become available by British regiments obtaining their instalments of Martini-Henry rifles; 3,000 short Sniders were said to have been indented on England in October last; but no advice of the date of their supply being forthcoming, the above method of equipping the native infantry regiments with Sniders has been devised.

COUNTY OF CHESTER.

VEYOR, and ARCHITECT.

The MAGISTRATES for the COUNTY of CHESTER will, at the General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, to be held at NETHER KNUTSFORD, in and for the said County, on MONDAY, the 16th day of OCTOBER next, proceed to ELECT a SUCCESSOR to the late Mr. Nicobols, the County Bridgemaster and Surveyor.

The person elected will be appointed to fill the offices of County Bridgemaster, Surveyor, and Architect, and will be required to devote the whole of his time to his duties. A Military or Civil Engineer, or Professional Architect, will be considered eligible for the appointment. The officer appointed will not be obliged to reside actually in the county, provided that his residence is in some place convenient to his duties. Detailed particulars of his duties, which will comprise the supervision and charge of the County and Hundred Bridges, Roads, Gaols, Court-houses, Asylums, Lockups, and all County Buildings of every description, and the furnishing, when specially required, of Plans, Specifications of Old Buildings, may be obtained on application to the undersigned.

The salary will be 2500 per annum, and actual trations of Old Buildings, may be obtained on application to the undersigned.

The salary will be £500 per annum, and actual travelling expenses within the county, such sum to include the services of such clerk or assistant as the officer to be appointed may find it necessary to employ in the inspection and superintendence of county lengths of roads, and such roads as may hereafter be required under the provisions of any Act of Parliament, to be inspected on behalf of the county. If specially engaged to furnish Plans, Specifications, or Estimates of New Buildings, or for Alterations of Old Buildings, other than Bridges, Lockups, and Magistrates'-rooms, he will, when the cost shall exceed £500, be allowed a commission thereon according to a fixed scale.

Full particulars of all the duties to be performed, and of the allowances to be made, together with any further information Candidates may require, may be obtained on applications for the appointment and Testimonials on application at my Office, norticale-street, Chester.

Applications for the appointment and Testimonials must be delivered at my Office, as above, on or before the 29th day of September next.

Summary and Revielo.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, July 21; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, July 19; Calcutta, July 18.

THE Times of India learns, from what it regards as a trust-worthy source, that the Rajah of Jaipur is cherishing a little grudge against the Indian Government on account of something which took place during his recent visit to Simla. It appears that Sir Lewis Pelly and other officials on behalf of the Viceroy gave the Maharajah some good advice about the future management of his State; but on finding him loth to receive their admonitions in good part, they told him in plain words that if he did not please the British Government he must take the consequences. For some time past dacoities of a serious kind have repeatedly occurred in Jaipur, particularly near the Sambhar salt-lakes. These dacoities have, it seems, been brought home to a high official of the State. The Maharajah was urged to dismiss him; but he has shown great unwillingness to get rid of so great a favourite. Arrangements are being made to protect the Sambhar Lakes with British troops, and to establish a good police in that neighbourhood; proceedings which have caused no little excitement at Jaipur itself.

THE sudden turn in the market rates of silver is the subject of thankful comment in the Bombay papers. Says the Bombay Gazette:—"With a joy which must be shared by all—except, perhaps, the indigo and tea planters—we note that our hopes are fast being realised, and the high rate of the successful tenders for Council drafts in London on Wednesday last conclusively proves that the stock of silver available in the European market is not nearly so great as has been imagined, and that the fall in price has been more the result of panic than over-production. The statement of the Deutsche Bank, under the authority of the German Government, that the available stock of silver is under £400,000, instead of the imaginary thirty millions which have been so much talked of, has had much to do with the high rate of the tenders, and a considerable improvement in the price of silver may shortly be looked for. Yesterday's Bank rates for bills on London may be quoted as 1s. 6\frac{2}{3}d. on demand, 1s. 6\frac{7}{3}d. at three months' sight, and 1s. 7d. at six months', and there can be no doubt that the reaction has set in, and that any immediate alteration in the rates will be for the better."

THE Times of India thinks that the present upward movement is due to the influence of China, and "as silver is for the present somewhat scarce in London, Council Bills have been secured on China account to meet in part the indebtedness of that country to India, mainly for opium." It is difficult, adds that journal, to say whether the advance will be permanent: "the drop was certainly very sudden, and as usual after excitement, some reaction was to be looked for. Still the future of silver is fraught with uncertainty; the amount the German Government has still to dispose of (according to the Deutsche Bank something like 8 millions), the sum Holland will demonetize—about 13 millions—must find a market, while the production of the mines, notwithstanding conflicting accounts, must be very large."

We learn that two more Colonels—making thirty-one in all for Bengal, out of the forty available retirements—Colonels Perkins and Ellis, of the Bengal army, have been gazetted as retiring under commutation allowances. We may expect to see the remaining vacancies filled up more rapidly than the earlier, as a great many colonels who may wish to retire hold off as long as possible to improve their terms. The pensions or commutation grants given by Government under the present scheme are, as the Pioneer observes, "regulated in so intricate a way that it may sometimes make a good deal of difference to a particular officer whether his application to retire goes in to the Adjutant-General before or after a given date. If he sends in an early application he may get less money than he might have secured by waiting. If he waits too long he may find all the vacancies of the year filled up, and retirement till next year at any rate closed to him."

THE Bombay papers report a sad case of suicide, owing, owing, as such things commonly do, to a sudden frenzy. Mrs. Clayton, the lady who thus killed herself, was the wife of Captain Clayton, commander of H.M.S. Rifleman, lying in Bombay Harbour. It was only in May last that she arrived in Bombay to meet her husband; and she had since been living with him in perfect harmony, and appeared to be a very cheerful person. At the inquest evidence was produced to show that her mind was wandering, and there seems no reason to dispute the justice of the jury's verdict.

From Madras we learn that another deputation waited on the Duke of Buckingham to present a petition on the subject of the annexation of the Wynad. It came from the Planters Association, and was signed by their Chairman and a member. In the Madras Council it has already been proposed to take a portion of the Wynad from the Malabar district and add it to the country under the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of the Nilgiris. The measure is very strongly opposed by Sir W. Robinson, apparently with good reason. To bring the poorly-clad natives of Malabar shivering up to a place so strange to them in every respect as Utakamand, in order that the Commissionership of the Nilgiris might be made worth the acceptance of a senior civil servant, would certainly seem to be a cruel reform. Sir William Robinson was for many years Collector of Malabar, and is the only member of Council acquainted with the country. The question of the transfer, apart from any personal or service consideration, appears, as the Atheneum puts it, to be "whether a few planters should in case of law proceedings be compelled to attend the Collector's Court in Malabar at an expense hardly felt by them, or, whether the poor Malabar myats should be forced to journey at an almost ruinous expense to themselves to a country foreign to them, and where they are likely to starve from cold and privation."

In appears from some of the Madras papers that a bad beginning has been made with the Madras Harbour works. More than two lakhs of rupees are said to have been literally thrown away, and heavy costs will have to be incurred to remedy the mistakes already made. Where the harbour should be, says the Athenæum, "a fine open expanse of silt has collected, and is being added to daily. The stone that was to form the side wall of the harbour is found ill-adapted for the purpose; no sooner is it thrown into the sea than it is washed back in pieces into the strand, rendering the beaching of the surf-boats a matter of danger."

THE 8th and 17th Bengal Cavalry at Peshawar have both been supplied with Snider carbines, six months sooner than was expected.

There is much justice in the complaints that reach us from India touching the poor return hitherto made by Government for the services of the troops employed in the recent Malayan Whereas a medal and six months' batta were given to all English and native regiments employed in Abyssinia, nothing of the same kind has yet been done for these others, although in Malaya the 10th and 80th Regiments, the Buffs, and the Gorkhas had quite as hard work to do, with harder fighting, and more sickness to contend against. The climate tried the Buffs severely; and before the arrival of reinforcements the 10th Regiment, split up into detachments, had for some time to encounter a guerrilla warfare like that which told so severely on our men in New Zealand. But with two exceptions the officers who did their work so well in Malaya remain unnoticed, though the seniors in all the four regiments commanded separate columns, and were left pretty much to their own resources. For similar services the Naval Brigade serving alongside of their military comrades were all rewarded; the officers being promoted, and the men receiving extra pay and allowances. Some of the substantive promotions gazetted by the Admiralty were given to naval officers for services rendered under the command of their military superiors; and the result is that more than one naval commander has thus become senior to the military officer under whose orders he won his promotion. Because the system of rewards was overdone in the Ashanti War, it is hard that the Malayan heroes should go altogether unrewarded. They have a right to expect that the same measure shall be meted out to them which was awarded to their more fortunate comrades in Abyssinia and Ashanti, or even in Lushai. Native Indian regiments going on foreign service perform a duty which to most of them is always distasteful, and the discharge of which in all former wars has been acknowledged by corresponding rewards and distinctions. For the Gorkhas who fought their way through the Perak jungles such an acknowledgment would be specially well-timed, seeing that never before was one of our Gorkha regiments sent on foreign service across the sea.

We learn from the Pioneer that the Puna Riots Commission have recommended no sweeping change in the law concerning agricultural debtors and usurious creditors. Their report, we are told, tends rather in the direction of tentative than trenchant remedies. For example, the commissioners are trenchant remedies. said to condemn the effect of short limitations. At present the Dakhan money-lender cannot sue for a debt more than three years old; the usual limit elsewhere being twelve years. If the contraction of this period was meant to benefit the rayat, it has had the opposite effect. The money-lender comes down upon him soon after two years have expired, and claims an instalment of his debt. A new bond, piling up interest on principal, is prepared, to be recast in its turn two or two-and a half years later. The rayat thus suffers from four separate acts of extortion, as against one he would have had to put up with under a twelve years' statute of limitations. One trick of the moneylenders is, it seems, "to get a decree and a warrant of arrest, and terrifying the debtor with this instrument to extort from him an instalment. The warrant is then returned to Court, with a statement by an accommodating peon to the effect that the debtor cannot be found; of course the instalment, having been paid by the unlucky rayat direct to the money-lender's emissary, not into Court, never gets any legal recognition, and is so much to the good for the creditor, whose claim remains at the original amount. Law is here the blind confederate of the swindler." In another way, too, it works mischief in the Bombay Presidency to an extent which is not usual elsewhere. No regulation prevails protecting the tools or implements with which a debtor gains his livelihood from seizure by a creditor armed with a decree of Court. The debtor in short can be deprived by law of the only weapons with which he can stave off starvation.

THE removal of Colonel Pogson from the command of the 6th Bengal N.I. has called forth some loud remonstrances against an act of apparent cruelty on the part of Sir Frederic Haines. The main facts of the case are said to be as follows:-In March last Colonel Pogson succeeded to the command of the 6th N.I., stationed at Lucknow. This regiment, the old 43rd N.I., is one of those which never mutinied. In all such regiments it has been the practice to promote in turn within the regiment those officers who have always served in it. When Colonel Holroyd left the 6th N.I. Colonel Pogson came naturally to its head. For this reward he had held on in the regiment for thirty-seven years, during which time he had never, it seems, been in any trouble with his senior officers. Between 1867 and 1869 he officiated in command of the regiment then stationed at Jalpiguri, and the inspecting general expressed his entire satisfaction with the very efficient state in which he found it. For the first time, however, a few months ago, a report, says the Pioneer, "the exact nature of which can only be conjectured, was sent in to head quarters by the General Commanding the Oudh Division, General Crawford The gist of this report was to declare Colonel Pogson unfit for the command, not of his regiment, but of the Lucknow Brigade. Lord Napier however, after careful deliberation, gave his decision in favour of Colonel Pogson's claims to be confirmed in the command of his regiment. Colonel Pogson was therefore confirmed in that command, Lord Napier expressing a hope that at the next inspection of the troops at Lucknow a report more favourable than the last would be sent in. Only two months afterwards, without waiting for the result of the next inspection, Sir Frederick Haines, who had just taken Lord Napier's place, adopted the stronghanded course of removing Colonel Pogson from the command of his regiment, and appointing another officer from another regiment in his stead. As a regimental officer there does not seem to have ever been the smallest imputation on Colonel Pogson's efficiency. The unfavourable report by the general of the division had reference to his alleged inability to command the brigade, and If the new that report Lord Napier had virtually set aside. Commander in Chief saw good reason for upsetting his predecessor's decision, what was there to prevent him from sending another officer to Lucknow to command the station, while leaving Colonel Pogson in the post to which he had honourably worked up for thirty seven years? If our statement of the case be correctly given, though of this we cannot be certain, it would seem as if Sir F. Haines had not treated Colonel Pogson with the forbearance due to his deserts.

WE regret to learn by telegram that Mr. Justice F. A. Glover, one of the Puisne Judges of the Calcutta High Court, died on Thursday last, August 10. Mr. Glover was a Bengal Civil Servant in 1845, and became a High Court Judge in 1868.

Whether the Report of the Royal Commission on Army Promotion will satisfy the bulk of those for whose benefit the Commission was virtually appointed we are not prepared to say. But it must be allowed that the principle on which the Commissioners have based their conclusions agrees with the facts laid before them, and with the ordinary conditions of military service before 1871. They find that the average rate of promotion under the purchase system has not been sustained since its abolition. This time last year there were 1,100 officers whose terms of service exceeded the previous average. The excess is now still greater, and, not withstanding the Royal Warrant of October 30, 1871, must continue for some years. The "chief and ever-present difficulty of securing promotion in all corps lies in this single circumstance, that the number of officers in each of these successive ranks is widely unequal, those in the upper ranks being few and in the lower numerous." They argue, therefore, that it would be hopeless to look for adequate promotion from any system of rethrement applied only to the upper ranks, for the simple reason that they cannot, without loss of efficiency and at an excessive cost, be vacated often enough to give the steps required. Thus the Commissioners come to the conclusion—

1. That promotion cannot in future be sustained without retirement being effected in the lower ranks.

2. That these retirements must in some form he brought about or accompanied by a pension or sum of money.

In the last ten years of the old purchase system the number of lieutenant-colonels who sold out of the Army was 49, and of majors 133, while those in the rank of captain were 1,051, and the lieutenants and ensigns who sold out numbered no less than 1,623. The Commissioners accordingly proposed to extend the process of compulsory retirement, combined with measures for encouraging officers to retire of their own accord. Of compulsory retirement they say :-

It has in principle been already adopted in the Royal Warrant of October 30, 1871, under which, for the sake of creating promotion, the commissions of major and lieutenant-colonel are granted only for the limited period of five years. We propose to go a step further, and to provide that the commissions of lieutenant and captain shall only be granted for a period not together exceeding in the whole twenty years, and that at the end of that period the officer, if he has not attained promotion, shall be retired from the regiment.

He may, however, choose between retiring from his regiment on half pay with the chance of employment in some branch of the military service, and retiring from the Army on a pension of £200 a year, with a step of honorary rank. An unpromoted major of twenty-seven and a lieutenant-colonel of thirty years' service will be offered a like alternative; the pensions in their case being respectively £300 and £365 a year.

COMPULSION, however, is not to be the rule, if other means of quickening promotion can be found sufficient. After eight years' service, for instance, an officer will be allowed to take a pension of £51 a year, or its commuted value; the pension rising according to a certain scale with each year of service, up to twenty. With a view to encourage voluntary retirements it is recommended that offers should be made " of appointments in the various departments of the public service connected with the Army, as well as by pensions or lump sums of money available in every rank, varying with rank and length of service." Other means failing, the authorities must fall back on compulsion. For purchase officers special provisions are laid down. Those for instance, who obtained their present regimental rank under the purchase system will not, while in that rank, be compelled to retire from the army or to resign their chances of promotion to the rank above them without some reasonable compensation; but, officers who have risen to a higher regimental rank since the abolition of purchase cannot claim exemption from any new rules affecting that higher rank. In no case, however, will a captain of infantry obtain regimental promotion after twenty-five years of total service. After completing twenty years' service, he will be allowed, if it so pleases him, either to retire from the army with a pension equivalent to the capital sum of £3,200, carrying the right to a widow's pension and a step of honorary rank, but in no case to exceed £259, or else to retire from the regiment with an unattached majority and the right to receive on retirement from the army £3,200.

It is reckoned that this scheme will involve a cost of £1,500,000 a year for the first five years, and of £800,000 for the next three, after which the ultimate charge will probably decline to about £350,000 a year. During the first period India is to contribute £200,000 a year, and about £100,000 afterwards. Why India should be asked to contribute anything towards the retiring allowances of officers lent to her for a few years is a question only to be answered on the assumption that India will benefit in some mysterious way from the working of the new scheme. The assumption, however, is easier to make than to prove; but so long as the Indian Government has to hire the services of British troops from the War Office it must be content to take them on such terms as the War Office may see fit to demand.

LAST Friday's discussion of the Indian Budget was remarkable chiefly for the very small attendance of parliamentary listeners, and for Lord G. Hamilton's opening statement, which, in the words of the Saturday Review, was at once, "clear, comprehensive, and methodical, and placed with masterly ability before the House the main features of the present position. But for the fall in the value of silver the story of financial progress in India would have been pleasant enough to hear. As it was, he could only say in effect that nothing could be done at present to remove the cloud hanging over Indian finance; that nobody knew how soon it might pass away, or whether the gleam of sunshine which had lately pierced it meant a lasting or only a fleeting change for the better. His own opinion, in which we are inclined to agree, favoured the view that panic has had much to do with the recent fall in silver. With reference to Mr. Dacosta's pamphlet, which we hope to notice next week, Lord G. Hamilton combated the idea that Indian revenue was no longer elastic. Of the other speakers, Messrs. Fawcett and Goschen were the most effective, the former urging the strictest economy in public works, and the latter frankly avowing his inability to forecast the future of the silver market, and putting aside all the remedies hitherto proposed for the present difficulties.

According to a Times telegram of August 13, from Calcutta, the Viceregal financial Resolution mentioned last week has not been favourably received by the Press or the public. The full text which has arrived from Simla does not add much to the telegraphed abstract. While recognising the disastrous effects of the depreciation in the value of the rupee, the Government appears unable to suggest any remedy except retrenchment in Public Works. No allusion is made to any of the plans proposed by various authorities. Meanwhile, the rate of exchange continues improving slowly, and things look more hopeful than they did a month ago.

INDIAN SURVEYS-III.

Nor the least valuable part of Mr. Markham's Abstract of the Indian Survey Reports deals with the Archmological Surveys conducted by General Cunningham from 1872 to 1874. The General's researches in the Yusufzai country brought to light many coins, sculptures, pieces of pottery, beads, and bones of men and animals, dating back to centuries long before the invasions of Mahmud of Ghazni. The mounds containing the coins appear to be the ruins of villages which flourished before the time of Alexander himself. The Aryan legends on the coins appear to show that most of the Buddhist monasteries and temples of Yusufzai date from B.C. 50 to A.D. 150. With the decline of Buddhism in this region, Brahmanical coins show by their numbers the growing ascendency of the revived Brahmanic creed. In the neighbourhood of Shahbaz-Garhi, an old Buddhist capital famous as the site of one of King Asoka's rock inscriptions, General Cunningham explored a cave in the Karamar Hill, which he identified with that of the Buddhist Prince Sudana or Sudatta. Besides various interesting relics of that prince, he succeeded in transcribing the great inscription of Asoka, engraved in Aryan characters on " a large shapeless mass of trap rock twenty-four feet long, ten feet high, and ten feet thick." This inscription seems to antedate the rise of the Andhra dynasty to B.C. 263, thus making it contempary with Asoka.

The ruins of Takht-i-bahi, on a hill twenty-eight miles N.E. of Peshawar, comprise a stupa or "tope" surrounded by chapels, an open court with lofty chapels for colossal statues, a monastery, and some minor buildings. Of the statues, little remains save the fragments first discovered by Dr. Bellew, but their great size may be inferred from the height of the chapels -still 25 to 30 feet-in which they once stood. Not far off are the ruins of Sahri-Bahlol, which include a lofty mound or etupa, supposed to date from 500 or 600 A.D. A long low mound near it yielded ten statues of Buddha, varying in size from the colossal to half size, besides pieces of pottery covered with a black shiny glaze, and a broken lingam of white marble, with part of a single face of Siva. Some of the coins bore Siva's bull, while others were early Indo-Scythian. Buddhist ruins at Jamal Garhi revealed many sculptures in a fair state of preservation, with distinct traces of gilding about them. In the chapels also were found gilded capitals, and pilasters with capitals in the Indo-Corinthian style, having "boldly designed volutes, and two tiers of acanthus leaves deeply and delicately chiselled." Some sculptures were also obtained from the ruins at Kharkai, and the ruins at Ránigat just beyond the British frontier, are said to be remarkable for the neatness and accuracy of their architecture.

One of the inscriptions brought from Yusufzai brings in the name of King Gondophares of the Saxon Legenda Aurea, whis said to have received St. Thomas the Apostle at his cours St. Thomas, according to the legend, was sold as a slave to Gondophares, whom he afterwards converted. The Rajah Hodor Udi, whose stronghold on the Indus was Khairabad, opposite Attok, is identified by General Cunningham with the Indo Scythian Yuti or Yuchi, the race which became masters of the Kabul valley towards the end of the second century B.C.

In the course of his researches at Shahderi, identified by hin-with the ancient Taxila, General Cunningham unearthed som Buddhist Vihars, or temples, adorned with Ionic columns of pure Greek design, whose basis sometimes correspond with the pure Attic base employed in the Erectheum at Athens. These temples are the first examples of the Ionic order ever yet discovered in India, and one of them seems identical with tha described by Philostratus. The coins here discovered show that the temple existed at least as far back as 80 B.C.

Besides other Buddhist remains at Sirkap and elsewhere, the great Manikyála Tope was again examined by General Cunningham, who had first visited it in 1863. His latest measurements give the height of the dome at ninety-two feet, resting on a base fifteen feet high and 127 across. Two gigantic heads of Buddha in coarse sandstone were dug up near the Tope. In the Salt Range between the Indus and the Jhilam are a number of old Hindu temples, all of the Kashmirian style of archi tecture and apparently dating from the ninth century of our era. Among the coins discovered in this region were some pure Greek ones of Heliocles and Antalcidas. Coins and other interesting relics of olden days were found in Shorkot, Harapa on the Ravi, Talamba, and Depalpur. In Multan General Cunningham discovered traces of the great temple once erected to the sun-god Aditya, and would identify a layer of ashes found below the surface in the present fort with the remains of Malli, which was sacked by Alexander's soldiers furious at their leader's wound. The glazed tiles and bricks found in an upper layer of rubbish belong apparently to Mohammedan days. It is reckoned that the mass of debris in the fort has accumulated about 22 feet in 2,000 years. The large size of the bricks found in the ruins of Pathankot attest the Hindu origin of that old fort.

Nagarkot or Kot Kangra, the chief fortress in the Jalandhar district, contains no buildings older than the ninth or tenth century; but it still retains some of its old fame as a place for the manufacture of noses. Noses indeed are no longer amputated under our rule as in the old Sikh days, but it appears that people from Kabul and Nepal still come to Kangra for treatment. The flesh for the new nose is taken from the patient's forehead. The holy temple of Jwála Mukhi, or "the flaming mouth," twenty miles from Kangra, is remarkable for the escape of inflammable gas from a cleft in the rock on which it stands, and for a splendid folding-door of silver plates.

Two distinct styles of architecture, the Indo-Persian and Indo-Greek, are to be traced in Yusufzai. The former, which must have been the older style, prevails over all Northern India, while the latter is confined to north-western Punjab and Kashmir, where it seems to have superseded the Indo-Persian. If the pure Greek style never took root in India proper, the influence of Greek art is none the less manifest in the work of native architects. At Bharhut General Cunningham seems to have discovered the earliest examples of the Indo-Persian style, in the gateways and sculptures of a magnificent Buddhist railing, whose probable date is in the third century B.C. Other specimens may be seen at Buddha Gaya, Sanchi, and one or two other places. Of the Indo-Greek style the Corinthian variety prevails in the Punjab, and the Doric in Kashmir. example of the Ionic has yet been found in the Buddhist Vihar at Shahderi abovenamed.

In Western India Mr. Burgess pursued his researches with innch success at Junnar, Ahmadabad, Junagarh, Naulakha, and Beveral places in Kachh and Gujarát; exploring Buddhist caves, Jain temples, Mohammedan mosques, and other curious relics The Archaeological Survey of Southern of a remote past. India has not yet been begun; but it seems likely that a beginning will soon be made under Mr. A. C. Burnell, Sessions Judge of Tanjor, who is said to combine all the qualifications needed for a task of greater difficulty than the surveys of Northern or Western India.

The remainder of Mr. Markham's useful abstract deals briefly with the results of geographical exploration in Tibet, Kashghar, and Wakhan. One important result of the "Pandit's" travels in Great Tibet was the discovery of a great snowy range to the north of the Sanpu or Brahmaputra. With regard to the Guartier of Bengal, entrusted to Dr. Hunter, we learn that five volumes are now finished, dealing with thirteen only of the thirty-seven districts which make up the Lower Provinces.

HAZARISTAN.—IV.

The Foladi muster above 100,000 souls—some of whom reside in the districts pertaining to Bamean, but the greater number in Bisut.

Ther carry on a considerable trade with Cabul in felts, carpets, wood, clarified butter, sheep, and cattle. Both Foladi and Jakuri swarm in thousands down to Affghanistan and the Punjab during the winter season in search of work, as do, to a less extent, all the other Hazarehs, except the Sheikh Ali and the Mongols. They are skilful in earth and stone work; the women labour as well as the man, and even the children help to carry the earth.

Immediately about Bamean, and to the north and north-west, lie Yarlous broken tribes of the Hazarehs. The subordinate districts of Bamean—Kalu on the south; Irak and Shibr on the east; Foladi, Sorkhdurra, and Shibortu, on the west; and Ak Robat on the north -are inhabited partly by Tajike and partly by Foladi Hazarehs, adveady included in the strength of that tribe. Banuck and Dusht Sured, west and east of the valley of Kamurd (north of Syghan,) are inhabited respectively by a section of the Jakuris called Ajuris, and by Mongols. Roi and Kartchu, north and north-west of Doab (the valley north of Kamurd), belong respectively to some Hazarehs balled Arabs, and to a branch of the Hazareh Zeidnat-Eimaks. The district of Balkhab, on the river of Balkh, which is subject to the Urbeg Khanate of Sirpul, is occupied by a section of the Sirjungle branch of the Deh Zangi. 'The total of these, leaving out the Foladi already reckoned in Bisut, may be estimated at 30,000 souls. The valleys of Bamean, Syghan, Kamurd, and Doab, are themselves inhabited by Tajiks to the number of some 20,000 souls, and are included, equally with the Hazareh valleys, in the Hazaristan. Bamean, with its dependent districts, and Syghan, Banuck, Dusht Sufed, and Kamurd, pay a cash revenue of £10,000 per annum to an Affghan Governor yearly deputed there.

These scattered Hazareh districts border upon various routes. continuation of the great route from Cabul to Bameau and Khulun peaches the valley of Syghan through the district and by the pass of Akrobat. Thence it continues, either direct over the Dunuan Sur-kun pass to the valley of Kamurd, or reaches that valley by the Nal Forash pass and through the Dusht Sufed district to the east, or by the Bannck pass and through the Bannck district to the west. A branch route also leads via Ghori to Kunduz from the Dusht Sufed east of the Kamurd route, and this outflanks the difficult Kora Kotul pass between the Kamurd and Doab valleys. From Kamurd, the direct route, crossing the Kara Kotul to Doab, proceeds from thence to Khuram and Roi, the last valley in the Hazaristan, whence it enters the district of Khulm. A branch route leaves at Khuram for Elippol and Shibberghan, by Kartchu and Balkhab, both before mentlemed as Hazaristan districts. tioned as Hazareh districts. Moreover, the route which runs from Candahar to Balkh through the Deh Kunde, Deh Zangi, and Deh Surkh tribes also follows the river of Balkh through the district of Balkhab of the Sirjungle Deh Zangi.

East and north-east of Bisut lie the tribe of Shaikh Ali or Sunni Hazarehs, who are of the same sect as the Eimaks, and as predatory in their habits, if less formidable in strength, as any tribe of that kindred race. The tribe is small in numbers, but some sections of the Mongols, under the name of Gubbi and Turkoman, inhabit among them. Their settlements extend along the Hindu Kush east of Bamean to near Khinjan, descending the southern slopes into the Ghorbund valley, and on the north reaching nearly to Ghori. They infest the passes of the Hindu Kush, especially those on the Ghorbund Intest the passes of the Hindu Rush, especially those on the Ghorbund route, and no traffic can pass thereby without payment of blackmail. They muster, with the affiliated Mongols, only some 20,000 souls, but have nevertheless a very formidable reputation both as warriors and freebooters; and in 1867 they inflicted a severe reverse, near Bamean, upon a detachment of the Cabul army moving against Bakh. The tribe pays no tribute, and is entirely independent of control. Their country abounds in iron and lead, but they have no industries of says kind and near hittle cultivation, and live entirely industries of any kind, and very little cultivation, and live entirely by their flocks and herds, or by their predatory incursions, which The Sheikh Ali country is extend as far as Nederab and Ghori. bounded on the north by Ghori, and on the east by Khinjan, both pertaining to Kunduz; on the west by the valleys of Irak, Syghan, and Dusht Sufed; on the south by the Kohistan of Cabul.

Such are the statistics of the Hazaristan. It is proposed now to lease this entire tract—nearly 350 miles in length, and from 100 to 200 miles in breadth, and containing about 800,000 inhabitants—for £30,000 per annum (including Great Nawur and the Foladi districts in the valley of the Cabul River, on which the Afghans have greatly in the valley of the Cabul River, on which the Afghans have greatly encroached), with yearly increments of £3,000 per annum up to £60,000 per annum. It is anticipated that the revenues realized will meet the cost of administration and the payments under the lease. The cost of a strong subsidiary force, to be maintained for the defence of Afghanistan, and to be raised among the inhabitants of the Hazaristan, is regarded as a political charge similar to that incurred on account of the subsidies now paid to the Ameer, of which it will in a great measure take the place. This outlay, and that incurred upon strengthening the strategical points, and on improving the communications, both of the Hazaristan itself, and in rear thereof, leading to Hindostan, being made by our own officers, will not be misapplied or wasted, (there is the strongest reason for believed that the subsidies given to the Ameer for the parameter of his ing that the subsidies given to the Ameer for the payment of his troops go in a great measure to swell his private accumulations,) and being expended on the people of the Hazaristan, will enrich that country, and return to us indirectly in increase of revenue.

To take the latter outlay first: It is proposed to spend, roughly, £100,000 upon the restoration and remodelling of the fortifications of Herat, in general accordance with the detailed plan drawn up by Major Sanders in 1839; also to lay out about £25,000 upon works to secure the routes through the Hazaristan, and that from Mery direct to Herat. Such works would probably be forts constructed at Syghan and Bamean on the Cabul-Khulin route, at Shehr Berber on the Balkh River route, at Killa Nao on the Herat-Maimunna route, and at Khushk on the Herat-Mery, and the alternative Herat-Maimunna route, which routes fork at Khushk—with outworks to guard the principal passes in front. These routes themselves, in rear of the forts, together with the cross routes joining them, would have to be rendered thoroughly practicable. The total mileage is, approximately, as follows:-

150 miles. Cabul to Bamean and Syghan . ,, to Deh Zangi and Herat . Bamean to Shehr Berber and Killa Nao 200 ,, Herat to Killa Nao . 60 to Khushk 40 or, in all, 800 miles, which, at £50 a mile, would cost £40,000. Say a total outbry of £200,000 in the Hazaristan and Herat. These works might be spread over three or four years, and could be performed entirely by Hazareh labourers, with whom such work is a special profession, and who spread over Afghanistan and the northwest frontier of the Punjab during the winter months in search of such work. It may well be imagined that £200,000 thus thrown into a poverty-stricken country would materially enhance its pros-perity and beneficially affect the revenue we should derive there-

In addition to the above works, the lines of communication with the Paniab would require to be put in order :-

Jus mound require to so put
Herat to Candahar			380 miles.
Candahar to Jacobabad .			840 ,,
" to Dera Ismail Khan			360 ,,
Cabul to Peshawar			190 ,,
,, to Ghuzni and Kohat			830 ,,

Total 1,600 miles, which, at £25 a mile (being much easier work), would cost £40,000, or say £50,000, and which work could be done partly by Hazareh gangs of labourers, and partly by Suliman Kheyl Ghiljis, who are also professional navigators.

We now come to the proposals regarding the administration of the Hazaristan and the maintenance of a Hazaristan contingent.

We would divide the Hazaristan into four nizamuts or districts, as follows:

1. Bamean, including the Shaikh Ali, the scattered Hazarehs, the Tajik districts, the Mongols, the Deh Surkh, and the Deh Zangi. The boundaries of this district would be—to the north, Sirpul and Serbagh, belonging to the district of Khulm; to the east, Khinjan, belonging to the district of Kunduz; to the south, the district of Helmund; to the west, the district of Ghor. The head-quarters of the district should be at Bamean.

would be—to the north, Sirpul and Maimunna; to the east, the districts of Bamean and Helmund; to the south, Girlolsk and Farah; to the west, Herat and the district of Killa Nao. The population would be about 200,000 souls, and a light assessment would yield at first £10,000 per annum. The head-quarters of the district should be at Sheberek.

4. Killa Nao, including the Zeidnat and Jamahedi Hazareh Eimâks and the north-western settlements of the Firozkohis. The boundaries of the district would be—to the north and west, the Turkomans; to the south, Herat; to the east, the district of Ghor. The population would be about 200,000 souls, and a light assessment would yield at first about £10,000. The head-quarters of the district should be at Killa Nao.

For the first year, till the regular payments to the men of the contingent (about £100,000 per annum) and on account of the works made silver plentiful in the country, the revenue would have to be taken in kind, both on grain and live stock, and converted into money through the ubiquitous Hindu trader, who always follows in our wake. Afterwards it would be taken in cash by appraisement, in lieu of the actual share of the produce, and eventually, no doubt, it would be practicable to give leases for the grazing fees on cattle, and to charge upon the cultivated areas by a rate. At the outset £45,000 per annum would be the outside we could hope to realize from the country, and after payment of £30,000 to the Ameer, this would leave but a narrow margin for the cost of administration, which must accordingly be estimated on an economical scale.

Evidently one of the most pressing needs would be a topographical arvey. This would be the work of a party detailed by the special department existing in India for such operations, and would not form an ordinary administrative charge. On the survey so furnished, the revenue establishments would gradually fill in the details of boundaries, cultivated areas, &c.; and for this purpose, as well as for the laying out of irrigation works, a special establishment would require eventually to be entertained when the finances could admit of it. At first, however, the only administrative outlay admissible would be that on absolutely indispensable revenue establishments.

It would appear to be the most economical system of administration to utilize as far as possible the military establishment of the contingent in the performance of the administrative duties. would be economical, and, for many years, evidently politic, that the preventive police duties should be taken by the contingent. Detachments of the mounted branch of that body should maintain order, and furnish the guards and escorts for treasure and other purposes. Again, if the contingent were composed of bodies of cavalry and infantry united in one regiment on the principle of the guide corps of the Punjab force, the commandants of these regiments—having subordinate commandants for both the cavalry and infantry—might undertake the administrative supervision of the Nizamuts, on the same principle as when, in the early days of our frontier administration, the commandant of one of the regiments at Kohat was also the civil officer in charge of that district. With the aid of a native revenue assistant, such a system would work effectually and advantageously. On this basis, then, the following arrangements are proposed:-

One mixed corps of foot and horse in each district, raised from the people of the idet, with the following strength and pay

The total cost of each regiment would thus be, with its mule train, hospital and magazine establishment, and other contingencies, about £90,000 per annum, and, if armed with the most modern equipment, if the infantry were trained Pioneers, and the Cavalry were organized as efficient mounted Infantry, a force of four such regiments would be able to place in line of bathle five thousand troops, fully equal in value to the whole of the existing Afghan army. The Pioneer Infantry could be employed, granting there working pay at some small extra rate, upon the road works and furtifications contemplated, and the mounted branch would perform the police duties of the Administration.

For the immediate revenue duties each Commandant and Political Officer should have one native as istant, called Nazim. on £360 per annum; two Collectors, called Tehsildars, each £120, per annum—each entrusted with the collection of a moiety of the nizamut (called a Tehsil) under the Nazim. Six assistants to the above called Pehkars, each £60 per annum,

These, with their staff of officials and peons, and those also required for the office of the commandant, would cost for each nizamut about £1,500 per annum. Adding to this sum a third part of the commandant's pay, which should be debited to the revenue administration, we have the cost of administration of each district at £2,000 per annum, or £8,000 per annum for the four.

To carry up the same economical and efficient system of combina-tion of military and civil powers in the same hands, we would propose that the chief authority in Hazaristan should be the Political Agent and Brigadier, on a salary of £3,000 per annum, with the following staff :-

Brigade-Major £960 per ann. Engineer Officer

The duty of the Engineer officer would be to supervise the various road, fortification, and irrigation works carried out by the military and civil staff of each district. The surgeon would similarly supervise the military hospitals of each regiment, which should also be available as general dispensaries for the people of the district in which they are located, and he would have a central hospital at the Agency head-quarters, with a special medical establishment belonging thereto. The head-quarter staff, with the Political Agent's, Brigade Major's, and Engineer's offices, and the central medical establishment, might thus cost altogether £10.000 per annum, of which not more than one-third should be debited to "Administration." Of course there would be numerous contingent expens a which have not been allowed for-travelling allowances, leave allowances, contingencies of all kinds. Nevertheless it is pretty certain that, under this system, the administration of the Hazaristan would be covered by the margin left out of the revenue after paying the amount due to the Ameer under the lease. The military charges, which may amount to £150,000 per annum, do not represent a larger sum than we are probably willing in any case to pay to the Ameer of Afghanistan by way of subsidy. There will be, according to these proposals, a separate outlay of £250,000 or £300 000 on roads and fortifications; and under these arrangements, we shall be such exceedings bare and under these arrangements we shall by such expenditure have an impregnable frontier east of Herat, held by reliable troops. Herat itself will be, with the fortifications afforded and the support of the contingent, thoroughly defensible till such time as an army could arrive to its relief from Hindostan. The construction of good communications will enable such an army to be moved up with ease, and will develop the full efficiency of the contingent in being able to move freely about within the Hazaristan, either to support Herat or strengthen any other threatened point.

Accepting the fact that we must protect the Afghan frontier in some way, the plan proposed appears much better within the compass of our financial and military means, and, politically, much less objectionable than any other that has been suggested. It is very possible that the scheme may be much improved, or a better one suggested. The writer's object will be quite served if the matter be well considered and if in this case, in a really many the start has deadless as the scheme and in this case. sidered, and if, in this or in any other way, the step he dreads can be avoided of the occupation of Herat and Candahar by divisions of the

LORD NORTHBROOK AND THE INDIA OFFICE.

The Bombay Gazette thinks that Lord Northbrook's superiority as a financier must be allowed by every impartial reader of the recently published correspondence; but it is at the same time quite plain that the late Viceroy is guilty of something very like disingenuousness when he defends his conduct in passing the Tariff Act without having previously consulted the Secretary of State. It is true, as he points out, that the practice of Indian Governments had been to pass financial Bills on their own authority—true also that Lord Salisbury's despatch of July, 1875, insisting on precedence being given to the cotton duties in any plan for the reduction of taxation had not reached India when the Tariff Bill was brought before the Council. But Lord Northbrook knew perfectly well, informally, from Lord Salisbury's published speeches, what stress was laid at home on the importance of reconciling Manchester and India; and with the telegraph at his command, it seems absurd for him to contend that he could not have confidentially communicated with the Secretary of State on the subject of his proposed financial reforms before introducing the Tariff Bill. We may add that, so long as the Secretary of State is responsible to Parliament for the administration of India, the view taken by Lord Northbrook of his right as Viceroy to carry out important financial changes, which he knows to be opposed to the policy of the Secretary of State, without notifying his intentions to the Home Government is obviously unsound. Unless the Secretary of State is a remarkably good-natured and weak man, he will not quietly submit to the humiliation of being arrogantly set aside and treated with contempt by the Viceroy; and we have seen in this instance that Lord Northbrook's clever device of summarily passing an Act which he knew would be received with intense disfavour at home has only provoked an open breach between the two Governments, and made the revision of the Indian Tariff the subject of a much more bitter and angry correspondence than would have gone on if Lord Northbrook had striven to effect some compromise with Lord Salisbury before altering the Tariff. The double government of India cannot be carried on if the Viceroy deliberately refuses to act in harmony with the Secretary of State; and Lord Salisbury in the 19th paragraph of his legislative despatch of the 31st of May, in which he insists that the Government of India, while retaining the power of initiating legislation, shall observe the practice of previous communication with the Home Government before passing financial or other measures of legislation, has, in our opinion, stated courteously but plainly the only conditions consistent with the smooth working of the existing Indian constitution. Speaking in the name of the non-official community, native as well as European, we certainly repudiate the pretensions of a few Indian officials at Simla to be acknowledged as the true representatives of Indian interests, and to have the right of dictating to the country in all matters legislative and administrative without being checked in any way by the Home Government. We prize the privilege of appeal to the Secretary of State and the Parliament of England as our only security against subjection to a mere tyranny in India.

Digitized by GOG16

INDIA AND LANCASHIRE.

The Pioneer holds that the argument of Mr. Jackson, that perhaps in the long run the finer qualities of goods may be turned out of Indian mills, does not prove his point that the duties are protective in their nature. Far less does he succeed in showing that they were designed by Anglo-Indian statesmen to be protective. There is not a single line in the deliberations of the Council which suggest a wish to protect a rising Indian industry at the expense of the English trade. Protection has been advocated by some Anglo-Indian papers, and protection has also been advocated on general principles by Professor Thorald Rogers. But the Indian Governprinciples by Professor Thorald Rogers. But the Indian Government is responsible for the opinions of neither the one nor the other. We ourselves have always contended that the duties are defensible on the ground that the Indian revenues cannot afford to give them up. We do not deny that to a slight extent they are even at present protective, and eventually may be more so. So far as they are protective they are objectionable. But no form of taxation is without its faults; and if India was in a position to abandon any part of its present revenues there exist many taxes against which there are far more serious objections than against the cotton duties. Jackson's second point is a mere reiteration of his first. ceeds to show by calculations of cost that the Indian mills would without the duties have the monopoly of the coarse trade; whereas without the duties have the monopoly of the coarse trade; whereas the latter very materially protect the manufacture of the finer goods. To remove the duties on coarse goods alone, as some have proposed, would, according to Mr. Jackson, be of no use to Manchester. They must go altogether. There is no good in reproducing the calculations of cost, and of the proportional incidence of the duties on the different qualities of cotton goods into which Mr. Jackson enters. His data are mainly hypothetical, and even if approximately correct, can only be justly appreciated by manufacturers. The competition which Mr. Jackson fears is as yet non-existent, and from what we have heard of Indian mills it seems existent, and from what we have heard of Indian mills it seems very doubtful whether the slight attempts they have made to manufacture the finer varieties have achieved even a small amount of success. In any case the necessity for the "immediate and total abolition of the import duties," which Manchester insists on, is not made out by its spokesman. He admits that the coarse trade is not affected by them, since it has virtually passed into Indian hands. All he proves is, that the finer trade may, in the course of years, be protected by the duties. The conclusion is that the duties may eventually have to be repealed. This was the view of the Indian Government. What the Viceroy felt was that at the present moment India could not afford to relinquish revenue to the amount of nearly a million sterling. The time might come when this could be done with due regard to the interests of the Indian Exchequer, and he hoped for such a day. Mr. Jackson objects to this view. In his eyes it is "a regarding of the question from an exclusively Indian, and not an Imperial, point of view," and is therefore self-condemned. There is a certain fascination about the word "imperial," which might lead many persons to assent to Mr. Jackson's words. It suggests a central power, broad-browed and luminous, holding its suggests a central power, broad-browed and luminous, holding its course unmoved amid jarring local interests, tempering with nobler principles of equity the short-sighted selfishness of factions, and the narrow-mindedness of cliques. Very different is Mr. Jackson's idea of an "imperial policy." He reminds us that paramount powers in all ages have made a good thing out of the countries subject to them. "Holland derives a revenue from Java, Spain from Cuba, when Cuba is at peace." He might have added that

Rome, the prototype of all Empires and all "imperial policy," fattened to satiety on her miserable provincials. There is no lack of examples to justify the use or the abuse of "imperial" as a synonym for the greed and grasping selfishness so often displayed by the paramount power. This, however, is not the meaning in which Burke, or Chatham, or Palmerston used the word nor the meaning which the world at large attaches to it. Even Mr. Jackson is not prepared to go the length which his examples authorise. He tells us that England is the first nation which has held it "among the obligations due to a great dependency that attention should be given to the development of her resources, the promotion of her moral and material progress, the elevation of her people with singleness of purpose, and without the subordination of her trading and commercial interests to the promotion of the corresponding elements in the prosperity of the ruling state." Ask any Frenchman or German his opinion as to how Indian interests have been dealt with by the English legislature, and he will say that, until recent years, the policy which Mr. Jackson describes and doubtfully praises has been studiously ignored.

THE RAJAH OF NABHA AT SIMLA.

SIMLA, July 2.—The interchange of visits with the Viceroy was no doubt the purpose of our Rajah's temporary establishment at Since the publication of Mr. Griffin's book, I suppose that M. de Nabha has been promoted in some way, and that he was better posted in reference to his right and privileges than I. I can see now that the general smartening up that the Tin-Koti has undergone in these last few weeks has not been without a definite purpose. Fresh wooden railings have been planted along the bridlepath leading down from the cart-road to his Highness's domain, path leading down from the cart-road to his Highness's domain, the broad space beside the house has been raked and cleaned, and a generally ship-shape appearance imparted to the whole abode. Going down the other afternoon to a path which overlooks its gravel platform and approaches, I found the Rajah's social triumph on the point of consummation. His company of soldiers was drawn up in a line that no ruler could have made straighter, their bright red uniforms flaming in the afternoon sun. The Rajah has not boroared how Mijestry's preside that of road for his array contention. rowed her Majesty's precise tint of red for his army, contenting himself with a gorgeous magenta hue; but if this is perhaps a shade less blazing than the royal scarlet, en revanche the Rajah's men are red all over, from turban top to toe, so that individually they are more effective, perhaps, than a single black-trousered Englishman and ready, each of them if called upon, to go to a fancy ball as Mephistophiles. His Highness's flamers were faced on Friday by a murky company of Goorkhas, and flanked by their band. Oh! that band, as I remarked before. For weeks past it has been practising during the greater part of each day, and the musically endowed residents of this particular khud have been using the strongest language on the subject which custom sanctions for their respective sexes. The airs in which its guiding spirit delights are almost exclusively of that class of which "Pop goes the Weasel" may be taken as the type. The repertoire is not cramped in any way; on the contrary, it is extensive, but it never soars above the level of "Tootletum, Tootle-tum Tee." But that is not our grievance. It is not But that is not our grievance. It is not "Tootle-tum," &c., in itself we complain of, but the unwarrantable liberties taken with the original text of Tootle-tum. Tune of course, in the musical sense, intonation, is a matter of degree. Some people are fanatical about time, while a large measure of musical enthusiasm may be compatible in others with an ear dull to the subtle delicacies of inexactitude at which our purist raves; but the Nabha band presumes on this theory. When, for instance, in playing "God Save the Queen," two or three cornets get entirely off the line, and the big drum clings to an independent calculation about the time, and a bassoon or so appears to have confused the National Anthem with "Lucy Neal," that is taking an unfair advantage of involuntary listeners. However, since the Viceroy's visit, let me hasten in fairness to add, our band seems to have regarded its mission in this life as accomplished, and we have heard it no more.

Of course it was in full blast during Lord Lytton's stay. The Rajah had gone up to the cart-road to meet him, and a regular Lord Mayor's show poured down the bridle-path. There were footmen with silver staves and red coats, drum-majors grafted on wearers of Doggett's coat and badge; other footmen in yellow chogas, which I am told were velvet, and gold staves, horses caparisoned in gold embroidery, and riders in flowered silks of many patterns. Then there was the Viceroy in the time-honoured frock-coat and white trousers, which stamp the Governor-General, riding between the Rajah, his host, and Mr. Thornton, his Foreign Secretary; several members of his household followers; then more native horsemen, if I remember rightly, and then a live lynx led in a string. In what way this bad-tempered animal was supposed to contribute to the dignity of the Viceroy's entry I do not know. He lives close by, I may mention, spending his time on a charpoy, generally clad in a pink-wadded dressing gown, and wishing evidently that he were at liberty to fly at passing dogs. I suppose his serious mission in life is to hunt deer for the amusement of the Rajah, and that as a member of the household it was thought he had better join the procession.—Pioneer Correspondent.

STATION TALK.

Naini-Tal, July 1.—Sir Henry Ramsay is really going home for a few months, and Mr. Elliot Colvin succeeds to the officiating appointment. Mr. Colvin's tenure of the new office will be such a short one that I fancy he will probably content himself with driving the coach along in its old groove. You will be glad to hear that there is a probability of Sir John Strachey returning to resume the reins in November and December next, so that Sir George will hardly have time to do more than look about him before it will be time for him to depart. The unrighteous are rejoicing, being exceedingly glad over their escape from four months of psalm-singing; but the face of the missionary has lengthened; neither is that jaunty air visible which the possible advent of Mr. Inglis inspired him to assume a week or so ago. The goody goody people are "out" again and—Bethal weeps o'er Inglis gone to Oudh.

In your issue of the 29th ultimo you are rather rough on the powers that be for removing the pontoon bridge from Cawnpore to Calpee. The question, like all others, has two sides, and while your article shows why the pontoon bridge should not have been removed, let me give you a few reasons why it should. The pontoons, in their original position, were a source of danger to the railway bridge all through the rains. No matter how securely the pontoons were moored, a faulty forging or a weak link in one of the mooring chains might have resulted any day, when the river was in high flood, in the departure of the bridge on its own account on a sailing trip down stream, when it is more than possible that it would have removed one or two of the railway bridges en passant. Again, it is only when it is most dangerous, as during the rains, that a pontoon bridge is really useful in keeping open communications. statistics go to prove that the railway bridge is more than sufficient to pass over all the traffic that there is during the rains. Should it prove that the railway bridge is unequal to the task of the cold weather traffic, nothing will be simpler than for the magistrate to throw a fair-weather bridge across the cold weather channel, and so divert a portion of the traffic from the railway bridge. By the transfer of the pontion of the traine from the ranway bridge. By the transfer of the pontion bridge to Calpee permanent communication is secured with Bundelcund throughout the year, and we have a through line of communication opened up with the Gauges and Jumna, both permanently bridged. In a strategic point of view I think this must be allowed to outweigh the chance of a gun and limber tumbling into the river, especially when you come to consider that the whole battery might be sent (I think) through the sub-way in perfect safety. - Pioneer Correspondent.

NAGPUR, July 9.—Matters are assuming a serious aspect owing to the want of rain here. Cultivators and ryots are indeed seriously apprehensive, if not of a regular famine, at least of being put back a great deal in their present year's crops. This will occasion untold labour and trouble upon the ryots to recoup themselves in order that they may be enabled to meet the heavy demands made upon them by those who advance them funds to get on with their agricultural pursuits, to say nothing of the amount of litigation they will have to go into. I hear that rice crops have entirely failed in some parts of the Central Provinces, and failure of other produce must inevitably follow if we do not have some extraordinarily good showers of rain before long. Three natives died at Kamptee the other day from the effect of snake-bite. A woman who went to a well to draw water felt that something had hold of her finger while she was in the act of emptying the water into her pot; she saw it was a snake she had drawn up in her bucket, and tried to wrench it off, but in so doing left a bit of flesh between the snake's teeth. She hastened away and related what had occurred, when a Brahmin priest was summoned to mumble some incantations over her, but seeing that this had no effect she was removed to a hospital, where after a few hours she expired. The snake is supposed to have been of the carpet snake species, and not quite half-a-yard long. An honorary magistrate in the city of Nagpur is said to be in serious trouble; his trial will doubtless take place shortly, and if I can ascertain the particulars of the case I shall not fail to communicate them to you. Mr. Morris, the Chief Commissioner, together with his Secretary, Mr. John Neill, are expected to arrive at Nagpur from Pachmarhi to-morrow. It is reported that Mr. Morris will be here only for one month this time.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

DYING ON THE BANKS OF A RIVER.—In spite of the endeavours of the police to prevent such occurrences, cases now and then come to light of the still fond adherence of the natives to the old custom of dying on the banks of the river. Only on Sunday a native was found in her very last moments, as it were, on the banks of the river at Nunderbaree Ghat. She was in a series of convulsive fits when the inspector found her and had her removed to hospital sharp.—Calcutta Statesman, July 12.

THE "TENASSERIM."—It is reported that the commander of the Tenasserim has been ordered to hold himself in readiness for another voyage, but the destination is not yet known. It is rumoured that the vessel will proceed to Australia and be placed at the disposal of the Remount Agent there.

DARJILING.—Sickness is generally decreasing in the Darjiling district, and the coolies are beginning to return to work, though one or two fresh outbreaks have occurred during the week. There is still some cholera about the district, but, generally speaking, the number of cases are less, and the recoveries greater in proportion than before the rain set in.

COURAGEOUS ACT OF A LADY.—A lady, Mrs. Havelock, has just received the usual reward for destroying a tigress on the grounds near her house on the Koondahs. Mrs. Havelock had noted the proximity of the beast, and set out some poisoned food for it. The beast ate of this, and was killed. The Neilgherry paper observes that all the more credit is due to Mrs. Havelock for her pluck, as her husband was away from the estate at the time.

THE CHARBAGH BRIDGE.—A Lucknow paper says that the Charbagh Bridge over the canal is in a shaky condition. It shook under the pressure of some elephants which passed over it the other day, and frightened the grandees in the silver howdahs so much so that they got out and walked. The bridge is of very long standing, and is a native structure. It stands about 75 or 100 feet above the lever of the bed of the canal.

DEATH OF A SHIP'S MATE.—John Head, fourth officer on board the steamer Duke of Argyll, died suddenly in the afternoon of the 30th June. On the police receiving information of the circumstance his body was conveyed to the dead-house of the Calcutta Medical College Hospital, where on a post mortem examination by Dr. Woodford it was discovered that the deceased had died from sero-congestive apoplexy.

DROWNED.—A European, named James Mackenzie, fireman on board the steamer Chancellor, was drowned on the night of the 1st July. It appears that the deceased and four other seamen from the same vessel had gone ashore on the fatal evening. They returned about ten P.M., and the four others went up the ship's ladder safely; but Mackenzie, when about to step from the dinghi to the ladder, made a false step, fell into the river, and was never seen to rise again.

SHIPPING RETURNS.—From the resolution on the annual report of the Marine Department we learn that there was a decrease of eight in the total number of ships that entered and left the port of Calcutta during the past year, and upwards of 40,000 tons in their gross tonnage. This decrease, which is attributed to the dulness of trade, was entirely in steamers, the number and tonnage of sailing vessels showing an increase, though there was a decrease in the average tonnage of sailing vessels.

SHAM RUPEES IN LUCKNOW.—The Lucknow paper, in noticing the story of the old man in the Central Provinces who has been drilling the inside of rupees out and substituting metal, says some gentlemen in Oudh have beaten this. One man, apprehended, had been counterfeiting coin since the King's time, and could make ten in twenty minutes. These rupees have a market value (if you go to the right market) of rupees ten per hundred—they are passed at mélas in bazaars and go up to Nepal. They are very neatly made. The accused is before the Sessions Court of Lucknow.

COMMISSARY-GENERAL OF CALCUTTA.—It is rumoured that Colonel J. I. Willes, Commissary-General, intends proceeding on furlough in March or April next, and that in that case Colonel Sibley, Deputy Commissary-General, Upper Circle, is likely to be appointed to act for him during his temporary absence. Colonel Dickens, Deputy Commissary-General, Central Circle, is to officiate as Deputy of the Upper Circle, and Colonel Macbean, who is shortly expected to return from England, is to be the Deputy Commissary-General of the Central Circle. Colonel Davidson will then continue to act as Deputy of the Lower Circle at the Presidency, until the return from furlough of Colonel Christopher.—
Indian Daily News, July 14.

SUDDEN DRATHS IN RAILWAY TRAINS.—A sad death from heat apoplexy occurred in the Mooltan train that reached Lahor on Saturday last. Mr. Thorp (a brother, we believe, of Lieutenant Thorp, who, after denouncing Cashmere misrule, died some years ago, under suspicious circumstances at Srinuggur) had been an assistant to Mr. Long, the Muree chemist, but had left his post in search of some other employment. The overpowering heat of last week will be in the recollection of all the residents of Lahor and this heat was literally killing in the train which conveys the traveller over hundreds of miles of burning sand from the city of dust and beggars to that of tombs, a fatal journey literally exemplified by Mr. Thorp, who reached Lahor to be buried. He leaves an unprovided wife and family to mourn his loss. A native also died of heat apoplexy in the same train.—Indian Public Opinion, July 11.

THE PUTTING BACK OF THE S. S. "ABYSSINIA."—Captain Sharp, of the s. s. Abyssinia, reported at 6 P.M. on Sunday that the said steamer left Garden Reach for sea on the morning of the 5th inst. On the night of the 6th, at about ten o'clock, while at sea, the storeroom was found to be flooded with water, and on the carpenter sounding, 21 inches of water were found in the hold. On examining the store-room, the port side light, or port, was found open, and as the ship rolled to port, large quantities of water rushed into the store-room. The men succeeded in closing up the port, but on account of the stores and a large quantity of cargo being damaged, the captain was obliged to return back to Calcutta. On cleaning the store-room, two wrenches for unscrewing the port were found among the debris, also the outer brass plates, in a battered condi-tion, with recent hammer marks on the outer. The captain is of opinion that the port had been opened by some person on board, not with a malicious intent, but for the purpose of obtaining light in the store-room, and who forgot to close it.—Englishman, June 12.

THE WEATHER AND CROPS .- From the district reports from Bengal up to the 1st of July we see that, owing to the break in the rains, more rain was wanted in parts of the Bardwan division, but the same cause had improved the indigo prospects in Nadiya and Jessor. Floods had damaged the jute and aous rice crop in parts of Rangpur. In Patna, Gaya, and Shahabad the heat had been very great, and there had been several deaths from apoplexy and sunstroke. In the central tracts of the Darbhangha district, especially about the head-quarters, and northwards as far as Madhubani town, the rainfall has not reached half the average, and agriculture is backward. Distress continues to prevail among the poorest classes in North and East Madhubani, until weeding operations, in the beginning of August, afford them employment. Rain was wanted generally throughout the Patna Division and in Monghyr. Cholera continues bad on the sea coast of Kattak and in the town of Puri, but is decreasing in Balasor, though in the latter district we are told that "the want of potable water along the coast continues intense, and there is mortality amongst the cattle.

EXECUTION OF THE KALIGHAT MURDERER.—On Tuesday morning, Ram Charan Manji, the man who murdered a modi at Kalighat about a month ago, and was sentenced to death, expiated his crime on the gallows at the Alipore Jail. There was not much of a crowd outside the jail walls, probably because the day and hour of execution more not known. A little hefers give chief the manufacture research tion were not known. A little before six o'clock the murderer was taken out of his cell to the place of execution. He walked along with a pretty firm step, and seemed quite prepared to meet his fate. He expressed no wish with regard to his corpse, and left the jail authorities to deal with it as they thought best, being, we understand, tired of repeated applications to his relatives, all of whom discarded him the moment's intence of death had been pronounced on him. But while his hands were being fastened, and immediately before the rope was put round his neck, he expressed a somewhat extraordinary desire—that of cating the dust from the feet of a Brahmin. On his making known this wish at the last moment, Dr. Lynch endeavoured to have it gratified; but no Brahmin could at that time be found, and Ram Charan Manji was launched into eternity without having had the satisfaction of gratifying his extra-ordinary desire. He fell with a long drop, which broke his neck, and expired almost immediately after. -Englishman, July 12.

Madras.

SCARGITY IN MYSOR.—The Mysor Chief Commissioner has passed orders to the effect that owing to the scarcity of provisions, and the high prices at which they are sold, subordinates drawing small salaries will receive an advance of 25 per cent. The prices of provisions have been raised by 20 per cent., and it has been found absolutely necessary to grant this increase.

CATTLE MURRAIN.—Murrain appears to be somewhat prevalent in Kunur, on the Utakamand plateau, and European owners of cattle are reported to display a good deal of ignorance in the treatment of the disease. The result is that loss of cattle is frequently heard of, and native cow-herds are allowed to do very much as they please.

Cotton.—The extent of land under cotton cultivation in the Madras Presidency up to the month of March was 1,571,889 acres; of land under indigo cultivation 298,341 acres, bearing an assessment of Rs. 18,49,385 and Rs. 6,48,908 respectively. This shows an increase of cotton cultivation of 69,276 acres, and an increase of indigo cultivation amounting to 66,843 acres, compared with the corresponding period of the preceding year.

PECUNIARY REWARDS .- On the recommendation of the agent at Vizagapatam, the Madras Government have granted pecuniary rewards to certain persons who accompanied Captain Eastal to quell the late insurrection at Bustar. They have also tendered their thanks to the Maharajah of Vizianagram and the Ranee of Bobbily for the assistance rendered by them on the occasion.—Madras Mail, July 11.

THE GOVERNOR.—The Duke of Buckingham intends, says the Coconada paper, to pay the Godavery District another visit in December next, and extend his tour well up the Godavery. If the port steamer could be made available, his Grace may be desirous to extend his visit to Vizagapatam, which is only a night's run from Coconada. There has been a great deal written lately of the capabilities of that port and the feasibility of its being converted into a safe harbour to admit large vessels.

JOINING THE CHURCH OF ROME.—Mr. W. S. Lilly, Madras Civil Service, retired, seems to have gone over to the Roman Catholic Church, for he took part at a Catholic education meeting, presided over by Cardinal Manning, on the 20th ultimo, and seconded a resolution defining the "imperative duty of Catholics." He is a B.C.L. of Oxford, a barrister-at-law, and a contributor to numerous periodicals. He is the author of a work reviewing in the most appreciative manner the writings of Dr. Newman.—Madras Mail, July 15.

DEPUTY-COLLECTOR OF SEA CUSTOMS.—The appointment of the Deputy-Collector of Sea Customs, vacant by the retirement, under the fifty-five years order, of Mr. G. B. Shaw, has been filled by the promotion of Mr. T. G. Blage, who for many years held the appointment of Appraisar. At first it seemed probable that another the matter for congratulation job would have been perpetrated, but it is matter for congratulation that this has not been done, the Government having recognised Mr. Blake's claim to promotion, who, we have no hesitation in saying, is unquestionably the right man in the right place.—Athenœum, THEATRICALS AT OOTACAMUND.—They are amusing themselves THEATRICALS AT COTACAMUND.—They are amusing themselves very much at Ootacamund. The Governor returns from Kotagherry on Monday, and will attend some theatricals on Tuesday. Theatricals are all the rage just now at Ooty. The play to be acted is Robertson's "Caste." There is to be a rehearsal to-day, and performances on Monday and Tuesday. Every ticket is taken. The cast is very strong. Lady Souter, Mrs. Godfrey Clarke and Miss Cameron, Major Godfrey Clarke, Mr. Spencer of the 48th, and Captain Bell, the Chief's A. D. C., are to be performers. Mr. Spencer is painting the drop scene, and taking the management Spencer is painting the drop scene, and taking the management of the affairs. The performance is in aid of Bartholomew's Hospital.—Madras Mail, July 15.

MEDICAL.—The Madras Mail states that Dr. George Smith, Deputy Surgeon-General, Mysor Division and Ceded Districts, has been recommended by the Madras Government to the Secretary of State for appointment as Surgeon-General, Indian Medical Department, in succession to Surgeon-General Balfour, whose tour of duty will terminate on August 15. Dr. George Smith is not fully qualified for the appointment, as he has been scarcely more than a year Deputy Surgeon-General; but Lord Salisbury has been urged by the Madras Government, the Mail adds, to waive an unreasonable rule of the service in his favour. Dr. Smith is pre-eminently, as to intellect, the officer best fitted for the difficult position; but his appointment, though seen to be almost inevitable, will not prove so welcome to the Medical Service as might be wished.

A "CAUSE CELEBRE."—A cause célèbre is on the tapis at the Neiltherries. A gallant captain and his wife were staying at an hotel at Coonoor lately. When there, one of the captain's horsekeepers behaved badly, and was sharply reprimanded by mine hostess and her daughter. The man took the case so much to heart—at being spoken to by women—that he went before the magistrate with a complaint that the hotel-keeper and her daughter had beaten him, poor fellow! The magistrate was in a quandary, and in order to mest all the demands of justice, fined the two ladies eight annas a piece. A gentleman who is residing at the hotel was disturbed at midnight of the same day that this sentence was decreed by the drunken revels of the too-elated horsekeeper—and administered summary justice on his person. The poor man went next day to an official, a relative of the gallant captain aforesaid, and worked so on the feelings of that gentleman, that he put the case in the hands of one of the best local lawyers, and the gentleman whose rest was disturbed is to be brought to trial for contempt of Court, Agricultural Exhibition in Madras has again been postponed. In 1875 Government approved of the Board of Revenue's proposal to postpone for another year the Exhibition which it was intended to hold at the commencenent of the present year, but the board now doubt whether it will be possible, without serious detriment to Mr. Robertson's current work, to make arrangements for holding an exhibition in 1877. The inauguration of the Agricultural College will necessarily occupy much of the time of Mr. Robertson and his assistants, and the success of that undertaking will greatly depend upon good organisation at irst. The board consider that it will be better to put off the Exhibition until 1878, and resolve to recommend its postponement to Government. Meanwhile, Mr. Robertson might, the Board consider, visit the cattle shows in Nellore, and make a short tour in the district, with a view to observing the different methods of agriculture which obtain in that part of the country. The Government agree with the board that the Exhibition should be postponed to 1878.

THE LATE MR. WAIT.—The Thakore Saheb of Bhownugger 1145 duly appreciated the services of the late Mr. J. Wait, who committed suicide the other day, by presenting to the bereaved widow of that gentleman the sum of Rs. 5,000.—Rombay Guzzle, SIR HENRY DALY.—After a somewhat lengthened visit to Simle, Sir Henry Daly has returned to Indor, resuming his duties at the Residency. Mr. Pundit Surroop Narain, Native Assistant to the Agency, is appointed to officiate as Bheel Agent Manpoor, the Mear Moonshi, Mr. Dhurrum Narain, acting for his brother as Native Assistant.

MILITARY.-We learn that the 108th Regiment at Mhow will be relieved by a regiment direct from England, so that after garrisoning Mhow for a year or two it may move on to relieve the 69th Light Infantry at Neemuch and Nusseerabad. Now that the latter station is in direct communication with Agra, it is said to be "a very good sociable place."—Times of India.

Death of a Native Gentleman.—Mr. Hormusjee Sprabjee Roths-

ree, one of the most prominent members of the Parseo community at Kurrachee, has just died. He had by his own industry ricen from comparatively poor circumstances to wealth and competences. He was much respected for his integrity and benevolence, and had many friends at Bombay, Surat, and other places.—Bombay Gazette.

BARODA.-We hear from Baroda that the formal appointment which has been offered to Dr. Cody by Mr. Melvill, the Vicaroy's Agent in Baroda, is "Durbar Physician and Chief Medical Officer in Baroda State." Dr. Cody will take up the duties of his apprintment when his services are applied for in the regular way. It is satisfactory to think that he has made a mark beyond the bounds of the Bombay Medical Department.

DEATH OF MAJOR WEEDING.—We regret to announce the death of Major Alexander James Weeding, 33rd (Duke of Wellington's) Regiment, which occurred at Ahmedabad, where he was on kare on Friday afternoon, the 14th instant. Major Weeding entered the service in June, 1855, and served with the 33rd throughout the Abyssinian campaign; he will be remembered in Poona as Captain Badgley; he assumed the surname of Weeding in 1870.—Decor. Herald, July 17.

SHOCKING SUICIDE OF A LADY.—There was a painful excitement in the Fort at an early hour on Saturday morning, when a rumour spread that Mrs. Clayton, wife of Captain Clayton, of H.M.S. Rifleman, had been found in a bath-room in Taylor's Hotel, Meadowsstreet, with her throat cut. On inquiry the report proved to be but too true. An inquest was held by Dr. Blaney, the coroner, at Taylor's Hotel, on Saturday morning, and a verdict of suicide whilst in a state of temporary insanity was returned,—Times of India; July 21.

Cholera.—Three cases of cholera having occurred in the lines CHOLERA.—Three cases of cholera having occurred in the lines of the native artillery at Rajkote on the 12th, the men, with their families, have been removed to a place three miles distant from that station, and are encamped there. No fresh cases had been heard of up to the 17th, and now that there has been a change in the weather the men are likely soon to return. Two cases of cholera occurred in the 28th Regiment, and one in the jail, all of which proved fatal. Cholera is on the road between Ahmedabad and Deess. Two European children on groups to Deess were attacked and Deesa. Two European children en route to Deesa were attacked by the disease and died.—Times of India, July 21.

REORGANISATION OF THE INDIAN ARMY.—Lord Napier of Magdala is in daily communication with the authorities at the India Office and the Horse Guards regarding the reorganisation of the Indian army. He is steadfast in his opinion, which is supported by Lord Northbrook and the Government of India, that a complement of seven officers is sufficient for a native cops, if the full number seven are left with their regiments, and the strength of the rank and file is not increased beyond 600. But much opposition is given to this view, which is not favourably received at the Horse Guards.

—Times of India.

NEW MILLS.—The Bhownuggur Mills and Press Company, under the management of Messrs. Forbes and Co., have just completed their weaving-shed, which will shortly have one hundred and fifty looms in work; and we hear that the ceremony of starting the first six looms took place at Bhownuggur on July 4, in the presence of the Political Agent, the Joint Administrators of the State, and a large and influential assembly of the residents, European and native. These are the first looms worked by machinery that have been started in Kattywar; and we trust that such success will attend the mills as will soon lead to the development of other industrial appliances in the province. It reads strange now the fact that Acts 11 and 12 of William III. prohibited in 1700 the introduction of cotton goods from India into England, when De Foe complained that "the general fancy of the people runs upon East India goods," and that half the people of Great Britain were being ruined by these importations. The ebb and flow of commerce seems to be as real as the ebb and flow of morality upon which public censors are so looms in work; and we hear that the ceremony of starting the first the ebb and flow of morality upon which public censors are so learnedly descanting just now.

Puna Riots Commission.—Everyone will be surprised to learn that the report of the Puna Riots Commission has never yet got further than Bombay. The Pioneer is our authority for this statement, and that paper adds that the Government of that peculiar province has been asked once or twice by the Government of India whether it has any recollection of the document, but the reply has always been to the effect that consideration of the subject was going forward. There is perhaps this excuse for the Bombay Government—the report is enormously voluminous. Mr. Auckland Colvin wrote a very long report off his own bat, the subject being one, of course, which was especially his own. Mr. Carpenter, whose deeply-deplored death immediately afterwards rendered his memorandum on the Puna question his last important piece of official work, wrote another independent report. If we understand the matter rightly, there is a collective report as well, and a separate independent report by a native member of the Commission. Altogether there are some 3,000 pages of printed matter for the Bombay Government to digest. This would be a serious undertaking in Bengal even; imagine what it must be in the Far West!—Bombay Gazette.

HOSPITAL FOR EUROPEANS.—Apropos of the want of a suitable hospital to accommodate the sick Europeans of this city, we are glad to perceive that the subject is attracting some attention at home. In the Lancet, to hand by last mail, we notice some allusions to the present disgraceful state of European hospital accommodation in Bombay; and as our worthy contemporary is published and read in a land where the powers that be do not consider it their bounden duty to oppose a measure for the simple reason that it has the unqualified and unanimous support of public opinion, its remarks may, we hope, penetrate to high quarters and have some effect there. Our contemporary alludes to the subject in these words:—"That the city of Bombay sadly lacks a General Hospital for Europeans is a fact which H.R.H. the Prince of Wales had an opportunity of noting while there; but as yet the Government holds out no hope of raising one. An attempt is being made, we hear, to place it in the new Sailors' Home, a magnificent building but recently completed; but the trustees of the latter are said, naturally enough, not to second the attempt of Government to get out of their diffipresent disgraceful state of European hospital accommodation in not to second the attempt of Government to get out of their diffi-culty. Meanwhile, the unfortunate sick Europeans have to linger on in a place long since condemned as unfit for healthy ones to live in." If the "screaming sisterhood" would only turn their attention to such topics as this instead of making speeches of doubtful propriety regarding C.D. Acts, we do not think our present Government, such as it is, would very long sustain its rôle of opposing public opinion even with a self-willed military engineer to back it. A European Hospital scheme, notwithstanding all that has been said and written on the subject, is still wanted for Bombay, and all that we regret is the apparent impossibility of rousing the present Government to its duty to humanity, if not to poor and unfortunate sick Englishmen.—Bombay Gazette.

THE NEW BISHOP.—Bombay has one advantage over Calcutta at the present moment, which it might be as well for us to make the most of; we have got a Bishop, and Calcutta has not. Moreover, we duly installed him in his high office on Thursday morning last, at 7.30, at the Cathedral Church of St. Thomas, whilst Calcutta cannot even say that another clergyman has refused to accept the Bishopric of Calcutta even on the absurd plea that the place is unhealthy. The Bishop of Bombay is certainly a very high Churchman, but he has not yet declared himself doctrinally, though he has held two confirmations and preached twice. The ceremonial characteristics of the party in the Church to which Dr. Mylne belongs have, however, been made apparent, more especially in the duties that his Lordship's chaplain has to perform, which seem to be chiefly to carry a crosier, appropriately gilt and ornamented, in front of the Bishop every time his Lordship goes to church. The appearance of the chaplain as he emerges from his seat near the Bishop's throne in the Cathedral, takes his crosier, and slowly precedes the Bishop when the time comes for his Lordship to preach cannot even say that another clergyman has refused to accept the cedes the Bishop when the time comes for his Lordship to preach the sermon, has a novel effect, and reverent persons try to taink the proceeding is imposing, but before very long it will probably be looked upon with ridicule. The chaplain is in all respects, apparently, a mute, for his voice has not yet been heard. The Bishop, at a consecration of a new addition to the cemetery here, wore his mitre, white and gold, a head-dress with which we here in India are quite unacquainted, and we have to recall to mind pictures which we have seen in our childhood of St. Xavier, or some other worthy missionary, but whether a Roman Catholic or not we do not stop to ask, for that, apparently, is not a matter of any importance. Altogether Bombay has not witnessed such a sign of the times before as the arrival of our new Bishop has given us, and the event is deserving of being recorded.—Bombay Gazette, July 1t.

Ceylon.

Charge of Fraud.—Mr. Alexander Brown, late Secretary of the Planters' Association, has appeared in a Kandy Court, under a warrant of arrest, charged with misappropriation of somewhere about £500 of the Association funds.

THE MUSEUM LIBRARY.—In consequence of changes in the arrangements connected with the public records, the Governor has appointed Mr. R. VanCuylenburg to the important office of Librarian of the Museum. This post will give him the charge of the Oriental Library and the valuable Dutch Records, with probably some of the older British records.

Public Works Department.—In the prescribed examination of officers of two classes in the Public Works, which came off this week, we are informed that owing to the absurdly severe nature of the papers set in Mechanical Engineering scarcely any came successfully through the ordeal.

SANITATION.—The Special Committee of the Municipal Council appointed twelve months ago to consider the principal insanitary conditions of Colombo, and how these can best be removed, having in view the limited means at the disposal of the Council, have now concluded their work, and their report will probably be discussed at the next meeting.

MUNICIPAL.-Mr. G. B. Leechman, having proceeded to Europe, the Slave Island Ward seat in the Municipal Council is again vacant. The Council at its last meeting made a record of its appreciation of Mr. Leechman's services to the community; and the Chairman stated that he would take the necessary steps for supplying the vacancy.

THE COLOMBO BREAKWATER.—Work at the Breakwater is being pushed on with as much despatch as practicable, and already the large space of ground between the Breakwater root and the site of the old Customs House is nearly finished off level. The massive and powerful lifting gear of the "Titan" has already arrived, and we may now look for the huge machine by one of the canal steamers. -Ceylon Times.

THE NEXT GOVERNOR.—Private letters received by the present Australian Mail, from the member of the family of Sir Hercules Robinson, state, without reserve or qualification of any kind, that Sir Arthur Gordon will assume the Governorship of Ceylon in succession to Sir William Gregory. The same letter conveys the information that Sir Hercules Robinson is about to assume the Government of the Cape of Good Hope, in succession to Sir H. Barkley.—Ceylon Times.

CHOLERA.—Cholera, sporadic cases of which have been appearing of late in different parts of the town, has now broken out in a virulent form in Kochicadde and its neighbourhood. No less than eleven cases have been reported, nine in Kochicadde, one in Silversmith-street, and one in Washer's Quarters. It is worthy of remark that all these cases have occurred in the wretched hovels which have so frequently been brought to the notice of the Municipality and the public generally, both by the Sanitary Officer and in our columns.

—Ceylon Times, July 8.

THE RATE OF EXCHANGE.—A resolution of the Government of Bengal, dated Simla, May 31, notifies as follows:—The Governor-General in Council is pleased to resolve that, in the absence of specific orders to the contrary, whenever any sum due to the Government in sterling money is tendered or recovered in Government Rupees, the amount to be accepted in British Indian currency shall be calculated at the rate of exchange fixed for the adjustment of financial transactions between the Indian Government. ment and H.M.'s Imperial Government at the time the demand for payment is made. It will always, however, be at the option of the debtor to discharge his obligations by a bill payable on demand drawn upon London by any well known bank or firm.

FUGITIVE SLAVES.

The following instructions respecting the reception of fugitive slaves on board her Majesty's ships have been issued.

Lord Tenterden to the Secretary of the Admiralty.

Sir,—With reference to your letter of Dec. 23 last, I am directed by the Earl of Derby to transmit to you, to be laid before the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, the accompanying draft of instructions to be issued to the commanders of her Majesty's ships and vessels with regard to the reception of fugitive slaves.—I am, &c.

The following instructions are to be considered as superseding all previous instructions as to the receipt of fugitive slaves :

In any case in which you have received a fugitive slave into your ship and taken him under the protection of the British flag, whether within or beyond the territorial waters of any State, you will not admit or entertain beyond the territorial waters of any State, you will not admit or entertain any demand made upon you for his surrender on the ground of slavery.

2. It is not intended, nor is it possible, to lay down any precise or general rule as to the cases in which you ought to receive a fugitive slave on board your ship. You are, as to this, to be guided by considerations of humanity, and these considerations must have full effect given to them whether your ship is on the high seas or within the territorial waters of a State in which slavery exists; but in the latter case you ought at the same time to avoid conduct which may appear to be in breach of international comity and good faith. national comity and good faith.

3. If any person within territorial waters claims your protection on the ground that he is kept in slavery contrary to treaties with Great Britain, you should receive him until the truth of his statement is examined into. This examination should be made, if possible, after communication with the nearest British consular authority, and you should be guided in your subsequent proceedings by the result.

4. A special report is to be made of every case of a fugitive slave received on board your ship.

Miscellaneous.

CAPTAIN ROBERTS.—The finding of the Court-martial lately held on Captain Roberts, 94th Regiment, was promulgated on Wednesday. Captain Roberts is sentenced to be dismissed from her Majesty's service, but is to be allowed the value of his commission.

WILL OF GENERAL WALPOLE .- Letters of administration of the personal estate and effects of Lieutenant-General Sir Robert Walpole, E.C.B., who died on the 12th ult., at his residence, The Grove, West Moulsey, intestate, were granted on the 28th ult. to Dame Gertrude Rundell Walpole, the widow, the personal estate being sworn under £35,000.

THE INDIAN AND COLONIAL MUSEUM.—It is stated that the site for an Imperial Museum for India and the Colonies on the Thames Embankment has been finally fixed upon. The Governments of several colonies—notably New Zealand, Canada, Natal and the Cape —have warmly endorsed the new scheme, and have suggested that all Colonial Crown Agency offices should be located in the building.

RETURN OF THE PRINCE'S NATIVE SUITE.—By the Peninsular and Oriental steamship Gwalior, which sailed for India from Southampton on Thursday, there was sent back by the Prince of Wales, Duffadar Narain Sing, the non-commissioned officer of the 11th Bengal Lancers, who accompanied his Royal Highness home in the Scrapis. Several native servants who formed part of the Prince's suite also returned.

INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.—The following candidates, in the order of merit, were successful at both the London and Netley examinations, August, 1876: A. Tomes (gained the Herbert Prize), E. B. Meredith, W. A. Mawson, J. Maitland, J. M'Gregor, G. H. Peevor, S. H. Dantra, D. J. M'Donald, A. K. Stewart, G. L. Walker, H. Hamilton, J. N. Halpin, W. G. H. Henderson, B. Doyle, R. Cobb, A. E. R. Stephens, W. H. Cadge, J. Hunter, C. L. Swaine, M. H. Smith, K. A. Dalal, H. W. B. Boyd, P. J. Farrell.

SIR SALAR JUNG.—As already reported by telegraph, Sir Salar Jung arrived in Brindisi on the afternoon of the 6th inst., by special train from Milan. He at once proceeded on board the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship Pera, which was alongside the quay waiting his arrival. He was carried up the side of the vessel by the sailors, being still unable to walk without the aid of crutches. Hopes are entertained that before his arrival in Bombay he will have entirely recovered. Sir Salar was received on board by the commander of the Pera, the yards being manned by the native sailors. If there is time, Sir Salar wishes to meet the Khedive of Egypt in Cairo. The steamship Pera goes direct to Bombay through the Suez Canal.

SIR MADHAVA Row.—A correspondent writes to us as follows: "I have heard from India that it is not at all unlikely that in the next cold season Sir Madhava Row, now the Prime Minister of Baroda, will, if his duties permit him, follow the example of his Mahommedan compeer, Sir Salar Jung, and visit England. As Sir Salar is the best Indian representative of Islam, so Sir Madhava is the best representative of Hinduism. No one who knows the great abilities of the chief Minister, successively, of Travancore, Indore, and Baroda will fail to be glad to hear of this rumour. Sir Jung Bahadoor, of Nepaul, has already visited England. I know of no three natives of Hindustan who can compare with these. Strange to say, they have under their supervision the three most difficult cities to deal with in India, viz., Katmandu, Hyderabad, and Bnroda."—Globe.

DEATH OF ADMIRAL SIR CHARLES TALBOT, K.C.B .- Intelligence of the death of Admiral Talbot, the senior on the active list of admirals, has been received at the Admiralty. Sir Charles died on Tuesday last at Ivel Bury, Biggleswade, Herts, after a long illness, aged seventy-four. He was educated at the Royal Naval College, and went on active service in December, 1817. His earlier services were on the South American Station (1831). In August, 1845, then commanding the Vestal, he was entrusted with the command of the successful expedition against the piratical settlements in Maluda Bay, Borneo, for which he received the especial thanks of the Admiralty. During his stay on the East India station Captain Talbot was twice for a considerable period employed as senior officer in the China seas; and before leaving in 1847 he received a warm address from the mercantile community for his constant consideration for the interests of British commerce. He was nominated a Knight Commander of the Order of the Bath in November, 1862. The late admiral had enjoyed a "good service" pension of £300 a year since 1869.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, Aug. 8.—ARMY PROMOTION AND RETIREMENT.—Captain NOLAN asked the Secretary of State for War if the Report of the Commission for Army Promotion and Retirement was laid last night in dummy only upon the table, and when either a printed or manuscript copy of the report would be accessible to members.—Mr. G. HARDY understood the word "dummy" to mean that a report was laid upen the table when it was not actually ready, but would be distributed during the recess. That was not his meaning in connection with this report, because he hoped it would be in the hands of hon. members in the course of the present week.

THE KIEWEE BOOTY.—General SHUTE asked the Under-Secretary of State for India if it was intended to refer the unadjusted prize claims of Sir George Whitlock's force as regards the Kirwee booty to the High Court of Admiralty; and whether more prompt steps cannot be taken to settle these claims.—Lord G. Hamilton replied that it was not intended to refer this matter to the Court of Admiralty, or reverse any of the decisions arrived at; but the Secretary of State had, on consultation with the claimants and the prize agents, communicated to the Indian Government that the accounts should be wound up, though the amount was very small.

THE SUEZ CANAL SHARES.—On going into Committee on the Suez Canal Bill, Mr. Lowe asked for an explanation of the position in which they stood in reference to the property, and whether there was any prospect of the Egyptian Government being unable to pay the interest on the four millions we had lent the Khedive.—After a few pro and con remarks from Mr. Gourley, Mr. Rylands, Mr. E. J. Reed, and Sir H. Wolff, the Chancellor of the Exche-QUER vindicated the course pursued by the Government in reference to withholding the publication of Mr. Cave's report. With regard to the objection taken by Sir H. Wolff, Mr. Reilly, their counsel, had assured them there were no legal difficulties in the way. English directors represented the interests of their countrytheir own—and there was no reason whatever to suppose that their position was an undignified or equivocal one. As to the surtax the foreign nations were perfectly satisfied with the arrangement that had been made; and so far as the interest on the four millions was concerned, he had no doubt but that it would be punctually paid.—
Mr. M'IVER observed that the wisdom of the transaction was approved by the commercial community of Liverpool.—Lord HART-Incron did not agree with those who held that the possession of the Canal would do us any good in time of war. He believed it would not alter our position in any way; but as respected the main question—namely, our position as customers of the Canal—he held that, so far from being improved, it would be injured by being com-plicated and ill defined. He hoped, however, that the Government would take heed by the lesson of the past and never enter upon any would take need by the lesson of the past and never enter upon any such transaction again.—Mr. DISRAELI pointed out that political and commercial considerations were not mixed up in the matter. The shares of the Khedive had been purchased for high political considerations, and but for them they never would have been acquired. He was persuaded that the feeling of the country was not changed on this great enterprise, and that they looked upon it as a political and postuicies at litical and patriotic act.—Mr. Monk said there were many members on the Liberal side who did not agree with Lord Hartington in his objections to the purchase.—After some remarks from Sir J. Lub-BOCK, Mr. Bates, and Mr. Sampson Lloyd, the Speaker was allowed to leave the chair, and the Bill was passed through Committee.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, Aug. 10.—ARMY RETIREMENT AND PROMOTION.—Mr. G. HARDY, in replying to Captain Nolan and Sir H. HAVELOCK, stated that copies of the report of the above commission would be ready for members on Saturday. Early copies of the report had been supplied to, and published by, the press, in order that the public, as well as the members of this House, might be in possession of the contents of the commission.

THE INDIAN MUSEUM.—Mr. FAWCETT asked the Under-Secretary of State for India whether he was prepared to give an assurance to the House that no arrangement should be entered into during the recess which will throw upon India any permanent charge for the crection or maintenance of an Indian Museum in London.—Lord G. Hamilton said that between now and next ression of Parliament no arrangement would be made for throwing any charge upon the revenues of India in respect to this matter.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.-Lord GEORGE HAMILTON, in making his annual statement of the Indian finances, reviewed the income and expenditure for the last three financial years, pointing out the Indian charges, the home charges, the expenditure on public works, and so forth. He explained that the revenue had steadily increased in view of diminished taxation, and that last year there was a surplus of £1,634,000. The special famine expenditure, which extended over a period of three years, showed a surplus on the estimate of £150,000, and the railways had paid into the Exchequer the sum of £625,000 in excess of the guaranteed interest. This latter circumstance was to be attributed in part to the visit of the Prince of Wales, as the natives of all classes who had before that event objested to use the railways began at ,once to appreciate their advantages when they found that the Prince travelled by no other means. Passing next to the revenue and expenditure of the current financial year, he stated that the estimated revenue was £50,480,000, and the expenditure £50,336,000, showing a surplus of £144,000. The total expenditure on public works for the last three years had been £10,400,000. The revenue for the current year had been carefully estimated, and although there would be a slight falling off in the first six months of the year in customs and salt duties, still, as a set-off, a large increase on the opium crop was anticipated. With regard to home expenditure he was not able to hold out any prospect of a diminution. Referring then to the depreciation of silver, he traced the causes of it, remarking that in the first instance it was due to a great extent to panic with regard to something that was apprehended, but which had not come to pass. Under these circumstances the Indian Government had declined to force its bills on a panic-struck market, and had preferred to raise a loan, by which operation they had improved the whole tone of the market, and silver had risen from 1s. 61d. per rupee on the 5th of July ket, and silver had risen from 1s. 6 dd. per rupee on the 5th of July to 1s. 8 dd., at which price the Government had just received a small tender for its bills. The Indian Government had estimated the losses on silver at £2,232,000, but he believed that it would exceed that sum by £450,000. If, however, the total loss from this source should turn out to be as much as £2,800,000, he had no doubt that it would be eventually met out of the surplus. The balance of trade was greatly in favour of India. The producing power of the country was constantly increasing, owing to the extension of railways, and there was no reason to believe that with returning confidence the value of silver would not continue to rise. If, however, it should value of silver would not continue to rise. If, however, it should ralue of silver would not continue to rise. It, however, it should fall it might become necessary to reduce the extraordinary expenditure on public works. — Mr. Fawcett also discussed at great length the causes and operation of the depreciation of silver, which, he maintained, was not caused by panic, but would be continuous, and he suggested (moving a resolution to this effect) that it should be met by economy in Public Works Extraordinary, Army Expenditure, and other often urged economical expedients.—Mr. Side-Botham protested against the continuance of the protective duties on action goods, which he dealered were injurious and unjust not on cotton goods, which, he declared were injurious and unjust not only to English manufacturers, but to the Hindoos.—Mr. Briggs only to English manufacturers, but to the Hindoos.—Mr. Bridgs and Mr. Brilley also urged the repeal of the Cotton Duties, and defended the policy of Lord Salisbury; while Mr. Noel protested against this attack on the Revenue, and asked how the loss which it would cause was to be made good.—Mr. Balfour discussed the causes of the fall of silver, of which he did not take so gloomy a view, and urged the Government not to rush into any rash measures.—Sir George Balfour made some remarks, and highly approach the torus than by Lord Salisburg asserting highly approved the course taken by Lord Salisbury in asserting his authority over the Indian Government.-Mr. Goschen, as Chairman of the Committee on the Deprociation of Silver, expressed the hope that the silver question would be carefully considered by the Government, and he asked them to endeavour to gather information from Mexico and other effect which the great fall in value had had upon its production. If the value was not still further reduced he saw no reason why France and other countries should substitute a gold for a silver currency. He deprecated the introduction of a gold currency into India in place of a silver one, and observed that the adoption of such a course had worked most inconveniently in Germany.—Mr. G. Duff expressed an opinion that Import and Export Duties ought not to be maintained in India for the sake of temporary convenience; and Mr. FAWCETT having withdrawn his amendment, the House went into Committee, and the usual resolutions were agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, Aug. 11.—THE ROYAL VISIT TO INDIA.—Mr. C. B. DENISON asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer INDIA.—Mr. C. B. DENISON asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he could inform the House whether accounts have been rendered of the expenditure of £60,000, granted in aid of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales's journey in India; and whether any further vote was likely to be asked for.—The Chancellor of the EXCHEQUER: Very full accounts have been sent in to me of the expenditure incurred by the Prince of Wales, and I may say in passing that the way in which these accounts have been sent in reflects very great credit upon Sir Bartle Frere, Colonel Ellis, and the other gentlemen who had charge of them. They show that very strict economy was exercised throughout the expedition. The accounts have been carefully audited by Sir W. Anderson, and I have gone through them with him. There still remains a small have gone through them with him. There still remains a small amount of outstanding bills to be provided for, but there is a sum of money still unexpended which will more than cover these bills. There will certainly be no occasion to ask for any supplementary vote. On the contrary, there may be a surplus of a few hundreds left over when all the accounts have been finally settled. The Treasury will not ask his Royal Highness to repay this sum, considering that he has avended some of his money in the purpose of sidering that he has expended some of his money in the purchase of works of art and specimens of Indian manufacture, which are amongst the articles now being exhibited at Kensington. I repeat that I think the whole of these accounts reflects very great credit upon all concerned.

THE ARMY MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.-Mr. HARDY, in reply to Mr. Dunbar, said there were twenty-seven vacancies in the Army Medical Dapartment; fifty appointments had been announced as open for competition at the examination this month, and forty-four candidates had entered their names.

THE NEW FUGITIVE SLAVE CIRCULAR,—Sir W. V. HARCOURT: When will the New Slave Circular be laid upon the table —Mr. BOURKE: I believe it will be in the hands of members to-morrow.

Notice of Motion.—Mr. Fawcett has given notice for a Select Committee on Indian Finance next Session.

MACAULAY IN INDIA.—Macaulay never appears to have realised how annoying his early success must have been to many worthy people here. At any rate, he did nothing to propitiate fortune, and people here. At any rate, he did nothing to propitiate fortune, and his letters freely express the contempt which he felt for the great majority of the men whom he met. His very freshness must have been a little trying. He had resolutely limited his exile to a very short term, and he went through the whole period under high pressure. It never seems to have struck him that the energy and intellectual activity which were possible during the first and only four years of a man's Indian life were not among the conditions under which a complete Indian career has to be passed. But while under which a complete Indian career has to be passed. But while he rather despised the people about him he did good work for the country. Our present head of Public Instruction some time ago collected the minutes and papers which Lord Macaulay, when filling a similar post, had left on record. They are full of the wisdom and wit, and of that wealth of illustration and argument which soon afterwards rendered their author the first Essayist since Lord soon afterwards rendered their author the first Essayist since Lord Bacon. The merit of Macaulay's other great Indian work—the Penal Code—was not, during many years, destined to receive an equally ample acknowledgment. We have been told that the code now passed into law is a very different work from the draft which left Macaulay's hands. Its author had no acquaintance with the practical operation of either the English or the Anglo-Indian law. He obtained no help from the legal profession here, and under the disguise of President of a Commission practically did the whole work himself. A quarter of a century clapsed before that work bore work himself. A quarter of a century elapsed before that work bore fruit. During twenty-two years his successors had made remarks upon it, and done more or less to prepare it for the Statute-book. The last of them, Sir Barnes Peacock, had brought to the task every resource of practical skill and technical knowledge. But in the opinion of the great jurist who lately filled the seat of the legal member of Council the code remains essentially the work of its first draftsman. Mr. FitzJames Stephen had ample evidence for arriving at this opinion, and the value of it is increased by his ample acknowledgment of the services rendered to the work by less famous names. "The draft and the revision," he writes, "are both ceminently creditable to their authors; and the result of their successive efforts has been to reproduce, in a concise and even beautiful form, the spirit of the law of England; the most technical, the most clumsy, and the most bewildering of all systems of criminal law, though I think, if its principles are fully understood, it is the most rational. If any one doubts this assertion, let him compare the Indian Penal Code with such a book as Mr. Greaves's edition of "Russell on Crimes." The one subject of homicide, as treated by Mr. Greaves and Russell, is, I should think, twice as long as the whole Penal Code; and it does not contain a tenth part of the return" Englishment. of the matter."-Englishman.

COUNTY OF CHESTER.

COUNTY BRIDGEMASTER, SUR-

COUNTY BRIDGEMASTER, SURVEYOR, and ARCHITECT.

The MAGISTRATES for the COUNTY of CHESTER will, at the General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, to be held at NETHER KNUTSFORD, in and for the said County, on MONDAY, the 18th day of OCTOBER next, proceed to RLECT a SUCCESSOR to the late Mr. Nicoles, the County Bridgemaster and Surveyor.

The person elected will be appointed to fill the offices of County Bridgemaster, Surveyor, and Architect, and will be required to devote the whole of his time to his duties. A Military or Civil Engineer, or Professional Architect, will be considered eligible for the appointment. The officer appointed will not be obliged to reside actually in the county, provided that his residence is in some place convenient to his duties. Detailed particulars of his duties, which will comprise the supervision and charge of the County and Hundred Bridges, Roads, Gaols, Court-houses, Asylums, Lockups, and all County Buildings of every description, and the furnishing, when specially required, of Plans, Specifications of Old Buildings, may be obtained on application to the undersigned.

The salary will be £500 per annum, and actual travelling expenses within the county, such sum to include the services of such clerk or assistant as the officer to be appointed may find it necessary to employ in the inspection and superintendence of county lengths of roads, and such roads as may hereafter be required under the provisions of any Act of Parliament, to be inspected on behalf of the county. If specially engaged to furnish Plans, Specifications, or Estimates of New Buildings, or for Alterations of Old Buildings, other than Bridges, Lockups, and Magistrates'-rooms, he will, when the cost shall exceed £500, be allowed a commission thereon according to a fixed scale.

Full particulars of all the duties to be performed, and of the allowances to be made, together with any further information Candidates may require, may be obtained on application at my Office, as above, on or before the 29th day of September next

CHARLES WILLIAM POTTS.
Clerk of the Peace for the County of Chester. Chester, July 17th, 1876.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remody ever discovered CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arro-ts those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fover, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrheea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Doc., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Beware Of PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browns was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at Is. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Rebielv.

Our latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, July 28; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, July 26; Calcutta, July 25.

THE latest telegram received at Bombay from Simla is dated July 27. The Governor-General's Legislative Council met on that date, when the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Oudh Land Revenue Bill, and explained the chief amendments made. Mr. Hobhouse presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Oudh Laws Bill, and mentioned the principal amendments and omissions which had caused the draft Bill to take a different shape from the original. The Council then adjourned for three weeks.

AT a farewell entertainment given at Lucknow to Sir George and Lady Couper, which took the form of a ball, Sir G. Couper after supper made a speech, of which the following are the concluding words:—"Gentlemen of the Oudh Commission, you have heard what General Chamberlain has been good enough to tell you about my merits as an administrator; but I wish to say without affectation, and in all truth and sincerity, that my gallant friend, though doubtless actuated by the best and kindest intentions, has hardly bestowed his compliments in the proper quarter. You know that I am leaving you on temporary promotion. And you know also that jobbing is so far unusual in this country that a man can hardly be selected to fill the post to which his Excellency the Viceroy has been graciously pleased to nominate me without having acquired some sort of reputation. I think, then, that I shall be acquitted of presumption—that I shall be pardoned if I say that I have acquired a reputation. Now, how have I acquired it? Gentlemen of the Oadh Commission, I say, unhesitatingly, that it is you who have earned it for me; that I owe my reputation to you; for if it had not been for the hearty and thorough way in which you have always supported me, amid much disappointment, amid much discouragement, and amid difficulties as great as the officers of an administration ever had to encounter, I must assuredly have failed instead of having succeeded. Your constancy and devotion constitute a debt which I can never repay. . . . I shall confidently look forward to a renewal of the cordial and friendly relations which have heretofore existed between us, and which, if I am ever spared to retire, I shall look back upon with true gratitude as the feature in my Indian career of which I have most reason to be proud."

THE resolution of the Viceroy censuring the Magistrate, High Court and Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces for fining Mr. Fuller, a solicitor of Agra, Rs. 30 only for striking his servant, who died soon after, we find much discussed in the Presidency papers. Lord Lytton has been rebuked on all sides, irrespective of the case itself, for the injudicious wording of the resolution and the mode in which the censure was conveyed.

An official denial had been sent round by telegram to the Presidency Journals that there was any truth in the rumours about the Viceroy's ill-health. The telegram explains that his Excellency "never was a robust man, but all he now suffers from is indigestion. This in no way impeded his work. But he is day and night mastering Indian questions and settling important matters."

THE Rajah of Nabha and suite left Simla on his return home on the 24th ultimo under the usual salute. The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab stays there till the end of September.

A CORRESPONDENT of a Dacca paper gives a very sad account of the failure of crops, and consequent scarcity of foodgrains in Assam. Several villages are said to be threatened with famine. Great damage had been done on the Northern State Railway at that portion of the line between Kharean and the Chenab by the serious floods, the country being under water for many miles.

CHOLERA of a virulent type had broken out afresh in Srinuggur and Murree. At Murree thirteen cases were recorded up to the 25th July, seven of which proved fatal. Twelve cases, nine of which proved fatal, were reported to have occurred among the native operatives of the Madras Gunpowder Mills.

It is announced that on the recommendation of the Government of India her Majesty's Government has been pleased to confer good-service pensions on the undermentioned officers, with effect from 15th February, 1876, and 1st March, 1876, respectively, in room of Surgeon-General Sir J. C. Brown, K.C.B., Bengal Medical Department, retired, and Colonel J. M. MacGregor, Madras Staff Corps, succeeded to the Colonel's allowance:—Colonel Henry Edward Landor Thuillier, C.S.I., Royal (late Bengal) Artillery; Colonel Charles Maxton Shakespear, Madras Staff Corps. Lord Napier of Magdala has recorded his high opinion of Colonel Thuillier, stating that he considers the "good-service pension" awarded to so meritorious an officer of such "long and honourable services" well earned and well placed.

THE Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition for Bengal is to be held at Ambála in the first week in November next. Major-General Sir J. Brind, K.C.B., Commanding the Sirhind Division, is President, and Major O. Barnes, 10th Bengal Lancers, Honorary Secretary, while thirteen officers of Staff and various corps at Ambála are members of the Committee.

THE on dit is repeated that the 4th Hussars and Artillery at Ráwal Pindí have been warned to hold themselves in readiness for service in Egypt.

An important fiscal case was recently decided by Mr. Justice Holloway at the High Court, Madras. The British India Steam Navigation Company were sued by the Municipal Commissioners of Madras for the sum of Rs. 15,075, being the amount of trade tax due under the Madras Municipal Act, for the years 1871, 72, 73, 74 and 75. The Judge decided in favour of the plaintiffs, so that every Insurance or other Company, having an agent in Madras, is liable to be called upon for Trade Tax.

It is positively stated that a Camp of Exercise will be formed at Bangalor or Bellary in November or December next, for Madras troops, British and Native only; but that no camp will be formed in the Bombay Presidency during the ensuing cold weather. It was, however, rumoured at Simla that it had been determined a Camp of Exercise, on a small scale, should be held at Peshawur during the cold season.

A REPORT had reached Shoay Gheen, says a correspondent of the Rangoon Times, "that our Karennee boundary pillars have been removed by a gang of some 3,000 Upper Burmans, who have stockaded themselves within our limits."

THE Bombay Gazette Summary received by the present mail thus refers to a social scandal which has kept society in the western Presidency on the qui vive for some little time:-" On Friday, July 21, there commenced in Bombay, before the Senior Magistrate, one of the most significant cases which has ever been brought before a Court of Justice. Mr. Arbuthnot, Collector of Bombay, as popular a gentleman as the Bombay Civil Service possesses, was accused by a Mr. Lacy, alias Marriott, alias James, alias Woods, alias Veterinary Surgeon, alias Heaven knows what not, of committing adultery with a woman known as 'Mrs. Lacy.'" [The case broke down woman known as 'Mrs. Lacy.'" [The case broke down at an early stage of its progress.] The Gazette further remarks:—" Whether or not Mrs. Lacy has any right to be called by the marital epithet it is yet impossible to say, as the gentleman with the aliases failed to produce his marriage certificate, although he affirms that he has telegraphed for it to Meerut. But as to the man's character there can be no doubt. Out of his own mouth he stands confessed of being a swindler and a rogue, who has made it his duty for years past to prey upon the weaknesses or unwise benevolence of Indian society. He is a known jail bird." The Times of India endorses the animadversions of its Bombay contemporary. Says the former Journal in an "editorial' "The solicitors for the prosecutor in the case of Lacy v. Arbuthnot have withdrawn from the prosecution. After the confirmation out of the mouth of Lacy himself of the allegations preferred against him in the letter which has happily proved the means of frustrating a vile conspiracy, by disclosing the infamous character of the parties concerned in it, there was no course open to Messrs. Chalk and Turner but to withdraw from the case. Indeed it would have been more to their credit had they withdrawn from it at an earlier period."

THE following casualties are reported:—Mr. E. F. Monement, Inspector, Indo-European Telegraph Department, was drowned in Kurrachee harbour on the 19th ult., by the upsetting of a boat. Surgeon-Major Mennie, for twelve years Staff Surgeon at Poona, died in Bombay on the 20th ult. His body was taken to Poona and buried with military honours the following day. Lieutenant Lane, of the 51st Light Infantry, had mysteriously disappeared from Chenat.

THE following tribute to the services of Colonel W. H. Greathed, C.B., R.E., has appeared in the North-West Provinces Gazette:—"The Lieutenant-Governor, North-Western Provinces, has learned with much regret that Colonel W. H. Greathed, C.B., R.E., is compelled by failure of health to seek change of climate and relief from the arduous duties of his post, and his Honour desires to place on record his sense of the valuable services which have been rendered by Colonel Greathed to this Government during the eight years that he has been at the head of the Irrigation Department. During this period irrigation works of great magnitude and importance have been carried out, by which Colonel Greathed's name will always be honourably remembered, and other great works are still in progress. The canals of the North-Western Provinces now confer upon the country a priceless benefit, for they give to many millions of people protection against the famines and scarcities to which they were formerly exposed, and they increase immensely the public wealth. Until lately, however, the returns from these great works have not been sufficient to render them directly remunerative to the State; but the financial position of the canals has now so much improved that they have not only ceased to be a burden on the Government, but they promise to become an important and profitable source of revenue. The rapid strides towards this result made under Colonel Greathed's administration reflect the highest credit on his ability and energy. Colonel Greathed has long been known as a distinguished soldier, and he has been not less distinguished and successful as the head of a great and important department of the civil administration. The Lieutenant-Governor sincerely regrets the loss of his valuable services, and trusts that a long and honourable career, with restored health, is still before him.

The reign of Red-Tape has not yet come to an end in India. Only the other day its vitality stood revealed in the matter of the extra rum supplied to our soldiers while on active service in Perak. It has since been active in another direction. In the small skirmish which took place in April against the Afridis, ammunition was of course used. When the Inspector-General of Ordnance received the indent to make good the ammunition expended by the troops, his wrath at so irregular a proceeding was by all accounts very great. The idea of troops expending ammunition without due authority, even though it were in the Government service, was more than he could bear, and at once the indent was "disallowed." As it is usual to "bill" regiments for stores unlawfully expended, or lost in any manner, the officer commanding the regiment which showed fight to the Afridis will, no doubt, be duly billed for the amount of ammunition expended. The delight of Jack Sepoy when he is cut for so many rounds of ammunition—"Sarkar, ke hukm se"—may be better imagined than described.

According to an Indian contemporary "there is but too much reason to fear that the Bengal Civil Service are threatened with what, if it would not in any case have borne that aspect, is, after the assurance lately given them by the Government, a most gross breach of faith." It has been no secret for some time past that the question of appointing natives of India, more freely than at present, to posts hitherto reserved for Covenanted Civilians, was under discussion, and the civilian themselves were so convinced that some change of policy in this respect was, for better or for worse, about to set in, that in a late memorial to the Government, instead of deprecating the proposed change, they confined themselves to urging their claim to protection from loss. In reply to their appeal they received an assurance that, whatever arrangements might be made, their prospects would not be materially imperilled. At that time it was believed that the judgeships only were in danger; but since then other prizes of the service seem to have been claimed for native use. The Government of India has called on the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal to report what posts he considers can be conveniently filled with native incumbents; and the fears of the Covenanted men have been reawakened to a corresponding extent. We should think however that they are only starting at shadows. The introduction of natives into the higher posts must anyhow be a gradual process; and time is necessary to prove the fitness of those who may be the first selected. It is difficult to conceive that Sir R. Temple will recommend any sweeping measures for displacing English by native agency, nor would any statesman of the smallest Indian experience venture to go beyond the tentative process by which here and there a native of known worth and ability has already been admitted into the higher ranks of the public service. It is all very well to talk of pledges made and rights withheld; but, as the Pioneer rather coarsely puts it, the only rights which a conquered people can fairly claim are those which their masters see fit to confer upon them. Justice and policy may both recommend a large concession of civil powers to the natives of India; but the limits to such concession are easily defined by the conditions on which alone the rulers of India can keep the empire they have won.

Two or three incidents lately reported in the Indian papers would seem to show that the native police in some parts of the country have not quite forgotten the rough and ready methods dear to their predecessors in less enlightened days. According to one of these stories, which is certainly characteristic and most likely true, a woman in Raipur, in the Central Provinces, was lately arrested by the police under a charge of burying her new-born child and concealing its birth. The accused, on being produced before a magistrate, confessed to her guilt, was committed to the sessions, and the judge, accepting her admission, without any further inquiry sentenced her to be hanged. The sentence was confirmed by the Judicial Commissioner, and on June 12 last the woman was told that the sentence would be carried into effect on the 19th, but luckily for her on the 14th she gave birth to a male child. The consternation of the officials, we are told, "can better be imagined than described." They all proceeded to the jail and asked the unfortunate woman why she had confessed to the crime; her answer was that she had been forced to do so by the police. A short time before in the same district a man was put on his trial for the murder of his wife. He admitted the crime, was committed for trial and sentenced to death; and while he was lying in jail, waiting the confirmation of the sentence, a petition was presented by his wife, praying for his release. In this case also the police had evidently used torture to save themselves the trouble of getting at the truth by less unlawful, but more roundabout means. There is but too much reason to fear that these are by no means isolated instances of a practice which thirty or forty years ago was not confined to the Central Provinces.

An interesting experiment has lately been set on foot by an English firm in Kashmir. The recent improvement in the quality of the Himalayan beer brewed from imported hops has already induced the Government to seek tenders for a supply of that beer to the large military cantonments of Upper India. It seems pretty certain that country-brewed beer, as made by the Marri Brewery, and now drunk with relish by Tommy Atkins, is clearer and better-flavoured than the imported Bass, as it issues from the canteen. It appears that hitherto the Bass has been almost invariably consumed in the consistency of thin In every cask there is a certain amount of sediment or thick dregs. This the commanding officer must take over and be accountable for its price to the commissariat, along with the rest of the contents of the cask. There is nothing for it then but to stir up the mud at the bottom, and issue it out thick all round. The Indian beer, as it is drunk quicker, requires less hop dregs in the cask to preserve it. All the requisites for making beer exist in abundance on the hills where pure spring water, cheap labour, and barley of excellent quality at half the English price are easy to procure; the only natural product wanting is the hop, which has to be imported from England at a considerable outlay every year. Can this plant be naturalised in the drier and more temperate regions of the Himalayas? This is the question to which the Marri Brewery Company are now attempting to give a practical answer. The experiment of growing hops on a large scale is now being tried at Srinagar, and two other places, in the Kashmir Valley, whose temperate climate, free from the deluging autumnal rains of the southern slopes of the Himalayas, would appear to be in all respects suited to the growth of the hop. The summer temperature is no higher than that of New York State, where hops have thriven with such success, while the winter is much milder. Operations were begun early in the spring of this year. About six hundred roots have been planted in a plot at Srinagar, obtained by favour of the Maharajah, and a quarter of these are reported to be in a thriving condition and already breaking into flower. Another plot of larger extent, comprising some twelve acres, has also been planted, but the soil is unfavourable, being low and swampy. For this garden, says the Pioneer correspondent, "sixty thousand roots were despatched from England early in the year, and arrived at their destination in May. But the heat and rough usage on the journey proved fatal to the greater number, and the English Superintendent has stated that only about fifteen thousand were alive when taken out of the sacks. These have been planted with great and all the These have been planted with great care, and a large percentage of them give promise of survival to repay the very heavy cost already incurred in the experiment."

OTHER experiments are being carried on by Mr. Beck, the local agent for the Company, in other parts of Kashmir, by which thousands of plants will be ready for transplanting early next spring. The first attempt to introduce hop culture into Kashmir was made by Captain (now Colonel) Montgomery, of the Trigonometrical Survey. His hop-garden was of very humble dimensions, but the plant throve satisfactorily and flowered regularly even after he had quitted Srinagar. The flower and quality of these hops were pronounced excellent by the manager of the Marri Company, who had obtained a small sack of them; the only deficiency he observed was that they were wanting in the pollen or yellow dust which is supposed to be an important ingredient of the genuine Kentish brew. Its absence however may be owing to the fact of the hops having been sun-dried, instead of undergoing the usual process of kilndrying; and it is said that a kiln, or oast-house, will be constructed at Manisbal for the reception of the coming harvest's produce, so as to give the experiment every chance of success. If the ruler of Kashmir throws no difficulties in Mr. Whymper's way, the success of his undertaking is wellnigh assured. It is said that the cost of a hop garden of 400 acres would be about ten thousand rupees per annum after the first planting, and that such a garden would produce some 140 tons of flowers yearly, calculating 7 cwts. per acre, which is regarded as a moderate outturn in the hop-growing counties at home. If this be true, Indian brewers will soon be able to supply our troops with wholesome beer at a cheaper rate than English brewers could hope to do.

ACCORDING to a Simla telegram of August 16, the Viceroy will start in October for a tour in Kashmir, on which occasion he will also visit Peshawar, Lahor, Multan, and Sind, reaching Bombay in December next. There is no truth in the rumour which has been generally current that Lord Lytton contemplates resigning next year.

A REUTER's telegram, dated Simla, August 18, states that the Gazette of India of that date notifies that the assumption by the Queen of the title "India Imperatrix" will be proclaimed at Delhi on the 1st of January next, before an Imperial assemblage of all the governors, lieutenant-governors, heads of government, princes, chiefs, and nobles. If the circumstances permit, 15,000 British and native troops will be present. The Viceroy will make his entry into Delhi on Dec. 26. The week will be observed as a general holiday.

ANOTHER telegram, dated Bombay, August 18, says that the apprehensions of a deficient rainfall in the Bombay Presidency have subsided, and the accounts received of the growing crops are favourable.

From the Government minute on the case of Mr. Fuller we learn the details of an incident which was lately telegraphed to this country. It appears that one Sunday morning, Mr. Fuller, an English pleader at Agra, was about to drive to church with his family. When the carriage was brought to the door, the syce failed at first to appear. When he did appear, "Mr. Fuller struck the syce with his open hand on the head and face and pulled his hair, so as to cause him to fall down. Mr. Fuller and him by the family drove on to church; the syce gotup, went into an adjoining compound, and there died almost immediately." The Joint Magistrate of Agra indicted Mr. Fuller, under section 323 of the Penal Code, for "causing hurt to one Katwaroo, his syce." It appeared from the evidence that the man had died from rupture of the splean which very slight violence, either from a blow or a fall, would be sufficient to cause, owing to the morbid enlargement of that organ. The Joint Magistrate found Mr. Fuller guilty of "voluntarily causing what distinctly amounts to hurt," and sentenced him to pay a fine of R.30, or in default to undergo fifteen days' simple imprisonment; directing the amount of the fine to be made over to the widow of the deceased. At the request of the Local Government, the High Court expressed an opinion on the case, to the effect that the sentence, though perhaps lighter than the High Court would have been disposed to inflict under the circumstances, was not especially open to objection. Thereupon the Governor-General in Council expresses his regret that the High Court "should have considered that its duties and responsibilities in this matter were adequately fulfilled by the expression of such an opinion. He also regrets that the Local Government should have made no inquiry, until directed to do so by the Government of India, into the circumstances of a case so injurious to the honour of

Digitized by GOOSIC

British rule, and so damaging to the reputation of British justice in this country." Expressing his abhorrence of the practice, "instances of which occasionally come to light, of European masters treating their native servants in a manner in which they would not treat men of their own race;" a practice "all the more cowardly, because those who are least able to retaliate injury or insult have the strongest claim upon the forbearance and protection of their employers," Lord Lytton holds that the case "is made worse by the fact, known to all residents in India, that Asiatics are subject to internal disease which often renders fatal to life even a slight external shock." Lord Lytton "cannot say whether Mr. Fuller would have been convicted of a more serious offence, such as that of causing grievous hurt, or that of culpable homicide, had he been charged with it. But this he can say with confidence, that in consequence of Mr. Fuller's illegal violence his servant died, and that it was the plain duty of the magistrate to have sent Mr. Fuller to trial for the more serious offence; a course which would not have prevented him from being punished (indeed he could thus have been more adequately punished) for the lesser offence, if that alone had been proved." Besides his error of judgment in trying the case himself, the Viceroy thinks that Mr. Leeds has evinced a most inadequate sense of the magnitude of the offence of which Mr. Fuller was found guilty. The offence was that of "voluntarily causing hurt." That is an offence which varies infinitely in degree, from one which is little more than nominal, to one which is so great that the Penal Code assigns to it the heavy punishment of imprisonment for a year and a fine of Rs. 1,000. The amount of hurt and the amount of provocation are material elements in determining the sentence for such an offence. In Mr. Fuller's case, while the provocation was exceedingly small the hurt was death. For this Mr. Leeds while tion was exceedingly small, the hurt was death. For this Mr. Leeds, while tion was exceedingly small, the hurt was death. For this Mr. Leeds, while saying that he intends to inflict a punishment something more than nominal, inflicts only a fine of Rs. 30. The Governor-General in Council considers that with reference either to the public interests, or to the compensation due to Katwaroo's family from a person in Mr. Fuller's position (and it does not appear that Mr. Fuller has made any other compensation), such a sentence is wholly insufficient. He considers that Mr. Leeds has treated the offence as a merely nominal one, and has inflicted a merely nominal punishment; and that to treat such offences with practical impunity is a very had example, and likely rather to encourage than to repunity is a very bad example, and likely rather to encourage than to repress them.

Lord Lytton therefore requests that Mr. Leeds should be informed of "the grave dissatisfaction" with which his conduct is viewed. He is also to be severely reprimanded for his great want of judgment and judicial capacity. In the opinion of the Governor-General in Council, Mr. Leeds should not be entrusted, even temporarily, with the independent charge of a district, until he has given proof of better judgment and a more correct appreciation of the duties and responsibilities of magisterial officers for at least a year."

In the course of his interesting after-dinner speech at Falmouth on Tuesday last, Lorth Northbrook made the following noteworthy remarks on the present aspect of affairs in Turkey, with special reference to our position as rulers of a large Mohammedan population in India.

He had often been asked what effects were likely to follow in India from the war now being carried on between Turkey and Servia. It was excessively difficult in any country to speak to the probable effect that any question supposed to be a religious one might have upon the people, and it was still more difficult to speak with any confidence of the effect of a religious movement in another country upon the people of India; but so far as he was able to form an opinion from personal observation, he believed there was no particular relation between the movements of Mohammedan populations in Turkey and India, and that the events now occurring in Turkey and Servia would not have any sensible effect upon India so far as regards British power in that Empire. But, whether he was right or wrong, he was sure it was the duty of the British Government not to be deterred by what might be the effect in India, but to exert their best endeavours to secure for the Christian populations in Turkey the entire fulfilment of the pledges so constantly given, but which had never been realised.

Coming from the recent Viceroy of India, who, in his four years' tenure of office, may be supposed to have gained some insight into the relations between 40 millions of Indian Mussulmans and the supposed head of their religion at Constantinople, such an expression of opinion should carry weight with his countrymen at home. It is true that the Indian Mussulmans are numerically an important class of our Indian subjects, and it may be that numbers of them look to Turkey as their religious head. But the Mohammedans of India are as one to four or five of the Hindus, and, in dealing with the Turkish question, our statesmen have to consider other things besides the goodwill of one section of the people of India.

LORD NORTHBROOK yesterday laid the chancel foundationstone of a church at Exeter, in the parish in which his family originally resided. The stone bore an inscription, stating that it was laid to the glory of God and in commemoration of his lordship's safe return from India.

In Edward William Lane, England has just lost one of her most illustrious Orientalists. The death of the well-known translator of the Arabian Nights, which occurred on Thursday, August 10, will, as the Times remarks, "be deplored not only by those Orientalists who are able to appreciate the greatness of his scholarship and the value of his work, but by all who can reverence a life spent in unselfish single minded study. From first to last Mr. Lane was an earnest student, and his labour was prompted by no ambitious motive nor rewarded by pecuniary gain. He renounced all the pleasures and advantages which are derived from mixing in the world, and resigning himself almost to solitude, devoted every hour to his colossal work. Few men have the courage thus to sacrifice a life; and the loss to Orientalists of the first Arabic scholar of this or any century is almost equalled by the loss to all students of so great an example of what should be the life of the true man of learning." After twenty-years of preparation, the first volume of his "Arabic Lexicon" was issued in 1863; four others have succeeded it at intervals of from two to three years, and the sixth volume is now far advanced, and will before long be published. The concluding two volumes will afterwards be edited from the manuscript that Mr. Lane had fortunately been able to complete.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, August 19, 1876.

MR. DACOSTA ON THE INDIAN REVENUES.

Mr. John Dacosta's pamphlet on the Indian Budget has the advantage of being god-fathered by three old Indians of undoubted repute. The names of Sir G. Campbell, Sir C. Wingfield, and Sir G. Yule lend no little weight to the arguments employed by the late senior partner of the well-known Calcutta house of Ashburner and Co., who has also from time to time contributed some valuable letters to Allen's Mail. If the remarks he now offers on "the financial position of the Government of India" are founded on sufficient data, it is certainly " important that the public should know that the Indian revenue is not at all so flourishing as is represented, and that many of the so-called reproductive works do not pay." Mr. Dacosta contends-1. That the revenue, owing to excessive and continued pressure, has lost the power of expansion. 2. That the excess of expenditure over revenue, which has hitherto marked the administration, must materially increase in future years, owing to the depreciation which silver has experienced.

Taking the last head first, we may observe that it contains a premiss which many people will altogether disallow. Has the outlay of late years usually exceeded the revenue? The answer to that question depends on the answer which ought to be given to that other question, whether extraordinary charges should be lumped together with the regular annual outlay. If they should, then Mr. Dacosta is warranted in speaking of an excess of outlay over income. If on the other hand the charges for famine relief and public works extraordinary are such as no finance minister would think of including in his statement of ordinary outlay, then the assumption of a yearly deficit in the Indian revenues falls to the ground. In spite of a famine outlay of £6,700,000, defrayed out of revenue, there was an actual surplus in the last three years of £150,000. This, as Lord G. Hamilton rightly remarked, compares favourably with the result of the Irish Famine, when out of a total outlay of £10,000,000, only £2,000,000 was paid out of revenue.

Nor does it seem to us more fair to debit the yearly revenue with the charge for public works extraordinary, which in the Budget Statement is always, for good reasons, kept carefully apart. The works in question are such as in every civilised country would be constructed by means of public loans, or else by private enterprise; and we cannot see why a yearly outlay of three millions or so on that account should be brought up to convert a real surplus into an imaginary deficit. But this is a point on which two schools of thinkers will long remain, we fear, hopelessly at issue. As to the future increase of these extraordinary charges no argument can be founded on the late depreciation of silver, seeing that no one can foresee the future of that metal under present conditions. If the fall in the value of the rupee was the result to some extent of panic, as Lord Salisbury supposes, the present rise may continue until the rupee has regained its former value. Ten years ago no one could have foretold that Consols would now be standing at 96.

But the Indian revenue, says Mr. Dacosta, has now lost the power of expansion. By comparing the figures for the last eight years he seeks to show that the average on those years is less than the sum collected eight years ago, and that the revenue for 1875-76 was "considerably smaller" than the revenue yielded in 1870-71. So it was, but how about the sources of revenue in the two years? As the Under-Secretary for India pointed. out, Mr. Dacosta and his friends "appeared to have compared the revenue of one year with that of another without in the slightest degree taking into account the reduction which had been made in the taxation, which was the same thing as though they were to assert that the income-tax in this country had lost its elasticity, because a 3d. tax did not produce so much as a 6d. tax." In 1870-71 the revenue reached its highest point, or nearly 513 millions. But that was the year of an incometax which brought in more than two millions. In spite of the total repeal of that tax, the revenue for 1872-73 exceeded 50 1-fifth millions, or rather more than the total for the previous year, when the tax was still levied at a lower rate; and last year, in spite of various smaller reductions of duty, the total figures stood at close upon 51 millions, or a little more than in 1869, when the income tax brought in £1,110,224. In the ten years up to 1874 75 the main items of revenue increased by about £3,187,000, or over £300,000 a year, and in the last two years the actual growth was £1,700,000. This may not seem wonderful to English eyes; but in India, with its fewer sources of available revenue, it is an increase for which we may be thankful.

That the revenues of India are not very elastic, it would be useless to deny. The land-revenue advances very slowly. Opium and salt cannot be expected to yield much more than they do now. Stamps, customs and excise may show no great progress, if taken year by year. But it seems to us a hasty conclusion to argue that the revenue has lost all further power of expansion, because of late years it has seemingly expanded so little. Nor does Mr. Dacosta show sufficient cause for his statement about the unproductive character of Indian public works, such as railways and canals. Lord G. Hamilton asserts on better grounds, that the capital outlay of £125,000,000 on public works and guaranteed railways already yields nearly 4½ millions, or something over 4 per cent. a year.

SILVER—III.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—We have to face the fact that at present every European in India has to pay from 10 to 16 per cent. to the millionaire brokers before he can send home money to his family.

The leading article in the Times of to-day deserves very careful study. The writer declares that—

1. "The reasons adduced by Lord George Hamilton for approving the outlay now annually incurred are fallacious."

2. That the reasons given by the Under-Secretary of State for India, for borrowing in India, are delusive. "It is unnecessary to press further home the refutation of this fallacy, which seems to be a repetition, probably a misunderstanding, of some view held by Lord Salisbury."

3. The writer declares that in India the value of silver has fallen, not only with reference to gold, but with reference to other commodities.

"The Indian producer is thus already getting a larger weight of silver for his produce than he otherwise would have done, because silver has declined in value in India."

What I wish your readers to consider carefully is that, if the Indian producer receives so much more silver for his indigo, tea, coffee, sugar, &c., he will be stimulated to increase the production. One hundred million of agriculturists know little about gold; they seldom see it; but every one of them appreciates and is ardent in the pursuit of silver, and will work hard and expend much money in manuring and irrigating his fields, and in breaking up waste land in order to obtain the flood of silver, which it is the fashion to say the rest of the world now depreciates.

The cheapness of silver will therefore greatly stimulate production in India, provided that an ignorant government does not put discouragements in the way. Increased production means a beneficial rise in the rate of exchange.

What the powers of production in India are I am afraid to hazard a guess, for fear of being accused of exaggeration. wheat alone India could supply sufficient to sustain the inhabitants of England, Scotland and Ireland; of sugar I have known thousands of agricultural families pay their whole rent by the sale of their sugar-cane, which occupied only about one-tenth of the area of their fields. I call my enterprising countrymen, who are making fortunes out of what was formerly waste land, but which now produces excellent tea and coffee, to witness to the enormous productive powers of the soil of India.

The remedy for losses in exchange lies in the encouragement of exports from India, and not in the breach of our promises limiting the amount of the land-tax. The power of the great exchange-brokers is shown by the fact that the fall in the value of silver is made the excuse for transferring a large portion of the hard-earned savings of Europeans in India to them, notwithstanding the fact that India has been during this very year largely importing silver, not exporting it. In your paper of the 8th inst. you have notified that on the 27th ult. £312,450 worth in silver were exported to Bombay and Calcutta by one steamer, and on the 3rd inst. £303,200 worth in silver were exported to Bombay by another. Total, £615,650 in eight days!

As long as we export silver to India, so long its cheapness can only encourage and stimulate the increased production of Indian staples. I suppose that we shall next hear that the cheapness of Manchester goods is a proper reason for depriving officers in India of 15 per cent. of their hard-earned savings. It is only when silver is exported from India that its cheapness ought to send down the exchange. No better proof of the ignorance and infatuation of Government can be given than the fact that in the face of the enormous imports of silver into India it still declares its price to be the cause of the terrible losses which its devoted servants have been suffering from. How can we repose any confidence in the present financial administration of the Indian Government?—Your obedient servant, T.

August 11.

Lord George Hamilton, in his speech, appears to have taken the same view of the value of the export trade from India as I "Merchants and traders had plucked up courage, and, as the purchasing power of the rupee in India had never fallen to the London quotation, a great stimulus would be given to the export trade from India, which could not fail to raise the price of silver and enable them more easily to obtain the sums necessary for the remaining payments of the year."

THE INDIAN REVENUES

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In the discussion of the Indian Budget on Friday last, the Under-Secretary for India, referring to the pamphlet I published on the subject, impugned the correctness of the statement that "the Indian revenue was not so flourishing as it was represented to be, and that, owing to continued pressure, it had lost its elasticity." Will you allow me to offer in answer the following explanation:-

Lord George Hamilton is reported to have said "these gentlemen" (meaning the gentlemen who signed the preface to my pamphlet), "appear to have compared the revenue of one year with that of another without taking into account the reduction which had been made in taxation." A reference to the pamphlet will show that the comparison was not confined to two years, but embraced the revenues of eight consecutive years, ending in 1876-77. His lordship then stated that there had been a growth of the revenue under five different heads from 1865 to 1875. Statements to much the same effect will be found in the pamphlet; they testify to the efforts of the Indian Government to render every branch of the revenue as productive as possible; but they do not disprove the assertion that the total revenue has remained almost stationary for eight years. This assertion rests on the figures given in the pamphlet as representing the revenues of a series of years, and can be disproved only by any material inaccuracy being shown to exist in those figures. Lord G. Hamilton is reported moreover to have adduced as a convincing proof of the elasticity of the revenue that "there was a famine expenditure of £6,700,000 in three years with a surplus of £150,000." An important circumstance connected with the administration of those years is, however, ignored, viz., that the cash balances experienced during the same period a depletion to as great an amount as the famine expenditure. Lastly, the Under-Secretary's statement that "the Budget estimate was exceeded by £1,600,000 in 1874 75, and by £1,500,000 in 1875-76," does not show the elasticity of the revenue; it merely exposes the inaccuracy of the Budget estimates.

My object in publishing the pamphlet was to call attention to the urgent necessity which has arisen for retrenchment in the expenditure of the Government of India; and a careful inquiry into the present circumstances of the Indian finances will convince anyone interested in their safety that the solvency of the Indian exchequer can be preserved only by the immediate adoption of measures of the strictest economy.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, J. DACOSTA.

THE IMPERIAL REGIME.

The Times of India remarks that it is now three months since the Titles Act was passed, and under its provisions her Majesty was immediately proclaimed in London Empress of India. But the proclamation announcing to the princes and people of this country the assumption of the Imperial title by the Sovereign has not as yet been issued. This delay is the more remarkable because it contrasts with the haste with which the proclamation of the fact to the English people, who have but a secondary interest in the matter, was made with many of the forms usual when a new monarch ascends the throne. What is the cause of this delay? It is of course certain that sooner or later a proclamation will be issued. The desirability of issuing it without unseemly hesitation is so obvious that we cannot believe that so much time has been allowed to elapse through negligence or indifference. It is possible that the Government wishes to mark the event by a distribution of honours, and the careful selection of recipients is a task that would of course demand much consideration, and consume much time. Or it may be that what we have urged more than once in these columns, the necessity for strengthening the hold of the new Empire upon the affections of the Princes and Chiefs and people of India by the establishment of Imperial institutions which would give them a direct share in its honours, has been felt by the Govern-To create an Empire of India, in which the natives of India would be excluded from positions not only of power and emolument, but of dignity, would be a political blunder of the gravest kind, and we cannot believe that Mr. Disraeli of all men would so stultify himself. Having created an Imperial throne, he must surround it by appropriate institutions that will guarantee its permanency. Having done so much he must do more. An Empire without an Empare second to a distinguished Frenchman to be the height of Emperor seemed to a distinguished Frenchman to be the height of absurdity; but an Empire without Imperial institutions, with a Sovereign at its head who was an Empress only in name, would not be a bit better.

THE RUPEE.

The Times of India thinks its readers will be glad to learn that the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce has resolved, with very few dissentient voices, to memorialise the Government on the question of the exchange. The meeting was unusually large, and many persons who were not members contrived to slip in. Only two resolutions were carried: the first needed little advocacy. It amounted to an appeal to the Government to say what it proposed to do in order to check the present ruinous depreciation of the value of silver. The second resolution led to a warm debate, and was chiefly carried through the urgent arguments adduced by Mr. Windram. the local manager of the National Bank. It called upon Government to follow the example of Holland and other European States, by taking exclusively into its own hands the prophese of silver for mint pure exclusively into its own hands the purchase of silver for mint purposes. Hitherto the Government has been compelled to issue any amount of rupees or currency notes against silver bullion taken to the mint by private individuals, charging only two per cent. for an operation that is at present suicidal. Were Government to decline purchasing silver except when needed for State purposes, and consequently to coin silver except under the same motive power, it is believed that the balance of supply and demand would at once be altered. It is clearly absurd that for the sake of two per cent. the Government should go on depreciating the value of the rupee in the interest of individuals who demand rupees in exchange for metal purchased at 47d. per ounce. The third resolution, proposed by Mr. J. C. Murray, the chairman, and seconded by Mr. Nicoll Fleming, was thrown out upon a somewhat stormy discussion, and it was finally resolved that the question of a gold currency should not be mooted. In the first place it seemed more than doubtful that such a large amount of gold as would be needed could be procured at present without further lowering the value of silver; and, secondly the majority were undecided as to the suitableness of a gold currency for such a poor country as India, where trading operations are conducted in such an infinitesimal scale. The productiveness of the California mines was generally regarded as mythical, and certainly as not immediately affecting the Indian markets, seeing that gold and silver are thus far entirely consumed within the United States. The point upon which most stress was laid referred to the uncertain quantity of German coin that may yet be kept back; but this will become a matter of little moment if our Government assert the exclusive right of increasing the silver currency according as circumstances may require a larger or smaller amount of that precious metal to be in circulation. Mr. Bullen Smith, who is a member of the Viceroy's Council, expressed his hearty adhesion to the two resolutions that were carried, and his conviction that Government would hardly venture to slight a memorial coming from such a numerous and influential assemblage of merchants, bankers and others directly interested in the industrial and commercial prosperity of the country.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

The Calcutta Statesman holds that the Council drafts form the most important and convenient mode of remittance to India, and their suspension necessitates, as we have recently seen, the simultaneous liberation of the Cash Balances, while the proper mode of doing so would involve us in discussions to which there would be no end. It is clear that by closing our own market for the sale of coined silver, and throwing the whole demand for remittances upon the European bullion-market, we should indefinitely enhance the price of the metal, simply to the profit of the German Government, through whose action the disturbance of value has been so largely occasioned. We turn, therefore, to the other alternative. Does it not seem monstrous that India alone should submit to have the depreciated metal thrust into her currency, while Russia, Germany Holland, and the countries of the Latin Convention are refusing to receive an ounce in this way ! Retaining the coinage in their own hands, as a matter of State discretion, they are setting the Government of India the precise example which it should follow. If we suspend the Council drafts, it would be necessary to throw back into circulation the money that finds its way into the Treasury, in some other way—say by redeeming the rupee stock in the country, or advancing freely upon it. The simpler and more effective course would, therefore, be to cease coining silver for the public; and this is what the Chamber of Commerce will probably to day determine to recommend to the Government. We hope it will not complicate the proposal by taking up the question of a gold standard in connection therewith. All that we want, all that we are prepared for now, is provisional legislation. It may or may not be decided by-and-by that we had better make gold our standard, but this question cannot, we think, be raised now without harm. That the difficulties in the way of introducing a gold standard into India have been absurdly exaggerated is true; but the abandonment of silver as our standard in favour of a metal that seems to be appreciating in value, would be a doubtfully wise step, to say the least of it. We want would be a doubtfully wise step, to say the least of it. We want more information than we now have upon the subject; and waiting that information we want provisional legislation to relieve the present distress. And the wisest form that legislation could take, we believe, would be to stop the private coinage of silver. In other words, let the Government make it a matter of State policy, whether to coin or not, and close the mints altogether against all private holders of silver.

LORD LYTTON'S FIRST BLUNDER.

The Bombay Gazette remarks that since Lord Lytton's arrival in India as Viceroy he has made his existence known to the public by two great actions—the one an intimation that in future ladies must wear trains at official entertainments in Government House, and the other the injudicious scolding which he has given everybody in the celebrated Fuller case. The first act is a somewhat daring innovation upon the social practice of Europeans in India, and for our part, seeing that previous Viceroys with as high a reputation as Lord Lytton have been content to receive homage from people dressed in a humbler attire than the one which is only necessary for a presentation to Her Majesty the Queen, we think that he might have permitted matters to remain as they were, and lost not an ight of dignity. In Anglo-Indian life we have enough of vanities and follies already to enable us to do without the expensive farce of mimicking her Majesty's drawing-rooms in Lord Lytton's bungalows in Simla or Calcutta. Perhaps his experience at the Continental Courts of Europe has imbued His Lordship with a highly imaginative opinion of the beauty of "trains" on ladies; but on the Continent there are many expensive habits which it would not be desirable to introduce in India, and which it would be a mere waste of Lord Lytton's statesmanlike intellect if he were to seek to fasten upon the plain life with which Anglo-Indians and their Viceroys have hitherto been contented. However, the "train" question is not of supreme importance except to those who are already blessed with ambitious and extravagant wives, or to those who regret the sudden appearance of vain pomposity in India's Viceregal Halls. The other matter, however, by which Lord Lytton has already distinguished his career as Viceroy is the Minute which we published Europeans may well regard such an effusion as this minute with regret, for it is easy to perceive that a spirit pervades it of ultra-Exeter-Hall-ism which will stop at nothing to exalt the virtue of natives at the expense of a depreciation of the virtues of Englishmen. It is easy for any Viceroy to earn a cheap reputation from a certain section of the inhabitants of India by the publication of attacks of this description upon High Courts, Magistrates, and Europeans generally; but we say that the process of doing so is so dangerous that it would be wiser eventually for a statesman to employ all his brains upon forms of Court millinery than to to employ all his brains upon forms of Court millinery than to waste even a fraction of them upon efforts to bring our judicial tribunals into discredit and to stir up bad feelings between the dominant race and the natives of India. Even that Quixotic Viceroy who was so filled with a spirit of loving kindness for the poor Hindoo when he landed in India that he hoped to make every man and woman wear shoes, learned wisdom in time, and endeavoured to balance the feelings of the different races and to accomodate himself to the customs of the country. When Lord Lytton has been in India a little longer he will probably know better to publish hasty generalisations about the cruelty and cowardliness of Europeans towards their native servants; we hope, at the same time, that he will consider the game not worth the candle of yielding to the temptation of writing what are called "slashing" minutes at the expense of the good name of his fellow countrymen.

FAILURE OF CROPS IN ASSAM.—A correspondent of the East gives a very sad account of the failure of crops, and consequent scarcity of food-grains in Assam. Several villages are said to be threatened with famine.—Englishman, July 19.

St. Leger Sweep.—The Umballa St. Leger Sweep promises to be one of the largest that has ever taken place. Between the 14th and 21st July over 1,500 tickets were sold, although it is nearly two months before the race will take place.

The Gold Question.—It has hitherto been the practice of the Mint establishments, when supplying gold medals intended either for prizes to students or to officers and men, in recognition of meritorious services, to charge for gold at the rate of Rs. 15 a sicca weight. The Officiating Master of the Calcutta Mint is said to have now ruled that gold is to be charged at current market rates.—Indian Daily News, July 24.

THE ENVOY FROM YARKAND.—Yakub Khan is again making for Simla, on a mission from his relative and master, Yakub Beg, of Yarkand. He is expected to pass through Srinagar, Kashmir, in a few days, and will proceed thence via Marri. Nothing is yet known as to the object of his visit; but, so far as the outside public is concerned, it will probably be announced as one of formal congratulation to Lord Lytton on his accession to the highest post in the empire.

CHARGE OF FRAUD.—On Wednesday, the 5th July, Mr. L. Dillon laid information before Mr. Pearson, at Allahabad, against Mr. J. C. Purcell, whom he charged with criminal breach of trust of over Rs. 6,000, and also with attempt at cheating in connection with the lottery which was recently got up in the aid of St. Joseph's Seminary. A warrant was issued for Mr. Purcell's apprehension, bail being allowed in a sum of Rs. 5,000. Mr. Purcell arrived on bail at Allahabad on Monday morning.

Court Etiquette.—That is bad news for paterfamilias about the tails—I mean the trains. After they had gone tail-less for so many generations, one wonders why Lady Lytton should have thought it essential to her dignity that the ladies of Calcutta should don those expensive and awkward appendages now, the more especially that the times are so hard, and every one is overhauling his annual budget to see where it can be curtailed, in order that the children may not have to be kept in India, or removed to an inferior school. But perhaps the Pioneer's "special" information may be wrong. If I am not misinformed, the present Government is distinctly opposed to the "special information" system, though perhaps an exception may have been made in Court matters, and the Pioneer, being supposed to take more interest in millinery than its contemporaries, may very well have been selected as a medium of communication in this instance.—Englishman's Saturday Evening Journal, July 15.

THE ARMY MEDICAL WARRANT.—The last number of the Indian Medical Gazette contains a very trenchant article on the new Army Medical Warrant. It winds up with the statement that on the 14th of August there is to be a competitive examination for fifty appointments, and says—"Now is the time for the unsuccessful medical practitioner and the ideal and worthless of the schools, to come forward and settle themselves for a few years, at the expense of the good of the army, the prestige of the service, and the equanimity of commanding officers.

EXPLOSION OF AN ICE MACHINE.—We are extremely sorry to hear that a dreadful accident took place in the house of Mr. Scott, Head Assistant of the Behar Opium Agent's office, on the night of Saturday last. An ice machine was being worked, when, there being an accumulation of ether, this inflammable substance suddenly ignited by contact with a light in an adjoining room. The consequence was that twelve persons were more or less severely burnt, as by a stroke of lightning, Mr. Scott, his son, and an engineer, being among the number.—Behar Herald.

FRUIT IN KAMAON.—Referring to an article which appeared in the Pioneer some time ago on fruit-growing in the Kamaon Hills, a correspondent assures a contemporary that there can be no doubt about the suitability of the soil and climate, but that the risk of hail destroying the crops would always make it unsafe as a speculation. It is also open to question whether the fruit could reach Calcutta or Bombay in such quantities or condition as to pay the grower. Choice apples—particularly russets and Ribston pippins,—can be grown, which equal both in size and flavour any obtainable in England.

Thomason College.—The officers' survey class at the Thomason College has, says the Pioneer, been abolished. It was the Principal, we believe, who urged the advisability of this step on Government, as, with the various garrison classes all over the country, it was useless for officers to go to Rurki. Government for a long time persisted in keeping up the class, and sending officers to undergo a course; but what is stranger than all is that Government has now refused to acknowledge certificates obtained by the officers who have qualified in this class, and has told them they must pass the garrison courses before their claims to appointments can be recognised.

TRADE RETURNS.—From the accounts of the trade and navigation of British India for the first two months of the current financial year, as compared with the corresponding period of last year, we see that the total value of imports, excluding treasure, was Rs.6,01,53 297, as against Rs. 5,92 70,423, and that of exports Rs. 11,98,83,390, as against Rs. 13,30,36,572. The value of treasure imported was Rs. 1,97.98,103, (of which Rs. 17 were on Government account), as against Rs. 67,00,506, and that of treasure exported Rs. 46,71,151, as against Rs. 8,27,028. The gross amount of import duty collected was Rs. 56,57 937, as against Rs. 56,14,219, and of export duty collected Rs. 11,95,685, as against Rs. 20,28,124.

Sobriety in the Army.—For some years now the Rev. J. Gelson Gregson has been doing good work as an apostle of temperance to the army. We are glad to get the Annual Report of the Soldiers' Total Abstinence Society, of which he is the Secretary, and to find that its efforts have been fairly successful during the past twelve months. "This year," says the Report, "our ranks have been increased by new Societies and members. Although we have lost some Societies, on their return to England and several time-expired men, we have added to our roll 1,975 fresh members and eleven new Societies." And it tells us that there are in the Bengal army 5,717 teetotallers; in the Bombay army, 2,061; on the Madras side, only 440.

DEATH OF MRS. KENNETH MACDONALD.—We heard with deep regret yesterday of the death of a lady who has left a large circle of friends in this city to mourn her loss, Mrs. Kenneth Macdonald, the wife of the Rev. K. Macdonald, the well-known missionary of the Free Church of Scotland. The deceased lady was herself a missionary of the highest type, taking a deep practical interest in the work of her husband, and devoting her great talents and accomplishments to the missionary life. She died of fever on Thursday evening last, after a brief illness, at the well-known residence in Beadon-square, where so many in the city have found a happy and refined Christian home ever open to them. Mr. Macdonald has the deep sympathy of the community with him in a loss so irreparable to himself and to the Christian Church.—Calcutta Statesman, July 23.

An Injustice to the Indian Civil Service.—A rumour is current, horresco referens, that a native is about to be placed, without the usual administrative training, either in the Civil Service or out of it, at the head of a district, as Magistrate and Collector. Raja Harendra Krishna is the party named, and, however estimable a man he may be, I should think even natives would hardly consider the appointment a justifiable one. However, at present, it is only a rumour, and I am inclined to think it is unlikely to prove anything more. In the meantime, the Civil Service are fully awake to the danger that threatens them, and will, no doubt, adopt energetic measures to avert it. India for the Indians, however, appears for the hour to be the shibboleth of English statesmen, and nothing less than a great catastrophe will, I suspect, bring about a reaction.—Englishman's Saturday Evening Journal, July 22.

A New Remedy for Prickly Hear.—A cure for prickly-heat has been discovered by Surgeon-Major French, who, in an article in the Indian Medical Gazette, states that painting the parts affected with a solution of sulphate of copper—ten grains to the ounce of water—is an almost certain cure, and that all his old patients use it regularly. He advises its application immediately after a bath, when the pores are open, and that it should be freely applied with a brush or sponge, and allowed to dry on the part. If the disease is very severe, it should be applied twice a day; but if not, once a day for about four days effects a cure. He does not believe in the old idea that driving in, or checking prickly heat, does any harm, and points out that the use of alcholic drinks and high-living always induce attacks in those liable to it. Flannel next the skin makes it worse by keeping the perspiration in contact with the body, and he advises cotton or linen to be worn.

Medals for Indian Chiefs.—The Prince of Wales's medals, intended for presentation to the native princes and chiefs, which have lately arrived from England, have been made over by the Foreign Department to the Calcutta Mint, for the purpose of having the names of the recipients engraved upon them. They are about sixty-one in number, viz., sixteen of pure standard gold, each weighing about eight sieca weights, and forty-five medals of pure silver. On one side of the medal is the Prince's image, and on the other his Royal Highness's plumes, with the date of his arrival in India. The gold medals are intended for the Nizam of Hyderabad, Sir Salar Jung, Sir Jung Bahadoor, Maharajahs of Jeypore, Gwalior, ndore, Benares, Johdpore, Punnah, Rewah, Vizianagram, Oodeypore, and others. The silver medals, we believe, are to be presented to the several petty Chiefs and Sirdars of Oudh and the North-Western Provinces, as well as to a native gentleman of Calcutta.—

A New Canal.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has, we see, recorded a Minute in favour of a canal from Madareepore, in South Fareedpore, to Calcutta, with a branch of fifty-five miles from Koolna to Barisal, to tap the Bakaranj district. The canal would effect a saving of between 200 and 300 miles to boats as compared with the present circuitous routes. "From Madareepore," the Minute says, "the canal would be carried across the Gorai river (there called the Mudhomuttee); thence it would join the Atara-Bankee river, and pass on to Koolna, on the river Bhyrub, in the Jessore district; then it would be carried across the country, without obstacle, to Calcutta. The only serious difficulty would be the crossing of the Gorai, but I believe that this could be overcome by engineering skill. The distance from Madareepore to Calcutta would be 140 miles." The line between Calcutta and Koolna has already been surveyed; and those between the latter place and Madareepore and Barisal, respectively, will be surveyed as soon as the season permits it.—Pioneer Correspondent.

The Case of the ex-Dewan of Bhawulpore, which will shortly be laid before the Viceroy, and to which we alluded a few days ago, we have been informed that a subsistence allowance of R. 600 a-year was granted to him by the Government of India, to be paid out of the revenues of that native State, while residing at Benares. According to the statements in his memorial, the ex-Dewan denies the existence of any real cause of misunderstanding with the late Rana. The memorialist also observes that he was a staunch friend of the deceased chief, and was always willing to effect improvements in the State to the satisfaction of the British Government, but obstacles were sometimes thrown in his way by one who had no concern with the State affairs, and who had at that time succeeded in winning the Rana. The memorialist also states that he was, in fact, a victim to the machinations of a female favourite, who was then under the protection of his Highness, and that these statements will be fully borne out by a reference to the widow Ranee, and even to the present minor Rana. Under these circumstances the petitioner solicits a reconsideration of his case, and permission to return to his family and his estates.—Englishman.

Cholera.—Intelligence has just been received at Rawal Pindi of cholera having made its appearance at Murree; there were two cases on Saturday, European children of one family; one of them succumbed by evening, the other is said to be in a precarious condition. The greatest consternation prevails among the Murree folk, and the municipal authorities are active in having all stale vegetables, fruit, &c., offered for sale in the bazaar thrown away, whilst the utmost care is being taken to keep the place clean. The rain has been coming down heavily during the past week, accompanied by dense fogs; the excessive humidity caused thereby is likely to prove favourable in developing diarrhetic into cholera cases. It is surmised that the cholera has been imported into Murree from the plains, by means of travellers who have recently arrived, and I understand it is in contemplation to adopt precautionary measures (something short of absolute quarantine) to prevent those coming from stations where cholera has existed from entering the station. An outbreak of cholera has also been reported from Mianwalli in the Bunnoo (or Edwardesabad) district; there have been upwards of 150 cases, of which some forty have proved fatal. Railway communication between Wazirabad and Lahore has been interrupted through heavy floods. Our down-country mails have been coming in very irregularly for some days past.—Times of India, July 28.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE.—Speculation is rife as to the true reasons that have brought Sir Richard Temple down to Calcutta in the middle of the rains. The ostensible cause is the Kirkwood scandal at Chittagong, but the real cause is suspected to be the Municipal Bill, which threatens to become a fiasco owing to the refusal, which was long since predicted, of the influential part of the community to have anything to do with it. Sir Richard is supposed to have come down for the purpose of inducing native gentlemen to come upon the Board: but it is very doubtful we think if he will succeed. He has never gauged public feeling on the subject, nor understood the rapid growth which native society is making in the sense of self respect. The belief that the people are children and the Covenantel Civil Service their ma-bap will have to go by the board altogether. They wish to be governed as sensible men, by appeals to their judgment and conscience, and no Government will be successful in future that does not recognise the change that has taken place in this respect as one of the effects, and a happy effect, of our rule.—Calcutta Statesman, July 19.

The Weather and the Crops.—The reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 20th July state that in Madras little or no rain has fallen in Madura and Tanjore; prospects in Madura and Kurnool are reported to be still unfavourable. In Mysore slight rain has fallen throughout the province, but not sufficient for the growing crops. In Sind the river has risen and anxiety is removed; general rain has also fallen. In most districts of Bombay the fall has been good and sufficient, but more rain is much wanted in Khandeish, Ahmednuggur, Sholapore, Kaladghee and Belgaum. In the Central Provinces general and abundant rain has fallen, and prospects are good. Good rain is reported from Berar. In Central India the falls have also been copious, and good rain is reported from all parts of Rajpootana, except Marwar. In Bengal seasonable rain has fallen, and cultivation is everywhere going on briskly except in Behar, where the supply is still insufficient. In the North-Western Provinces the rains are general, though hardly sufficient in the Allahabad district. In Outh the fall has been scanty, and more is urgently required. There has been a good fall all over the Punjab, and prospects are good.

The Currency Question.—When a publicist comes forward with the professed intention of instructing "ordinarily sensible men," and showing them the little absurdities of which they are guilty, he of course puts in a claim to be regarded as an extraordinarily sensible person. It is not, however, always necessary to admit the claim. The Pioneer has said more absurd things on the currency question during the past months than almost any other leading paper in India, and now when it proposes to correct the mistakes of "ordinarily sensible men" on that subject, it lays itself open to the retort that the fact that it is not ordinarily sensible about currency matters does not qualify it to instruct those who are. Our contemporary with graceful condescension shows those who would have the rupee declared legal tender as one-tenth of a sovereign, why the proposal is ridiculous. "If the rupee were a legal tender in England, it would be necessary that the Mint through the Bank should always be ready to make good the word of the Government by giving a sovereign in exchange for ten rupees. But at the present price of silver you can buy more for a sovereign than would make ten rupees, say enough to make twelve. So the traveller from India, having turned his rupees into gold in England at the rate of £100 to the thousand, would reverse the operation; buy silver in the market, get it coined into 1,200 rupees in India, and then take that sum home again to be changed into £120 at the cost of the British tax-payer. So on ad infinitum. But no one has proposed to make the rupee a legal tender for two shillings and at the same time to go on coining rupees ad infinitum. If the traveller in question found that he could not get his silver coined into 1,200 rupees in India, but could only get the market value for it, he would perhaps find his little speculation not worth indulging in.—Friend of India, July 15.

GRIEVANCES OF RAILWAY SERVANTS.—The grievances of the drivers and guards of the East India Railway have terminated. Captain Wallace, Deputy Consulting Engineer to the Government of India for Guaranteed Railways, was appointed to take this matter in hand. He has shown great temper and judgment, and the matter is now amicably settled. At a special meeting, held on 29th June, 1876, between the Consulting Engineer to the Government of India for Guaranteed Railways, and the Acting Agent, East Indian Railways, it (1) was resolved with reference to the report Captain Wallace had sent in that the salaries of the drivers and firemen in the Locomotive Department, which had been curtailed owing to slackness of traffic, be restored to the former rates from the commencement of the heavy traffic of the current half year, say, 1st April last; (2) that Captain Wallace be requested to report further on Mr. Campbell's revised code of general rules; (3) that Captain Wallace's report be forwarded to the Board of Directors and the Government of India, with the recommendation that the necessary steps be taken to assimilate, so far as practicable, the system of working in the Locomotive and Traffic Departments on all Indian Railways. The Committee desired to place on record their appreciation of the tact and ability displayed by Captain Wallace in corducting this important inquiry. The following is Captain Wallace's opinion of Mr. Atkins:—"I must acknowledge the services of Mr. Atkins, Secretary to the 'Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants in India.' During the inquiry he brought forward the grievances great and small, making light of none, in a manner that if occasionally trying to one's patience, was certainly conducive to thoroughness; and although he is the author of the remarkable circular that was recently issued to the guards and drivers, he at our meetings advocated their cause in a temperate and generally reasonable manner. He now and then exhibited a tendency to exaggerate, and to attack the characters or reputations of the absent; but, on the whole, I believe him to be as accurate and as scrupulous as other professional agitators of his class.

STERLING EXCHANGE — Have we at length touched the bottom? That, is the question in Calcutta at present. Last week's tremendous reaction, the improvement amounting to about a penny an ounce. Exchange has promotly responded to the rise, but its unsteadiness shows how little confidence there is in the future. How far this improvement in the position is due to the demand that has suddenly set in for China, and whether that demand is likely to last any time, am not in a position to say; but we must surely be getting near the point at which the low prices will shut up all but the most profitable mines, and it will then be contrary to all experience if the proprietors of these allow prices to fall much further. A rise to about fifty pence per ounce is what I look for, and not much improvement on this for a considerable period, though I think the tendency will be towards a very slow rise. The immensely rich gold reef which is said to have been discovered in Australia will help to restore the old relation between the two metals, but only at the cost of a fall in the purchasing power of money generally. India, however, will gladly accept her share in the loss arising from such a fall, in preference to bearing the burden almost alone, as at present. after all, ample ground for hope in the unexplored gold-producing capabilities of Australasia; but that is no argument against endea-vouring to put our currency on a more stable basis. The question of moving Government to stop the coinage of silver, or put a heavy royalty on it, was to come before the Chamber of Commerce to day; but, I understand, great difference of opinion prevails, or till lately prevailed, on the subject. The letters to the daily papers show how completely that subject, and even the plain exposition of it in the Calcutta Review, are misunderstood, and it is much too dry a one to be re-opened here. In the meantime, the Government is taking a step in the right direction, in endeavouring to supply its wants in the way of stores, as far as possible, in India, instead of from home. The example will, no doubt, be extensively followed by private individuals, and the balance in favour of India thus appreciably increased. It rests quite with the Government to determine whether this balance shall be taken in silver, or in gold, and there can be no question what the choice ought to be. The advocates of a stoppage of the coinage will, probably, find powerful allies in Manchester, where starvation must, sooner or later, be the result of the present policy of masterly inactivity.—Saturday Evening Englishman.

MACAULAY AND THE INDIAN PRESS.—The unfortunate attitude in which Macaulay placed himself towards the Anglo-Indian cont munity obscured the services which he rendered to the Anglo-Indian Press. Those services were very great. At a moment when the future of Indian journalism hung in the balance, a man who combined high official rank with a commanding literary reputation in England, and with excellent grounds for personally disliking the press here, declared in favour of its enfranchisement. Macaulay did not take the trouble to understand the causes of the Anglo-Indian bitterness against his Black Act. That bitterness rested on a sound historical basis, although it was, to a large extent, built up of unsound analogies, drawn from the past to the future. But the penalty he paid for his indifference to local opinion was sufficiently great, and the hostility of the Indian Press to himself personally, and to his measures, removed any suspicion of his views being unduly biassed by friendship. Had he set himself to show that the special circumstances of the British Government in the East justified a continuance of the licensing system, his brilliant power of arraying facts and arguments would, for a time, have stamped out the discussion. But, with ample reasons for personally disliking Calcutta journalists, he threw the whole weight of his authority and reputation into the other scale, and secured the passing and maintenance of the law which forms the charter of the Indian Press. History identifies that law with the names of Metcalfe and Lord William Bentinck; but the personal share of Macaulay in the matter may be judged from the following extract. Speaking of the old licensing system which then formed the legal status of Indian journalism, he wrote in one of his Minutes, as Legislative Member of Council:-" It is difficult to conceive that any measures can be more indefensible than those which I propose to repeal. always been the practice of politic rulers to disguise their arbitrary measures under popular forms and names. The conduct of the measures under popular forms and names. Indian Government with respect to the Press has been altogether at variance with this trite and obvious maxim. The newspapers have for years been allowed as ample a measure of practical liberty as that which they enjoy in England. If any inconveniences arise ro n the liberty of political discussion, to those inconveniences we

Yet, while our policy is thus liberal and inare already subject. dulgent, we are daily reproached and taunted with the bondage in which we keep the Press. Strong feeling on the subject appears to exist throughout the European community here, and the loud complaints which have lately been uttered are likely to produce a considerable effect on the English people, who will see at a glance that the law is oppressive, and who will not know how completely it is inoperative.

MILITARY.-Major H. A. Brett, 43rd Light Infantry, has been appointed to fill the vacancy among the Deputy-Judge-Advocates, caused by the appointment of Lieutenant-Colonel Lynch to the command of the 1st Battalion 10th Foot. Major Brett served during the New Zealand war. He is a son of Mr. Harry Brett, for some time member of the Board of Revenue.—Madras Standard, July 24.

THE WEATHER.—The cry for rain comes from all parts of India, except the Punjab, where there has been an excess, and that most unfortunate of railways, the Scind, Punjab, and Delhi, has again had part of its line washed away. In Mysor there have been several smart showers, but not nearly enough rain has fallen to fill the tanks, which, owing to last year's drought, are even now in many cases absolutely empty.—Athenœum, July 26.

Mr. Moberly.—The Rev. R. Moberly, son of the Bishop of Salisbury (formerly head-master of Winchester School), is visiting the Church of England Missions in Ceylon and India. He has com-pleted Ceylon and Tinnevelly, and is at the present moment in Tanjore, where he preached last week to the Society for the Propaga-tion of the Gospel congregation. He is expected in Madras in a few days.

DEATH OF THE BISHOP OF CRANGANORE.—Our Cochin correspondent writes:—I regret to record the demise of the Very Rev. Fre Jesne, the newly-appointed Vicar-General of the Bishopric of Cranganore, which sad event took place at Chowerah, near Alwaye. reverend gentleman came out from Goa in May last. He had been ailing for some time from fever, and died on Tuesday evening last. His remains were conveyed to Cochin and interred in the Church at Amarapathy.—Madras Athenoum, July 25.

THE BUSTAR EXPEDITION.—The Governor in Council has already expressed his approval of the conduct of Captain Eastall and Mr. Ross and the men under their orders, and has sanctioned the reward to the Paiks recommended by the Acting Agent to the Governor.

The reward proposed for the Police, as well as the presentation of a sword to Inspector Saladi Nayadu, to whom the special approval of Government is to be conveyed, have also been sanctioned.— Madras Times, July 25.

A FRACAS AT BANGALORE.—Last Friday, July 21, an unpleasant affair occurred on the racecourse between Captain McTaggart and affair occurred on the racecourse between Captain McTaggart and Mr. Cousens, the jockey, the cause being that the latter was found timing Captain McTaggart's horse, which was running at a trial gallop. High words followed, and the circumstance has furnished a case for the lawvers, Mr. Sydney Smith, pleader, being engaged by the jockey. We make no remarks at present, beyond saying that the account in the local Spectator, as is natural under the circumstances, is much too highly coloured.—Bangalore Examiner.

The Rink Mania.—The Bangalore Skating Rink is claiming its victims already. On Tuesday evening last, July 12, while Colonel Benson, Judge of the Small Cause Court, Bangalorc, was enjoying himself on the roller skates, he fell, breaking his leg and dislocating his ankle; the gentleman, however, has been getting on favourably. A rink has been opened at Calcutta with great success, and one is to be established at Simla. In fact, skating rinks are spoken of every where, and bid fair to become the order of the day in India. every where, and bid fair to become the order of the day in India. -Madras Times.

ANNEXATION OF WYNAD.—The question of the annexation of Wynad is likely soon to be decided. The last we hear of the subject is in reference to a deputation of planters who waited on his Grace the Governor at the "Cedars," in order to enunciate their views on the subject. The deputation was courteously received by his Grace, who gave the gentlemen forming it a patient hearing, promising to do all that his Grace could to promote their interests in the matter. It is pretty generally thought that apparation will in the matter. It is pretty generally thought that annexation will be the result, despite many opinions on the subject for and against. Athenœum, July 26.

SUICIDE OF A SOLDIER.—A melancholy occurrence took place in the lines of 2-16th Regiment on Sunday morning last. A young soldier, we are informed, who was a volunteer from the 1 16th on the embarkation of this regiment for India, was awarded fourteen days' confinement to barracks, and a deprivation of some pay, on the 14th inst. On the 15th he mounted the Trimulgherry Bazaar guard, and on the 16th, on returning to barracks, and being dismissed, he walked into one of the wash-houses, loaded his rifle, placed the muzzle against his left eye, drew his bayonet and pushed back the trigger with it, sending the contents through his skull. It appears strange that he should have committed the rash act, for on his return off guard he appeared cheerful and light-hearted.—Deccan Times, July 24.

THE RISE OF PRICE IN GRAIN. -The prices of grain in Mysor and parts of that large province having considerably increased, there was something approaching a "loot" in the bazaars of Mysor town on the 5th instant, which was only quelled by the presence of the officers of the police and a few men of the Mysor horse. The failure of the monsoons last year and the late scarcity in some parts of the province, coupled with the dulness in trade, must have the effect of raising prices so that the poorer classes suffer a great deal.

The published returns of the meteorological department show that the fall of rain in Bangalore and Mysor, as it has been in many other parts of the presidency, is extremely scanty.—Madras Standard, July 12.

REJECTED PRESENTS FROM TRAVANCORE.—When his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was touring through India his Highness the first Prince of Travancore had executed, for presentation to the Prince, certain works of indigenous art, such as oil paintings by a Travancore artist, and ivory ornaments designed and executed by native workmen in Travancore. Among the pictures was a splendid oil painting of a life size bust of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. These gifts were forwarded to Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co. of Madras, to be forwarded to the Prince of Wales; but his Royal Highness refused to receive them, and commanded their return to the first Prince of Travancore. The reason affirmed for the Royal Prince's refusal to accept the gifts was the very proper one that his Royal Highness could not receive gifts of the kind unless personally presented to him by the giver.

Gold in Wynad.—The proprietors of the "Wynad Gold Prospecting Company" have compiled and printed a pamphlet, supplying much valuable information regarding their own "prospect" and Gold Mining Companies in Australia and California. From what we can judge of this company, the energy with which it has started, and the intellect that is brought to bear on the object of its speculation, it is very likely to take the wind out of the sails of the Alpha Gold Mining Company, born prematurely and weaned hastily. The fatal mistakes committed by the Alpha Company were, that they started on too small a capital, and employed steam power for crushing. The engine, too, imported from Australia, we hear was apprehended, or considered, to be unsafe, and a "bursting" might occur at an unexpected moment. The Wynad Gold Prospecting Company employ water power, and they purpose, it is said, to raise a capital of £400,000.—Madrus Athenaum, July 12.

The Proposed Extension of the South India Railway.—The germ of a novel proposal is contained in a letter placed at our disposal, which, we believe, is engrossing the attention of no less a person than Sir Dinkur Rao, who has been lately on a pilgrimage to Madura and Ramisweram. It is nothing more or less than a proposal to extend the South India Railway to a place called Mundapuru, on the coast about twenty miles from Ramnad, and build a railway bridge across the Channel three miles in width to Paumben, and perhaps over to Ceylon. If properly laid with a branch line to Davipatam from Ramnad, the numberless pilgrims who go to Ramisweram in the Island of Paumben from all parts of India would, it is thought, more than pay the expense. If Sir Dinkur Rao is really thinking of any such magnificent project—a sort of Indian Menai Bridge idea in fact—he will certainly make his name famous, and pilgrims will thus be able to start from Hurdwar in the far north and do the distance straight down to Ramisweram with the least possible discomfort, by the aid and assistance of the iron horse.—

Bangalore Examiner.

Bangalore.—Something interesting is likely to come before the Bangalore Law Courts shortly in connection with one of the many banks lately established there. The Bangalore Bank Corporation was, a short time back, established, and a Bangalore paper tells us that a defalcation of some thousands has been discovered, and about thirty thousand rupees were given out on loan without any record of the same being kept. The total sum of money misappropriated has not been discovered, but a good deal of information will likely see the light of day when the inquiry which is to take place comes on before one of the police courts. As our readers are aware, Bangalore and Mysore have a large number of lending banks under purely native management. A roaring trade is done in moneylending and jewels and promissory notes; high rates of interest are charged, and where business is properly managed the returns to shareholders are fair. But success cannot last long, especially as money-lending institutions among natives in the mofussil are seldom managed properly. The order lately issued by the Commissioner of Mysore that no public servant is to hold shares in these banks is another blow to their stability, as people will not be disposed to pin faith in them unless some public official is connected with the banks.

Mhow.—A fracas has occurred betwen two officers of the Artillery at Mhow. Lieutenant Dunnage has been placed in arrest, and at Nasirabad Major Fletcher, commanding G Battery 4th Brigade, is under arrest pending an inquiry into matters connected with the discipline of his battery. Should courts-martial result from the courts of inquiry, officers will have to be furnished from other stations, as few can be spared for such duty in the Mhow Division.

OVERMASTED SHIPS.—The Rehmann, from Bombay, made Muscat early in June, partially dismasted. This is another case of an overmasted ship leaving Bombay harbour with little or no ballast after having been inspected by marine surveyors. That she has not met the fate of the unfortunate Stewart Hahnemann is due solely to the fair weather she encountered throughout the passage. She is bound on a voyage to Mauritius and the Cape, and to ensure hersafety her masts and spars were to be considerably shortened before she left Muscat.

The Next Governor of Bombay.—The Pionzer makes a guess that Sir A. Hamilton Gordon, fourth son of the late Earl of Aberdeen, is likely to be the next Governor of Bombay, when Sir P. Wodehouse's term of office expires, in April next. The Allahabad paper adds that Sir Arthur Gordon "was very unpopular" in all his appointments. The last he held was Governor of Mauritius, where, if we mistake not, he was extremely unpopular, so much so that the people remonstrated with the Colonial Secretary about him; and besides he absented himself from his duties in a most eccentric manner for several months, taking a cruise to nobody knew where. He is now Governor of the Fiji Islands, an honour which no one else would accept. To send such a man to Bombay would be to sacrifice a good appointment in India to party purposes.—Bombay Gazette.

The Sassoon Dock.—After a delay of more than a year the Government of Bombay has at last consented, under orders from the Supreme Government, to allow Messrs. Sassoon and Co. to exercise their right of shipping opium from the Sassoon Dock. The manner in which the settlement of this question has been deferred from time to time by no means redounds to the credit of our local Government, although the delay has doubtless contributed to put many thousands of rupees into the coffers of the Port Trust, and has therefore served admirably to carry out the policy of robbing Peter to pay Paul. We are glad that Messrs. Sassoon and Co. have at last obtained their rights in spite of the opposition of our local magnates, and we trust that Government, will, in future, remember that it is no part of its duty to crush private enterprise, even though it be in support of its favourite creation, the Port Trust.

it be in support of its favourite creation, the Port Trust.

Loss of Life at Sea.—Captain A. F. French, of the steamship Clive, which arrived in harbour on Thursday from Liverpool via the Canal, reports the loss of three seamen. One was washed overboard, and two died of heat apoplexy. It appears that on the 10th inst. in the Red Sea, at about eight o'clock in the morning, one of the men went into the stoke-hole, where he remained for about forty minutes, and when he returned he was unconscious; Captain French found that he was suffering from heat apoplexy, he tried every remedy, but the man could not speak and died in half an hour. Another man went into the stoke-hole at twelve o'clock, and on returning at hell-past twelve he was attacked in a similar manner. The heat at the time was 140 degrees. The second man died at four o'clock in the evening. In the Gulf of Aden, on Sunday last, at about ten o'clock in the morning, one man while going from aft to forward was washed overboard.—

THE CHOLERA AT PANCHGUNNY.—The following Government resolution regarding the outbreak of cholera at Panchgunny has been published:—It is with much regret that Government have heard of this unfortunate outbreak of cholera at Panchgunny, and of the loss of life resulting therefrom. The opinion of the medical officer as to the causes will be 'awaited, but in the meantime his Excellency the Governor in Council desires to endorse the commendations of the Collector on the excellent service rendered by Messrs. A. Wingate and C. H. Jopp, who so promptly proceeded to Panchgunny, and both by precept and example did much to allay the panic of, and restore confidence to, the inhabitants of the station. The necessary steps will be taken by the local authorities to put the Plover's-well into proper repair. The further report of the Collector regarding the tardiness of Mr. Webb in reporting progress, and the conduct of the patel and kulkarni will be awaited.

THE MARCH OF INTELLECT.—The Education Department of Government has been wonderfully successful in this Presidency, if we may take the Deccan College as an illustration. The students of that College have learned all that their professors could teach them, and are crying out for more. One of old testified that he had become wiser than his teachers, but that was through his study of God's word. The study of God's word is not inculcated in the Deccan College, so that the rapid and alarming progress of that students cannot be accounted for thus. These young men devour all before them, like the lean kine of Egypt, and still continue hungry. Some months ago sixty-six of these students signed a memorial to Government asking for more advanced professors. They criti-eised their actual professors as though they had already reached a loftier summit than their poor teachers had attained to.—Bombay Guardian.

DEATH OF MR. DHIRAJLAL MATHURADAS .- On Friday, this gentleman, who has been from 1856 Government pleader, at first of the Sadar Adawlut, and afterwards of the High Court, died at his house, near Cowasjee Patel Tank, after an illness of about ten He suffered from remittent fever, and was attended during his illness by Drs. Framjee Shapoorjee and Shantaram Vithal, in conjunction with Dr. Cook. He had received his education at the Elphinstone College, and was selected by Mr. W. E. Frere to be Government Pleader, whilst yet a mere youth of twenty-two, from the great natural intelligence he had exhibited as pleader at the bar of the Sadar Adawlut. During the twenty-four years of the exercise of his profession, Mr. Dhirajlal, by his most remarkable urbanity of manners, his open, manly, and kind-hearted bearing towards his clients, and honest and industrious study of their interests, had secured an extensive practice, so much so that at one time he had command of half the business of the Court. He was much loved by the brethren of his profession, and was respected by the Judges of the Court. He was held in native society, both here and in the mofussil, especially in Guzerat—Surat being his birth-place—in very great estimation, and his loss is very generally felt. He died at the age of forty-two.—Times of India, July 28.

DEATH OF SURGEON-MAJOR JOHN MENNIE.—It is with deep and sincere regret we have to announce the death of Surgeon-Major John Mennie, the Staff Surgeon of Poona, at the Presidency, last Thursday morning. He had been for some time past suffering from liver complaint, and only left Poona last Tuesday for Bombay, with the view of proceeding to England by the last mail steamer. The melancholy news of his death was conveyed to Poona by telegram, and in compliance with his express desire his body was brought to Poona and in compliance with his express desire his body was brought to Poona and interred last evening in the Protestant Cemetery with military honours. H.M.'s 26th Regiment N.I., under the command of Colonel A. Beecher, furnished the band and firing party, and the coffin, which was placed on a gun-carriage, was followed by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, Major-General Lord Mark Kerr, and all officers off duty; as also a great number of natives—Parsees pre-dominating—of all castes and creeds. Dr. Mennie was specially selected by the late Dr. Stovell, the then Inspector, General for the Staff Surgeoncy of Poona, on the 22nd February, 1864, and with the exception of a short furlough to England has all along held the appointment. He was very popular, and had a most extensive practice both among Europeans and natives, who no doubt will feel his loss much. The following Station Orders were issued yesterday by Lord Mark Kerr, C.B.:—It is with much regret that the Major-General announces the death of Surgeon-Major J. Mennie, Staff Surgeon, which has just occurred at Bombay. The deceased officer's remains will be brought to Poona by rail at 5.35 P.M. to-day, and his funeral will take place at 6 P.M. All officers off duty are requested to attend (in undress). 300 rank and file of the 26th Regiment N.I. with proportion of officers and N. C. officers under command of a field officer will parade at 5.45 P.M. as a funeral party, a quarter of a mile from the Cemetery on the road thereto, to escort the body to the grave; to be supplied with three rounds of blank ammunition per man; the band to attend. The 2.15th Regiment will furnish the usual carrying party, to be at the Cemetery at 5.45 P.M. Attention is invited to section 3, para 47, Bombay Regulations. Staff in blue (helmet and belt). Officers attending the funeral of late Surgeon-Major Mennie this evening to wear blue patrol coats, with forage caps. The escort 26th Regiment N. I. to be in review order.— Poona Observer, July 22.

THE MISSIONARIES.—The Bishop of Colombo has suspended the licenses of Church Missionaries in the Island. Some of these missionaries have been working here before he was born, and he has now decided to take under his own charge the hitherto unsectarian Mission to the Tamil coolies. There is great opposition in consequence: Voluntary support will be withdrawn, and possibly a free episcopal church commenced.

CIVIL SALARIES.—The Governor of Ceylon apparently takes more interest in the losses of his subordinates by the depreciation of the rupee than the Government of India, for we are told by a contemporary that "Correspondence is going on between Sir W. Gregory and the Secretary of State on a proposal made by the former that the salaries of Civil Servants in Ceylon should be raised all round to such an extent as will compensate them for the depreciated value in silver. No definite reply has yet been given."

THE RUPEE QUESTION.—The Ceylon Government already allows some members of the Civil Service to make remittances at par and at 1s. 10 d., and is about to take into consideration the cost of extending the privilege to all members of the Public Service. this purpose a few questions have been sent to each member to know what proportion of salary, not exceeding one third, the member may wish to remit through the Crown Agents to his family in England. After collecting the needful data in the replies to this and other questions, the Government will decide what to do in the matter.

The Badulla Railway.—A meeting of the Ouvah Planters' Association unanimously agreed on Saturday that if the proposed railroad should not pay six per cent, the members are willing to agree to a tax of 50 cents per cwt. in the form of an export duty on coffee, provided the terminus be in or near Badulla town. Our Badulla correspondent telegraphs:—"The townspeople are to hold a public meeting on the subject; the feeling is very strong for a railway to the town, and natives of all classes wish to get the line. The tax on coffee will be readily agreed to if it is necessary to bring the railroad to town." The Haputale Planters' Association have also agreed, if necessary, to guarantee that any balance required to make up six per cent. on Rs. 15,000,000 will be met, so far as the planters of Haputale are concerned, by a special export duty on coffee not exceeding fifty cents per cwt.—Ceylon Times, July 18.

LORD NORTHBROOK ON INDIA.

Enthusiastic demonstrations took place on Tuesday at Penryn and Falmouth, in honour of Lord Northbrook, who formerly represented the constituency. Both towns were gaily decorated, and the church bells rang merry peals. His lordship was received at the Assembly Rooms, Penryn, in the morning by the committee and friends, and an imposing procession was then effected to the Town Hall, preceded by a band. Amongst those present were Sir John St. Aubyn, Bart., M.P., Mr. W. J. Jenkins, M.P., Mr. L. T. Cole, Q.C., M.P., &c. Mr. James Bird Read, presided over the proceedings, and in the course of some introductory remarks glanced at the public career of Lad Nethbreck from the time has even to the constituency a young Lord Northbrook from the time he came to the constituency a young Lord Northbrook from the time he came to the constituency a young man and was honourably returned to the House of Commons, to the date of his appointment to the Viceroyalty of India, the duties of which exalted position he had discharged with credit to himself and to the benefit of the nation at large. Eulogistic and congratulatory addresses on the part of the boroughs of Falmouth and Penryn were then presented to Lord Northbrook, special reference being made to the administrative capacity displayed by his lordship during the famine in India.

Lord Northbrook, who met with a hearty reception, said in reply: I can say with perfect sincerity that no recognition of whatever service I have been able to render in India could be more gratifying to my feelings than the address which you have now presented to me. It is now 24 years since I first had any connection with the united boroughs of Penryn and Falmouth, to which I must now add Flushing, and it is ten years since I ceased to represent the boroughs in Parliament, but during the whole of that time every recollection I have of the united boroughs has been a recollection of pleasure, and I look back to the days that I have spent here as some of the happiest of my life. Many of you who are here present have known me well, and coming from such a source, and coming, I say, from those who have taken such an interest in my career, the address is of the greatest possible value to me. I don't think you will expect me to dwell upon the several administrations of India during the past four years; it is a subject of the deepest importance, and one which I can hardly touch upon, on the present occasion, to any advantage. The address has alluded to the measures which were taken to meet the danger of famine two years ago, and to other measures connected with the administration of affairs in India during the time when I had the honour of filling the office of Viceroy. All I can say upon the action of the Government during the time is that I tried to do my duty to the best of my talents and abilities. I must disclaim for myself those praises which are given me in the address, and also by my friend Mr. Read. It is by the blessing of God only that the administration of so vast a country can be conducted successfully and prosperously, and that it is by God's blessing and the exertions of those who fill positions of trust and responsibility in the civil and the military services of the Crown in the country, who for energy and ability are second to no body of men in the world, that those have been prosperiously been prosperiously and second to be successfully as the address have been more dangers which have been alluded to in the address have been met, that peace has been preserved, and that the country is in a state of tranquillity and prosperity. It is a more congenial task for me to turn from what has been said in this address regarding my own career, to the obligations under which I am placed to this constituency and the united boroughs. The chairman has explained to you how, when a young man of little or no experience of public life, the united boroughs of Penryn and Falmouth placed me in a position second to none in the world in honour and importance, namely, a member of the House of Commons of Great Britain and Ireland. That obligation I have never forgotten. While I represented the united boroughs I endeavoured to fulfil all the expectations which I had raised both in regard to attention to political matters and to the local interests of the borough. I am sensible it is the united boroughs of Penryn and Falmouth that gave me an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the public business and the filling of offices of responsibility; and that without that confidence which was given me by the constituency of the boroughs there would have been no probability that I should have been chosen to fill the high office of Vicercy of India. Therefore, I can say most sincerely that my obligations to the electors of the united boroughs of Penryn and Falmouth are of the greatest possible kind; and I can also honestly say that I have always felt them to be so, and that I have on all occasions taken the deepest interest in your welfare and prosperity. His lordship, in conclusion, expressed his gratification at the non-political character of the proceedings. Political divisions were not so great in this country that they could not esteem and honour those who differed from them in politics. For himself he could say that in that part of the borough, as well as in Falmouth, there were many friends whose good opinion he valued who were members of the Conservative party. It was a real pleasure to him to stand once more in that hall to see the men of Penryn met together as in old days. It almost made him wish himself a young man again, and that those times of proper and healthy excitement could come back again. He felt young enough to enjoy the intellectual exercise of election days as much as he did twenty years ago. The address he that I have always felt them to be so, and that I have on all occasions should preserve as a most precious document to be valued during his life, and left to his son at his death. His lordship's remarks were received with repeated applause.

A procession was subsequently formed to Falmouth, where, at five o'clock, a banquet took place at the Polytechnic Hall, at which a large company dined, under the presidency of the Mayor.

The Earl of Morley responded to the toast of the House of Lords, and, in doing so, said no one welcomed Lord Northbrook back more than the House of Lords.

Lord Northbrook, in replying to the toast of his health, thanked the company for their conditality, and then proceeded to say that in regard to the business transacted in India during the last four years t would be probably more agreeable to them, as it would certainly be to him, if he did that evening what he had been in the habit of doing when he had been in that hall before, to pay more attention to the present than to the past, and make some few remarks, not upon the history of the last four years, but on the actual and present condition of affairs. India was said to be an unattractive subject. Now, once a year there was a grand night in the House of Commons on the subject of India; once a year the Minister who represented India in the House of Commons in connection with the Government made what was termed a financial statement of the affairs of India. They had seen in the papers a few days ago a statement of that kind, made with remarkable clearness and ability by Lord George Hamilton, the 1 nder Secretary of State for India. The finances of a country were of the highest importance; but probably there was no country where they were of more importance than in India; they were important not only to India itself, but important to England. Holders of Indian securities and others interested in the financial stability and prosperity of India were, doubtless, present, and it gratified him to be able to state that the finances of India for 1875 were remarkably savisfactory. The revenue of India was nearly two-thirds of the revenue of Great Britain; it amounted to £51,250,000, and the expenditure was somewhat over £49,500,000. There was a surplus at the end of the year 1875 of £1,600,000. The two previous years showed equally satisfactory results.

Miscellaneous.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, accompanied by the Marchioness and family, have left town for the Châlet Cecil, Dieppe.

EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The directors of the Eastern Telegraph Company (Limited) invite applications for the unallotted portion of the Six per Cent. Preference share capital required for the duplication of the Suez-Bombay section.

EXAMINATIONS FOR COMMISSIONS IN THE ARMY.—The following Queen's and Indian cadets have passed a qualifying examination for commissions in the army:—Queen's Cadets—G. H. A. Arnot, W. H. Cole. Indian Cadets—R. B. Adams, C. W. W. Burton, J. M. Carpendale, W. D. Gordon, A. J. R. Hutchinson, R. K. Kays, C. A. Roberts, G. C. C. Shakespeare, F. M. Turner, H. E. C. Way.

MILITARY.—In accordance with a General Order just issued by the Commander-in-Chief, lieutenants who obtained their first commissions before Aug. 26, 1871, and who have not yet qualified for promotion to the rank of captain, will be required to pass an examination in tactics, in addition to the subjects referred to in General Order 65 of 1870.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE.—(WHITEHALL, Aug. 14.)—The Queen has been pleased to direct Letters Patent to be passed under the Great Seal granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto Sir Richard Temple, of The Nash, in the parish of Kempsey, in the county of Worcester, K.C.S.I., Lieutenant-Governor of the Bengal Provinces of Fort William, and he heirs male of his body lawfully begotten.

THE SILVER MARKET.—The Silver Market was quite disorganised on Friday. To make any sales in the afternoon, a very material reduction on Thursday's rate of 53d. to 53dd. would have had to be submitted to. The exchanges came lower from the East. Messrs. Pixley and Abel's Circular mentions that the date for the next India Council drafts is as much as a fortnight before the usual period. This has doubtless influenced the market.

DEATH OF MR. HENRY GREEN .- The death of Mr. Henry Green, the shipowner, which occurred a few days since at Reigate, has caused a great loss to the many charitable institutions connected with our mercantile marine. As head of the firm of R. and H. Green, the shipowners and shipbuilders, of Blackwall, he invariably took an active interest in all matters connected with the merchant navy, and no deserving case of need ever went unhelped by him, the only stipulation being that the name of the benefactor should be kept

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £500,000 (50 lacs of rupees) in bills on India were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday, the 16th inst. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £147,000, to Bombay £208,000, and to Madras, £153,000. Tenders on Madras and Calcutta, at 1s. 8½d., receive about 98 per cent., and those on Bombay at that price, in full. This shows a further advance of fer rupee since the last allotment. The effect upon the price of silver has, however, been adverse, for whereas bars were on Tuesday quoted at 53\frac{1}{2}d. to 54d. per oz., they were on Wednesday afternoon about 53\frac{1}{2}d. to 53\frac{1}{2}d. per oz. It was anticipated in some quarters that the bills would have been taken \frac{1}{2}d. or even \frac{1}{2}d. per rupee higher.—Tenders for India Council drafts to the amount of £500,000 (fifty lacs of rupees) are invited, and will be opened on the 23rd inst. at the Bank of England. Thus only a week will then have elapsed since the previous allotment, and this innovation points to the fact that the Tables G. the fact that the Indian Government are quite ready to profit by the rise in silver. In the interim tenders will be received for twenty-five lacs at a minimum of 1s. 9d. The effect upon the silver market has been to cause some depression, for although a sale occurred at 53½d. per oz. on Thursday morning, that price could not be obtained in the afternoon. Some Mexican dollars were disposed of at  $53\frac{1}{2}$ d. per oz.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS, Tuesday, Aug. 15.—The Proposation.—The following references to India occur in the "Queen's Speech," on the prorogation of Parliament, read by the LORD CHANCELLOR in the House of Lords on Tuesday, August 15:—

I am deeply thankful that my dear son, the Prince of Wales, has returned in good health from his lengthened journey through India. His presence in that part of my dominions has given occasion for the expression of feelings of loyalty and devotion to my throne which I highly value.

In pursuance of the power conferred upon me, I have, by proclamation, assumed the title of Empress of India. In making, as regards India, this addition to the ancient style of my Crown, I have desired to record, on an individual style of the conference of the conf occasion of peculiar interest to me, the earnest solicitude which I feel for the happiness of my Indian people.

I trust that peace and order are re-established in the Malay Peninsula, and that the rulers of the native States will cheerfully accept the recommendations and assistance of my officers for the better government of

COUNTY OF CHESTER.

COUNTY BRIDGEMASTER,

OUNTY BRIDGEMASTER, SURVEYOR, and ARCHITECT.

The MAGISTRATES for the COUNTY of CHESTER
will, at the General Quarter Sessions of the Peace, to be held at NETHER KNUTSFORD, in and for the said County, on MONDAY, the 16th day of OCTOBER next, proceed to ELECT a SUCCESSOR to the late Mr. Nicrous, the County Bridgemaster and Surveyor.

The person elected will be appointed to fill the offices of County Bridgemaster, Surveyor, and Architect, and will be required to devote the whole of his time to his duties. A Military or Civil Engineer, or Professional Architect, will be considered cligible for the appointment. The officer appointed will not be obliged to reside actually in the county, provided that his residence is in some place convenient to his duties. Detailed particulars of his duties, which will comprise the supervision and charge of the County and Hundred Bridges, Roads, Gaols, Court-houses, Asylums, Lockups, and all County Buildings of every description, and the furnishing, when specially required, of Plans, Specifications of Old Buildings, may be obtained on application to the undersigned.

The salary will be £500 per annum, and actual trations, and Estimates for New Buildings, and the Alterations of Old Buildings, may be obtained on application to the undersigned.

The salary will be £500 per annum, and actual travelling expenses within the county, such sum to include the services of such clerk or assistant as the officer to be appointed may find it necessary to employ in the inspection and superintendence of county lengths of roads, and such roads as may hereafter be required under the provisions of any Act of Parliament, to be inspected on behalf of the county. If specially engaged to furnish Plans, Specifications, or Estimates of New Buildings, or for Alterations of Old Buildings, other than Bridges, Lockups, and Magistrates' rooms, he will, when the cost shall exceed £500, be allowed a commission thereon according to a fixed scale.

Full particulars of all the duties to be performed, and of the allowances to be made, together with any further information Candidates may require, may be obtained on application at my Office, Northgate-street, Chester.

Applications for the appointment and Testimonials must be delivered at my Office, as above, on or before the 29th day of September next.

CHARLES WILLIAM POTTS,

Clerk of the Peace for the County of Chester.

Summary and Revielv.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, August 4; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, August 2; Calcutta, August 1.

THE reported disagreements between the Indian Government and the Rajah of Jaipur are now said to have no foundation in fact. According to a Bombay paper the relations between the two Governments are "most cordial," and it does not seem likely that cantonments for British troops will be established on the Sambhar Lake.

VERY bad accounts are given of the public health at Marri. The cholera there is reported to be of a malignant type, recoveries among the attacked being painfully rare. Out of one hundred and twenty-five seizures, seventy-one had proved fatal up to date; seventeen of the dead being Europeans. People were leaving Marri daily. The troops at that station have been moved into camp, and the most stringent sanitary measures have been adopted. Among the victims to this scourge is Lieutenant J. W. Boothby, of the 70th Foot, who was doing duty at Marri, and died on the 30th July, after a short illness. Another death reported by this mail is that of Captain Stehelin, 33rd Native Infantry, who died at Delhi of heart disease on the night of Sunday, July 30. Dr. Williams, Superintendent of Vaccination, died at Karachi from abscess of the liver on July 20.

THE Town of Tanna, in Bombay, has been visited with a sharp epidemic of cholera. There were about fifty attacks, with eighteen deaths, but the exertions of the authorities seem to have nearly stamped it out. The Civil Surgeon has been employing a new remedy for the disease, salicylic acid, which he gives in doses of eight grains and upwards, more or less frequently, according to the circumstances of each case. This treatment has been very successful in some severe cases, and Dr. Boustead is thoroughly satisfied with the result of his experiments.

THE Indian papers mention the return from Kabul of Khan-Khanan Khan, the Aide-de-Camp of the Viceroy, who lately visited the Amir of Kabul. It has leaked out that the purport of the said letter was a request to establish two British Missions in Afghanistan, and to send an English medical officer on special duty to Kabul. Sher Ali, however, has declined the request on political grounds, after consulting one of his most trusted spiritual advisers, in whose sincerity and disinterestness the Amir has the highest confidence.

WE learn that Sir Frederick Haines, the Commander-in-Chief, has laid his plans for a four months' tour through the Punjab and the frontier stations. He will leave Simla about the m ddle of October, and, after visiting the intermediate stations, will proceed to Lahor, where he will be joined by the Viceroy, and the two camps will proceed on the arranged route. At Peshawar there is to be a Camp of Exercise.

A FEUD of long standing between two Rajput houses is to be appeased by the betrothal of the Maharana of Udaipur to a sister of the Maharajah of Jodhpur. These two great houses have been at feud for nearly a century.

It appears that in the regiments ordered home under the Enlistment Act of 1870 all those soldiers who have two years to serve are to be transferred to regiments remaining in India. To encourage them to re-enlist the cost of their new uniforms is to be charged to the State.

THE railway from Mhow to Ujain, a distance of fifty miles, was opened on the 3rd August.

WE hear that the Secretary of State has granted Colonel Leonard, late Chief Engineer of Irrigation in Bengal, a pension of £900.

A CASE resembling that of Mr. Fuller has occurred at Sagar, where a gunner has been placed in confinement for having caused the death of a punkah coolie. A post-mortem examination showed that rupture of the spleen was the cause of death, and that this rupture might have ensued from a blow. The case was to be tried in the usual way under the Penal Code.

During the monsoon rumours appear to run riot among Anglo-Indian circles, in default of more solid food for minds temporarily released from much of their accustomed routine work. As the rumours of one week are generally contradicted in the next, we are not surprised to learn that the story, for instance, about Captains Grant and Biddulph having been murdered in Little Tibet is utterly without foundation. They were on a shooting expedition in the direction of Gilgit, on the Kashmir frontier, and by latest accounts were alive and well. Another rumour, which we give for whatever it may be worth, declares that Sir John Strachey has left behind him a memorandum strongly advocating Ranikhet as a site for a European colony, as well as the head-quarters of Government.

At the meeting of the Viceregal Council on Thursday, July 27, Sir H. Davies presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Oudh Revenue Law, and Mr. Hobhouse the Report of the Committee on the Bill for defining the general laws in force in Oudh, after which the Council adjourned for three weeks.

THE Viceroy seems to have repented of his ill-judged order about the wearing of trains at State Drawing-Rooms. So many piteous complaints of the expense to which ladies would be put by such a rule have reached his ears that he has consented to leave the matter to each lady's free choice.

IT is now stated in India that Colonel Malleson has not been superseded as Guardian to the young Maharaja of Mysor. He has merely gone on privilege leave for three months; Captain Wilson meanwhile acting for him.

By the latest mail news from Bombay we learn that Deputy Surgeon-General Gordon has been ordered to proceed forthwith to Gibraltar as Principal Medical Officer; Surgeon Major Doherty, of the 12th Foot, succeeding him in the administrative medical charge of the Peshawar Circle. Captain Clement is posted to the Oudh, Allahabad, and Sagar Circle as Deputy Judge Advocate, vice Mr. Seagrim, posted to the Peshawar and Rawal Pindi Circle. Surgeon-Major Irwin has been appointed Deputy Surgeon-General of the Lahor Circle, with temporary rank, vice Gibbons, proceeding to Rangoon.

WE learn that an official paper is now circulating in India among those surgeons-major of the royal medical service who were lately promoted, inquiring from each whether he desires to remain in India or return to England, in the event of being brought on the Indian establishment of his rank. The surgeongeneral goes on to remark that he "cannot say whether or not the wishes of each individual officer will ultimately be consulted." This course, says an Indian contemporary, is causing a most painful feeling of uncertainty among a large number of officers, a result at which we are not surprised. Most of these officers are married, and their position is this :-- " If we elect for home service, we may be compelled to pay for the return voyage of our wives and children; and if we elect for India, we may have to wait a year or more before we come within the establishment and get the pay of our rank.

TWENTY TWO inmates of the Sailors' Home in Bombay have signed a letter which appeared in the Times of Thursday last, complaining of the conduct of the Bombay Government in converting the new Home for a time into an European General Hospital. The new building which has thus been appropriated has been reared mainly from public subscriptions, to which the late Gaikwar of Baroda contributed no less than $20,000 in memory of the visit of the Duke of Edinburgh in 1870. A certain sum, we are not told how much, was added by the Bombay Government, to complete a building which has now been diverted to other uses than those for which the money was subscribed. It appears that the managing committee of the Sailors' Home have done their best to avert an issue which nothing but urgent necessity could justify; but to go to law with a powerful Government is a tedious and costly process, which the committee may be excused for avoid-If the sailors were decently housed in the meantime, then temporary exclusion from the new building might not seem a great hardship; but the complainants, in their appeal to the British public, declare that the building now used as a Sailors' Home in this city has accommodation for about forty men; it is situated in one of the worst parts of the town, it is badly drained, and internally and externally in a wretched state of repair. It was condemned as unhealthy and unsuitable more than ten years ago. At the present moment the south-west monsoon rains came freely into one of the sleeping quarters. During the last few months there have been as many as ninety men packed at one time into the building.

Even Englishmen at home who have found the recent spell of hot weather a little too much for their bodily comfort, can easily imagine the unpleasantness of the situation thus described in a place where the thermometer probably ranged for weeks together from 90 to 100 deg. in the shade.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Pioneer thinks it very likely that Lord Lytton will "befriend the Anglo Indian in one matter, to an extent which will render him the most popular Governor-Whether he is right or wrong in General of modern times." his conjecture that some concession will be made to the services regarding the extent and exchange value of their remittances to England, we are inclined to agree with him that "any part of the income which an English imported servant of the Government of India may require to lay down in England for the current expenses of those dependent on him, should be drawable in England at that rate which, when it in November, as usual.

operates disadvantageously to him, his exchange is still computed at, namely, 2s. for the rupee." Such a man, if he has a family, must sooner or later send his children home, and it does seem hard to place any limit on the extent of the remittances which he may wish to make for their support out of his monthly pay, so long as the money has been saved by him out of his pay for that very purpose. For each rupee thus remitted the recipient should receive its full equivalent in English money, at the rate of ten rupees to the pound sterling. In the case of English officers taking their turn of Indian service, the present system works with special unfairness. writer in the Army and Navy Gazette points out that while the pay of military officers in India is made up of English pay with various Indian allowances, the English pay is converted at the rate of 2s. 6d. per rupee. The result at present rate of exchange is that "an officer is first docked 20 per cent. of what he is entitled to by the rate at which he is paid out here (viz., in India), and the paternal Government remits this home for him at a further loss of 10 per cent. In other words, for every pound sterling a captain, say, is entitled to in England, he receives 16s. in India, and the Government remits it for him at a further loss of 2s. in the £1, or a total depreciation of 6s. from every sovereign." Even at this rate the amount allowed to be sent home by officers through Government is limited to £70 a year for a lieutenant, £100 for a captain, £150 for a major, and so on. Those, therefore, who would remit more than the sum specified, must resort to the banks, and content themselves with an exchange rate of 25 per cent. for the rest of their yearly remittances.

THE Times Correspondent has telegraphed the full text of the Viceroy's Proclamation touching the Queen's new Indian title, as published in the Gazette of August 19:-

I hereby publish, for the information of the Governors, Administrators, Princes, Chiefs, Nobles, and Peoples of this Empire, the subjoined Act passed by the Imperial Parliament of Great Britain and Ireland, on the 27th of April, 1876, together with a Royal Proclamation, dated at the Court of Windsor, the 28th of April, 1876, in the 39th year of her Majesty's reign, transmitted to this Government by the most Honourable the Secretary of State for India in his Lordship's despatch No. 70, of the 18th of July, 1876.

Moreover, I now publicly notify under this my hand and seal that it is my intention to hold at Delhi on the 1st of January, 1877, an Imperial Assemblage, for the purpose of proclaiming to the Queen's subjects throughout India the gracious sentiments which have induced her Majesty to make to her Sovereign style and titles an addition specially intended to mark her Majesty's interest in this great dependency of her Crown, and her Royal confidence in the loyalty and affection of the peoples and Princes of India.

Princes of India.

To this Assemblage I propose to invite the Governors, Lieutenant-Governors, and heads of Administrations from all parts of the Queen's Indian dominions, as well as those Pinces, Chiefs, and Nobles in whose persons the antiquity of the past is associated with the prosperity of the future, and who so worthily contribute to the splendour and stability of this great Empire.

I shall forthwith issue such Orders in Council as may be suitable to the historical importance of the occasion, and in conformity with the desire which will be felt by all her Majesty's subjects in India to manifest the affection which they cherish for their august Sovereign by public rejoicings and appropriate demonstrations of loyalty.

August 18.

It is further stated that the Viceroy will make a public entry into Delhi on the day after Christmas-Day. All public offices will be closed for a week. About 15,000 European and Native troops, mostly regiments moving in the ordinary course of relief, will be present. It is reported that the assembly will be on a very grand scale and will be held on the open plain. Around the Viceroy's throne will be grouped a series of raised seats, representing the various Provinces, in a great semicircle. The troops will be drawn up behind the throne. Races, ceremonial visits, and other entertainments will occupy the Christmas week.

According to the same informant Lord Lytton had a narrow escape the other day. While riding to Mashobra, his horse shied and fell over the khad. Luckily the precipice is not very steep, but the Viceroy rolled about 100 feet down, though he escaped unhurt. His lordship, we are told, is to leave Simla on the 10th of October for Kashmir, and then go to Peshawar, Lahor, Multan, and Karachi, arriving at Bombay about the middle of December. Thence he will proceed to Delhi. The Government offices will move to Calcutta early In spite of recent measures for improving Simla as the Viceroy's summer capital, its supremacy in that respect is still endangered, if it be true, as the Times correspondent telegraphs, that Colonel Colley, the Viceroy's Military Secretary, has gone to Ranikhet to examine its suitability for Government summer quarters.

THE reports which lately floated over from India concerning the Viceroy's failing health and probable retirement have been taken up by the scribbling gossips of the clubs, and sent back to India in the shape of positive information. It has been even stated that the Duke of Buckingham was about to step into Lord Lytton's shoes. All this idle talk seems to have arisen from a passing attack of indigestion on the Viceroy's part. It has now been positively contradicted, not only in the Indian papers, but in the latest telegrams from Calcutta.

According to a Times telegram, the Chief Justice of Bengal has written a strong Minute against the proposed Civil Appeals Bill. He says the present Courts of Intermediate Appeal are generally inferior to the Courts of First Instance, and recommends the abolition of the present system of district Judges and the establishment of groups of Appeal Benches, each consisting of one barrister, one civilian, and one native judge.

FROM the same source we learn that Mr. Lepel Griffin, Secretary of the Punjab Government, held a Darbar at Patiala on Monday, August 14, jointly with the Rajahs of Jhind and Nabha, to announce the Government decision regarding the Regency during the Maharajah's minority. A Regency Council was installed, consisting of two Sikhs and one Mohammedan. The decision is said to have given much satisfaction. The former Prime Minister remains in office.

It appears from latest telegrams that the blockade of the Kohat Pass against the Afridis is to be made more stringent. It is also stated that no new tribes have joined, and that an expedition will be unnecessary.

A BOMBAY telegram of August 23 states that, according to the latest reports received from the various districts of the Bombay Presidency more rain is wanted in every direction. In parts of Berar, Kandesh, and the Southern Mahratta country the crops are withering. Cotton seeds are slightly better than other crops, but grain urgently requires a plentiful rainfall.

A CALCUTTA telegram of August 25 states that the rainfall has been abundant in the Bengal Presidency. In parts of Bahar and Orissa, however, it is inadequate. The accounts received of the growing crops are favourable, with the exception of indigo.

THE Times correspondent telegraphed from Calcutta yester-day that the Viceroy's Proclamation touching the Imperial assemblage at Delhi has on the whole been favourably received by the public, who feel that whether the assumption of the Imperial title is judicious or no, still, as the thing is done, the change in the Queen's style should be proclaimed with due pomp and ceremony. Orders in Council giving details of the arrangements are to be issued. It is believed that the spectacle will be most magnificent, and will attract large numbers of visitors from all parts of India.

According to the same informant it appears that the Afridis are making grand preparations to resist the British Force which they expect to have sent against them next winter, and that the Akhund of Swat has promised them help. The Afridis of Terah, who have hitherto been friendly, are said to be now wavering, as the hostile clans tell them that Government intend to seize Terah for a sanitarium. The Urakzais, a friendly border tribe, lately attacked the Afridis, and were victorious after a hard fight. Everything is quiet in Khelat, and Major Sandeman leaves that country for India on the 7th September. Reports from Kabul state that the Russian Envoy has not yet formally announced his message, but has told the Amir that his object is to negotiate for the establishment of Russian trade and an offensive and defensive alliance. It is rumoured from the same source that the Russians are collecting supplies for a winter attack on Merv.

THE recent financial resolution impressing the necessity of economy has been followed by similar circulars from the Lieutenant-Governors of the North-West and the Punjab. The former urges all officers to suggest every possible means of saving, without fear of losing favour and putting aside all considerations of private interest. He warns them that if this be neglected the Government will take the matter into its own hands.

THE case of Major Playfair, late Superintendent of Hazaribagh Penitentiary, excites much interest. Eighteen months ago, says the Times telegram, Mr. Beadon, Deputy-Commissioner at Hazaribagh, wrote to him certain rude and intemperate letters, accusing him of tampering with the gaol visitor's book, and made a hasty report to Sir R. Temple, who as hastily dismissed Major Playfair. After vainly seeking redress in India, Major Playfair went home and laid the case before the Secretary of State, who ordered Mr. Beadon to apologise for the tone of his letters, and directed Major Playfair's trial by courtmartial. The trial was held in Fort William last week, and the accused was fully and honourably acquitted. Much sympathy is felt for Major Playfair, who by a groundless charge has lost a valuable appointment.

According to latest telegraphic advices, nothing has yet been heard of the missing steamer Scotia, which left Calcutta for Rangoon on June 18. Some geese and the body of a dog supposed to belong to her have come ashore near Cheduba Straits. The Diamond man-of-war is searching for her.

It is rumoured in India that Sir John Strachey will return to India as Finance Minister on Sir W. Muir's retirement.

SIR SALAR JUNG'S arrival at Bombay on August 24 has been telegraphed home.

A DELIGHTFUL specimen of "Baboo English" has been forwarded to the Pall Mall Gazette, in the shape of a letter addressed by an educated Bengali youth to a deputy-commissioner, asking for employment, on the grounds of his peculiar qualifications for serving the Government. It runs thus:—
"I, the student entrance class of the—school, undersigned, most respectfully beg to offer myself a Candidate for a service under your Mortified feeling, which I have a clear hope, and entirely out of secret errors in my mind, will not fail to enlist my name. It will not be out of its place to add here regarding my qualification that I appeared last year in the university examination. Let me Conclude, adding that if I be so fortunate as to have the post for I hope, I will not fail to give you very satisfaction in the faithful discharge of the duties that will confer upon me." In "Pidgin-English," as exemplified lately by Mr. Leland, one has little difficulty in making out the sense, when once the key to that strange lingo has been given. But Baboo English defies translation as much as the most corrupt passage in a play of Æschylus.

We hear that Captain Claud Clerk, late 2nd Madras Light Cavalry, having resigned his appointment as Governor of the Military Prison at Aldershot, has left the station, to which he was appointed in 1870, vice Captain A. P. Miller, now of the Dublin Military Prison. "Not alone"—says the Army and Navy Gazette—"among the members of the prison staff, but through the whole division, has Captain Clerk made himself popular, and in him Aldershot has lost an officer who always worked most zealously to reduce as far as he could do the amount of military crime."

THE lavishness with which the Indian Council has been lately pouring its bills into the Money Market, just as the exchange had begun to rise again, is already producing the results which most people foresaw as inevitable. As the writer of the City Article in the Times of Thursday last observes:—"The rise in the Indian exchange and the advance in the price of silver appear to have demoralised the advisers of the India-office. It has been pointed out on several occasions that the market cannot absorb more than a certain sum of these bills in a given period, and by forcing more on the market than can be at once utilised, the price is not only prevented from further recovering, but the large buyers of these remittances are kept in a chronic state of perplexity through the uncertainty as to what effect may be produced upon the Indian exchanges by the mysterious operations of the Council." On Wednesday last only five lakhs, or £50,000 nominal, was allotted on Calcutta, at 1s. 8d. per rupee; this being 2½ per cent. less than the rate for the previous week. In India also the rate has receded from 1s.  $8\frac{3}{4}$ d. to 1s.  $7\frac{3}{4}$ d. the rupee. In the words of a letter quoted in the City Article of the Times for Wednesday last :-

Each man asks his neighbour, "Who will buy seventy-five lakhs of rupees at 1s. 9d. when six months' bills can be sold in Bombay and Calcutta at about 1s. 74d.?" Instead of "smashing off" their rupees in cutta at about 1s. 7\forall d.?" Instead of "smashing off" their rupees in this unsystematic manner (and by telegraphic transfer, too), why not follow the market quietly until the Indian produce season is in full awing? The silver market during the past six weeks has been very bare of supplies, and it is well known that the shipments made to India of late will be transhipped and forwarded to China, where it is likely to meet a much better market, certainly at the present time by a difference of 5 per cent. The bugbear caused through the production of the American mines in Neveda has also apparently passed away. The shipments of gold from New York to this country have recently been on a most extensive scale, while those of silver have been quite insignificant. or gold from New 10th to this country have recently been on a most extensive scale, while those of silver have been quite insignificant. . . . It is believed that America will require most of the produce of her own mines for the next two or three years, and it is clear that Germany cannot put more than £200,000 or £250,000 on the market per mensem, as she requires to remelt and refine her former currency before putting it on the market for sale. It is by no means clear, therefore, why our India Council should show such precipitate haste in endeavouring to stifle our Indian exchanges when they showed evident signs of recovery. Their action has been universally condemned by everyone capable of giving an opinion on the subject.

In the last number of Macmillan's Magazine Mr. Laing Meason urges with apparent force the claim of the Nizam's Government to the retrocession of the Berars, which were made over in 1853 to the Indian Government in pledge for the payment of the Nizam's Contingent, and of other liabilities incurred by the rulers of Haidarabad. Mr. Laing Meason professes to derive his facts from "sources that are unimpeachable as to their authority," and if we were only sure that the case made out by him on the Nizam's behalf were as strong as he represents it, we should agree with him on the justice of restoring a province still avowedly governed in the Nizam's But there are one or two misstatements in the article which throw doubt on the sources whence the writer's information was obtained. We are told, for instance, that no accounts of the revenue of the Berars have been given from 1860 to 1876, nor has the Nizam reaped any benefit from the recent growth of revenue in those previnces. This at any rate seems wholly at variance with the fact that our Resident at Haidarabad, in his Administrative Report for 1870-71, distinctly stated that a sum of about £250,000 had been paid into the Nizam's treasury out of the surplus revenues of the Assigned Provinces between 1867 and 1871, "according to treaty arrangements." During the ten years ending in 1871 it appears that the entire surplus amounted to more than £460,000, a part of which was expended on the Khangaum State Railway and other public works, the balance being duly credited to the Nizam's Government. It is possible that the inhabitants of the Raichor Doab may not regret their retransfer to the Nizam's rule in 1860; but there is no reason to assume that "90 per cent." of the inhabitants of the Berars "would elect to return to their ancient allegiance under the Nizam." The bulk of the people in those districts being Marathas or Hindus of other castes, who have thriven under our rule as they never throve before, it is by no means certain that they would care to see themselves handed over again to the Mohammedan rulers of Haidarabad. the uselessness of maintaining the Haidarabad Contingent in these days, that is a question which cannot be answered offhand, in view of the services rendered by it in 1857, and of possible conjunctures in the future. Nor is it wise to overrate the extent of our obligations to Sir Salar Jung for the help he gave us during the critical months of the Indian Mutiny. If Haidarabad had then turned against us, our difficulties would of course have somewhat increased. But the real danger to our rule was not in Southern India, and a revolt in Haidarabad would have simplified, even if it had delayed the ultimate issues of that great struggle for the maintenance of British rule.
